General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 19th June; from Allahabad and Madras to the 17th June; and from Calcutta to the 16th June.

SIXTY minute guns were fired at all the forts and stations in India on the day of the funeral of the late Emperor of Germany.

No date has yet been fixed for the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla. The fact is that most of the measures under preparation are heavy ones, which, like the Railway Bill, have got to be sent to the India Office before introduction.

THE new Railway Bill, which is a most comprehensive measure extending to all India, was sent home for the Secretary of State's consideration by last week's mail.

A FAREWELL ball will be given by the residents of Simla to Lord and Lady Dufferin prior to their Excellencies' departure for Europe.

LORD AND LADY REAY and H.H. the Duke of Connaught are at Poona.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned the salary of the Chief Commissioner of Burma being raised to Rs. 6,400 a month—equal to that of a Member of Council; but there is no present prospect certainly of Burma becoming a Lieutenant-Governorship.

MR. J. R. REID, Chief Secretary to the N.W.P. Government, will take over charge from Mr. Woodburn, who takes furlough for six months.

COLONEL CLEMENTI, the Judge Advocate-General, will probably not return to India at the expiration of his leave. In that case Colonel Hughes-Hallett, who is officiating for him, will be made permanent in the appointment, and Major Saunderson will replace Colonel Hughes-Hallett.

THE memorial picture of Sir Charles Macgregor will be unveiled at the United Service Institution rooms at Simla by the Commander-in-Chief shortly.

MOVEMENTS are on foot in Bombay with a view to establishing memorials in that city to perpetuate the memory of the late Sir Frank Souter.

THE Army Mobilisation Committee met on June 14th at Simla, and sat for a considerable time considering questions of army supply and transport.

[ARRANGEMENTS for cold weather manœuvres to take in the regiments marching in relief are now being made. Probably some cavalry manœuvres will take place at Delhi, this involving little or no expense, as five Native cavalry regiments can be intercepted there on the march.

It is intended at the end of the month to withdraw Major Keith's guns and the Derbyshires from Gnatong to Darjeeling, unless the Tibetans muster in great force meanwhile. Two light mountain guns will be sent up to Gnatong, and the 32nd Pioneers trained to work them. The Pioneers will continue to hold Gnatong, the wing of the 13th Native Infantry being stationed at Rhenok Bazaar, with a detachment at Rongli Chu.

As barrack accommodation is not available at Jellapahar, the two companies of the Derbyshire Regiment, on withdrawal from Sikkim, will occupy huts at Ghoom, four miles below Darjeeling. Arrangements will be made for sending the Derbyshire and the wing of the 13th Bombay Infantry instantly to Gnatong should reinforcements be required. Colonel Graham and staff will remain in Sikkim.

MR. T. J. C. PLOWDEN, Resident in Kashmir, has been selected for promotion to the Commissionership of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, vacant through the death of Mr. Leslie Saunders.

MR. H. H. RISLEY officiates as Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling, vice Mr. G. K. Lyon, deceased.

COLONEL C. H. T. MARSHALL, Private Secretary to his Highness the Nizam, has applied for two months' leave from August next.

THE Government of the Nizam have now addressed a series of questions to Abdul Huq on the subject of the large sum of money which he received in connection with the floating in London of the Hyderabad State Railway Company.

AN extraordinary conspiracy to gain duplicates of all telegrams passing between the Resident at Hyderabad and the Nizam's Government in connection with the Deccan mining scandal has been discovered at Secunderabad. One of Abdul Huq's relatives is amongst those implicated, and the object appears to have been to keep the Sirdar acquainted with all that was transpiring in the case.

LIEUTENANT VISCOUNT CLANDEBOYE has joined the personal staff of his Excellency the Viceroy as extra Aide-de-Camp, vice Captain Blackwood, who rejoins his regiment.

FOR the last two months the Thibetans have kept confined at Phari the two messengers whom the Phodong Lama of Sikkim sent there to make overtures. These men have now been released; and it is said the reason for this is that prisoners taken by our troops at the Gnatong fight have carried back favourable accounts of their treatment at our hands.

A DESPATCH has been received by the Government of India from the Secretary of State approving of the abolition of the bazaar system for British regiments in India, which has been already carried out. The despatch also contained directions for changing the lock hospital regulations, and a revision of the existing rules has accordingly been undertaken. The Government of India in reply will make further representations on the latter subject.

At a meeting of the Church Mission Society at Simla it was stated that Christian proselytism amongst Natives was advancing for all India at the rate of nearly 5 per. cent in excess of the growth of the population.

A PICNIC was given at Simla on June 16th by the Deputy Commissioner, at which Lord and Lady Dufferin and about fifty guests were present, to see the new Vice-regal Palace on Observatory Hill lighted up with the electric light. The lighting proved completely successful, and as the building is now almost finished it is expected the Viceroy will be able to move into it by the beginning of next month.

It is improbable that any military expedition will be undertaken to Chittagong hill tracts for the purpose of avenging Lieut. Stewart's death. Other means will be used to coerce the hill tribes.

THE Government of India have telegraphed descriptions of the murderers of Mr. Dalgleish to Pekin, Teheran, and Russia, and have also written to Yarkand and Kashgar on the subject. Rewards of Rs. 5,000 for the capture of Dad Mahomed, the actual murderer, and Rs. 3,000 for his principal accomplice, the Punjabi Fakir Baksh, have been offered.

THE Political Agent at Ladakh reports the news of the whereabouts of Dad Mahomed, Mr. Dalgleish's murderer.

The Chinese Government will give him up if caught in Yarkand territory.

OUT of the Rangoon Jubilee Fund of nearly Rs. 1,00,000 it has been decided to remit Rs. 10,000 to the Imperial Institute.

A MEETING has been held at Nagpur, at which protests were recorded against the proposal to transfer the Central Provinces to the Bombay Presidency.

THE Government of India has decided that profits derived by a person from the preparation of indigo, whether it was grown by him or not, are exempt from income-tax.

THE opium revenue in Bengal in June was worse than the estimate by Rs. 1,36,100, the actual return being Rs. 48,13,400. There was, however, an improvement in Bombay of Rs. 2,23,400.

THE heat in Calcutta has been quite abnormal. There have been several deaths from heat apoplexy, while over twenty-five Europeans have been conveyed to the various hospitals suffering from the excessive heat.

THE subject of sanitation in India, both in rural and urban areas, has been for some time past under the consideration of the Government of India, and an important resolution on the question is likely to be shortly issued from the Home Department.

NOTES.

NEITHER by wire nor post do we get any news of particular importance from India this week. The latest telegrams from Sikkim show that matters there are at present uneventful. Gnatong is said to be constantly threatened with a night attack, but the fortified camp is believed to be impregnable against the Thibetan levies. Colonel Graham, however, has deemed it expedient for the present to remain at Gnatong, so as to be prepared for any emergency.

DIRTY work in connection with the Hyderabad (Deccan) scandal appears to have been going on in India as well as in London. A conspiracy has been discovered in Secunderabad to procure telegrams passing through the local telegraph office from the Residency and the Nizam's Government. Amongst the persons implicated was a connection of Abdul Huq's, the object of the conspiracy being, of course, to keep that astute gentleman well informed of all passing events concerning the inquiry.

THE latest idea of Mr. Huq is to "noble" the press, according to reports which have reached the Deccan Times. The following appears in that journal:—"The career of Abdul Huq has shown—and with some show of reason—an inordinate contempt of all ability except his own, and an utter scepticism of all honesty without exception. With unparalleled unanimity the whole press of India, Native and European, denounced his conduct in every strain of thought. But they are now, it appears, to go back upon their words. Abdul Huq, in the day of his power, boasted that he could command any paper in India. He is now trying the experiment. He has engaged the services of Mr. Gray, of the Bombay Bar, a gentleman of some journalistic experience, to make the tour of all the newspaper offices, who by persuasion or worse will soon be vying with each other in extolling the virtues of Abdul Huq. The credulity of masters of deception is sometimes phenomenal. It is certainly not easy to understand how a man who has led everybody by the nose with whom latterly he came in contact should himself be susceptible of such gullibility.

"I FIND amongst the India Office Councillors," writes an influential Indian official now at home, "a wholly changed feeling towards the so-called Uncovenanted Services and a nearly unanimous desire to deal with them in a most liberal spirit. I fully believe that something will be done very soon, unless objections be raised in India, to protect pensioners from loss by the fall in the rupee." There is, the Allahabad paper suspects, no lack of sympathy on that side either; but the difficulty of giving a practical proof of it has kept the Government sympathy within bounds, as it has proved too strong in the end for the Secretary of State, who has been obliged, when it came to the point, to meet Mr. King with direct opposition.

ONE would hardly think that a gallant dragoon would come off second best in a fistic encounter with his Native cook, but it would seem that Major Cooke, of the 6th Dragoon Guards, has had that melancholy experience. He attempted to turn the servant out of his verandah for being drunk, whereupon the domestic turned round, called him a soor, tripped him up, and struck him with his clenched fist. Major Cooke, with a Christian forbearance, which is not always characteristic of a British officer under such conditions, charged the bawarchi with assault and hurt before the Cantonment Magistrate at Mhow. The magistrate "did not consider the offence a serious one," as there was "no premeditation," and sentenced the accused to a fine of ten rupees, or three days' imprisonment. This is encouraging in showing how Western ideas of "ordinary assault" are making way in India, but it will hardly strengthen the hands of ladies who may try to keep their Native servants in some sort of discipline and sobriety.

WHAT is the meaning of the following, culled from the Indian Daily News?—"It is said that there has been a good deal of talk about the way in which valuable presents have been made by, or taken from, Native princes and chiefs by visitors and others in this country. This has been a growing evil since the time of the visit of the Duke of Edinburgh. There were many complaints then of the presents 'accepted' without any equivalent return, which is always an understood condition in this country. The practice was further carried out afterwards on the visit of the Prince of Wales. People complained to us that they had given valuable presents on the usual understanding; but they had received in return nothing but a knife, a book, or a photograph of no intrinsic value. This has been felt as a grievance, and it has been a growing one, as since the visit of the Prince the Indian trip has become the popular one with our aristocracy and others. It is said that in some cases the practice has become so scandalous that it will probably be brought to the notice of Parliament."

A STEP has been taken which is likely to have an important beneficial effect upon the work of the National Association for supplying female medical aid to women. The Government of India have intimated that on the distinct understanding that the employees of the Association are in no respect Government servants, there will be no objection to the Surgeon-General advising the Association as to the selection of its employees; and further the Government agree to issue instructions to all supervising medical authorities to inspect the work done for the Association in dispensaries, hospitals, and medical schools, and to report on its character and efficiency. These reports may go either to the Provincial Government, for the information of the managing committee, or to the committee itself. The Government thus, while in no way interfering with the entire independence and freedom of action of the Association, will give it a helping hand in what is certainly a most legitimate and welcome manner.

THE honourable gentlemen who instruct the House of Commons from the Radical benches on all Indian matters would not have of late done their vigilance credit if they failed to notice two very instructive appointments in the Punjab Gazette. We do no discredit to any of Sir J. B. Lyall's predecessors if we decline to believe that either of these appointments would have been made by any of them, even although both Sir Robert Egerton and Sir Charles Aitchison have had the credit of being, perhaps in unequal degrees, friends of Natives of India. Muhammad Hyat Khan's appointment as a Divisional Judge and that of Gurdial Sing as officiating Deputy Commissioner of Muzaffargarh are unique in many respects. The first-named gentleman is an uncovenanted member of the Punjab Commission and the second is a member of the Native Civil Service. For some time past it has been a matter of rather painful notoriety that Native members of the Punjab Commission have been passed over when in their turn they should have been promoted to posts of better pay and greater responsibility. While acknowledging the justice of their complaint, we must lay the blame in the matter at the door of those who were responsible for the original appointments. Whether the services of Hyat Khan do demand recognition in the form in which they were recognised is a question which it is too late to discuss; nor is it profitable to inquire whether the Native Civil Service was constituted for men who belong to the Sirdar class without much of any other recommendation to help them. But it was unfair to both these gentlemen to be passed over for promotion by a Government which avowedly followed the too safe principle which overrides all other recommendations in favour of seniority. Our Native censors were therefore perfectly justified in their remark that if men like Hyat Khan and Gurdial Sing deserved to be where they were it was unfair to supersede them when by the rule of seniority they were entitled to promotion. We congratulate Sir J. B. Lyall and his adviser, Mr. C. L. Tupper, for doing justice to two members of the Native service who hitherto laboured under a serious grievance.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

A portrait of the late Sir Charles Macgregor was unveiled at Simla on the 2nd inst. by the Commander-in-Chief. A guard of honour of the 5th Goorkhas and the band of the Simla Volunteers were drawn up at the main entrance of the town-hall. The Viceroy, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and most of the Simla residents were present. General Roberts, in opening the proceedings, said that he had known Sir Charles Macgregor for a lifetime, having first made his acquaintance in 1858. Sir Charles was then a particularly shy, reserved man; but it was noticed that he became quite animated when any fighting was to be done. The General then sketched the outlines of his friend's services, and concluded by observing that those who had known the deceased were aware that under a somewhat brusque demeanour he concealed a tender heart and a genial, kindly spirit. As a soldier Sir Charles had been distinguished by an upright, honest mind, conscientious thoroughness of work, the mastery of his profession, and an absorbing devotion to duty.

The Viceroy, in the course of his speech, said:—

"We are assembled to do honour to the memory of a brave and noble soldier. I am glad to have this opportunity, as head of the Government of India, to testify by my presence to the high estimation in which we held Sir Charles Macgregor. He was also my personal friend, and on that account, too, it is most grateful to my feelings to be here.

"Not among the many distinguished captains I have known could I mention one who came nearer in martial bearing, love of his profession, devotion to duty, and knowledge of the art of war to the ideal of a powerful, chivalrous warrior. (Cheers.) Shortly before his death I had the satisfaction of conferring on him the command of the Punjab frontier force, and as we gaze on this admirable likeness I can safely ask, Where would you find a better type of the gallant Lord Warden of the Marches?"

On the 4th inst., at Poonah, the Duke of Connaught presented the Khedive's star to the 2nd Battalion of the Durham Light Infantry. In the course of his speech the Duke eulogized the services of the regiment in Egypt, Persia, and other countries, and congratulated the soldiers on their clean, smart appearance and soldier-like bearing. The colonel, replying, said that the regiment greatly appreciated the honour conferred by the Duke's presentation of the medals.

On the 3rd inst. the Burma medals were presented at Bangalore to the 25th Madras Infantry. General Rowlands complimented the regiment on its good service in Burnah.

A very bad case of military blundering, attended with disastrous consequences, has recently attracted public comment in the Press. When the 2nd Battalion of the Queen's (Royal West Surrey Regiment) returned from Burma in the last cold season a detachment was absent on service with the Southern Shan column. The party suffered great privations on the return journey from Mandalay to Umballa. When the detachment left Mandalay it was seventy-five strong, but on the way to Calcutta it was reduced by deaths from enteric fever and cholera, and through leaving sick men at various places, to sixty-two. The remainder of the detachment was then ordered from Calcutta in the terrible June heat to Umballa by train, though there are distinct orders against soldiers travelling during this season except in case of unavoidable necessity, and then only on the certificate of a medical officer.

The sixty-two men marched from the fort to the station at 4 P.M. The unfortunate soldiers arrived at the station thoroughly exhausted, many of them being in a fainting condition. The heat on the journey to Allahabad was very great, and on their arrival one poor fellow was taken out dead, while nine more were sent to the hospital too ill to travel any further. The remaining fifty-two men were sent on to Umballa, and shortly after reaching there another man was attacked by sunstroke, while several others had to be taken into the hospital suffering from the effects of the journey. Thus out of seventy-five men who started from Mandalay but fifty-two arrived in Umballa, many of these being in a most critical condition.

The leading military newspaper strongly urges the immediate development of the Volunteer force and its augmentation from 12,000 to 30,000. The Volunteer movement, which is more essential in India than in any portion of the Empire, receives but languid encouragement from the Government and the military authorities.

A serious case of murder by a soldier is reported from Dinapore. Early on Friday morning Gunner Kelly, of the R battery (3rd brigade) of Royal Artillery, while on sentry duty, left his post and went to the quarters of Sergeant-Major Burton, of the same battery. He found the sergeant-major asleep on his cot, with his child near him, and deliberately shot him. The bullet shattered Burton's face, but he managed to reach the guard-room and obtain assistance. A dhoolie was sent for, but just as the sergeant-major was about to enter it Kelly came up suddenly and shot him through the back, killing him on the spot. Kelly then gave himself up, expressing satisfaction at the deed. The motive for the crime was revenge, the sergeant-major having caused Kelly to be removed from the position of orderly-room clerk.

The following is the result of the allotment of the loan of 300 lakhs:—The aggregate amount of tenders is Rs.7,70,35,300; the minimum rate of accepted tenders was 99'11, tenders at that rate receiving 60'45 per cent. The total amount of accepted tenders was Rs.3,00,00,000. The total amount to be received by the Government is Rs.2,99,36,508, and the average rate at which the loan was issued was 99'79. Government securities have advanced considerably in price since the issue of the loan.

Rukhmabai's case has been finally concluded by a compromise. The husband, in consideration of 2,000 rupees in satisfaction of his costs, undertakes not to execute the decree for the restitution of conjugal rights, or in any way to assert his claim against her person or estate. The plaintiff is quite satisfied with having established the principle that a Hindoo is entitled by law to enforce a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights. A strong public opinion exists in India that no time should be lost in mitigating the harsh consequences of this decision by a legislative enactment.

Over 95 millions of persons travelled by railway in India last year, 89 millions being third-class passengers.

Colonel Sir Oliver St. John succeeds Sir Charles Bernard as Resident at Mysore; but he will remain at Baroda until October, when the Gaekwar is to return from Europe.

The promotion of the Advocate-General of Bengal to be a Knight Commander of the Indian Empire is held to have been well earned, and it meets with universal approval.

BURMA.

On the 3rd inst. a band of dacoits, 300 strong, from the Tharawaddy district in Lower Burma, cut the railway and telegraph lines at a point some 200 miles to the south of Prome. Early information of the assembling of the dacoits was telegraphed to Rangoon, and a train with a body of military police was despatched to Zeegon station, which was menaced by the marauders. The train with the police arrived as the dacoits were actually engaged in tearing up the line. The rails had been removed, and the pilot engine preceding the train ran off the line. The police attacked and drove off the dacoits. The railway lines to Prome and Tounghoo have since this attack been patrolled by armed police, and pilot engines precede the mail trains. The stations near the scene of the attack are occupied by military police. This attack on a railway line has caused considerable alarm, as the dacoits had not previously interfered with the railway. Grave apprehensions are entertained that other dacoit bands may resort to similar tactics.

The attack on the railway was marked by some unusual features. The Tharrawaddy districts, from which the dacoits came, has been British territory since 1853. It is, generally speaking, open country, affording few refuges for dacoits. For some time past it has been in a disturbed condition, and a very heavy punitive police-tax has been imposed on all the inhabitants of the district. This tax is so heavy that it is stated on good authority to amount practically to a confiscation of the property of the poorer classes. The local newspapers report that in consequence of the people of Tharrawaddy being made desperate by recent taxation an attack was made on the line. The dacoits who attacked the line are reported to have declared that they only wanted to injure Government property and to attack public officials. The Rangoon newspapers allege that the police have been guilty of extortion and oppression in Tharrawaddy in connection with the punitive tax. It was in the Tharrawaddy district that a village was recently dacoited by a party of policemen, who murdered some villagers and burnt the houses.

The Chief Commissioner, in reply to the memorial from the people of Tavoy, has decided that the action of the Commissioner of Tenasserim in levying a punitive police-tax was illegal. He states that as notice has now been given of the imposition of the tax the collection will be proceeded with.

The official bulletin for Upper Burma reports that a body of Dacoits from the Shan State of Momeit has raided into the Myadong district and attacked Tsgain, on the bank of the Irrawaddy. The civil police fled, and the dacoits looted the village, carrying off to the hills 3,000 rupees' worth of property. Several skirmishes between the military police and the dacoits are reported, in all of which the dacoits were worsted.

After an official inquiry, Mr. Hildebrand, C.I.E., Superintendent of the Shan States, has decided that the Burman who shot Mr. Powell was justified in doing so, and has acquitted him of all blame.

GOVERNMENT WALER REMOUNTS.

(Pioneer.)

The announcement that the Government of India will only pay Rs. 650 as the average price for each Waler remount, during the year 1888-89, is likely to cause dismay among horse-dealers in Australia. The price paid during the last three or four years has been £50 sterling, which represents at the present moment about Rs. 750 in Indian currency. Dealers will thus get only £43 7s. per horse instead of £50: a reduction of £5 13s. on prices previously paid. The dealers who left India in the spring must by this time have bought a number of horses in Australia in the belief that £50 would be paid as usual next autumn. They are not likely to accept the reduction with a good grace, as they will argue, and with some show of justice, that they ought to have had notice of the change before leaving the country some months ago. They may point out, too, that Rs. 650 at the current rate of exchange is really less than the price paid at the time of Col. Ben. William's visit to Australia, a visit which resulted in £50 sterling being fixed as the Government figure. Horse-dealers in Australia hold together so much that we should not be at all surprised if they made an organised attempt to boycott the Indian Government. Next cold weather they may ship the horses they have already bought, but that is about all they will do, unless they send inferior horses. The price to be paid for Cape horses has also been fixed at Rs. 650, and if dealers in South Africa are alive to their own interests they will seize on the opportunity offered of horsing the British cavalry and artillery in India.

THE BURMANS.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

Were it not for the proofs to the contrary afforded by the ruins of Pagan, and of other capitals of Burma in centuries long gone by, one would often be inclined to think that the Burmese had quite lately emerged from the nomadic stage of existence. We know, however, beyond doubt, that they have been cultivators of the soil for many centuries, and that if they ever passed through the pastoral stage in their progress, from the savage hunting stage to the civilised condition of agriculturists, it was so long ago that there is now no trace of their ever having been pastoral nomads. But though they have been cultivators of the soil for so long, they seem to have acquired none of that tenacious clinging to the particular spot where their fathers and grandfathers lived and died, which almost all other races have. With Highlanders in almost all parts of the world this love for their ancestral home often amounts to a passion; but even among the agricultural peasantry inhabiting low lands, the feeling of love for the spot where they were born and bred is often very strong. It is a peculiarity of the Burmese that they have never taken root in this way. Their villages are generally built in the most flimsy way; are often little longer lived than the camp of a nomadic tribe; and even their capitals have frequently been changed on merely whimsical grounds. The average Burman seems to have very little strong affection for his village home. The Burmese kings had to adopt stringent measures to prevent the wholesale emigration of their subjects to British territory; and now the people of Upper Burma are coming down in such shoals as to overcrowd the mail trains from Prome, merely because there is some cholera about. Land, especially in the neighbourhood of Rangoon, and along the lines of railway, is very largely going out of Burmese hands and the crowds of Burmese passengers one may see in every train show how much they move about. In every country the towns attract an increasing percentage of the rural population, and the capital especially always tends to grow very rapidly; but in Burma this is even more marked than elsewhere; and the attraction of Rangoon seems to be more strongly felt by the Burmese than by the other races of the country. The Carens have some of the same migratory instincts. Formerly they were almost nomadic in their habits, but now they are fairly settling down, and building more substantial villages. Few of them seem to come to Rangoon to settle; but apparently all the Burmese now coming from Upper Burma to escape the cholera, are flocking to Rangoon. What they are all to do in order to earn a living here it is not easy to see. It is probably due to this unsettled feeling that most Burmese villages are such bare and unattractive places. If there were more of the home feeling, the villages would consist of better houses, and would nestle in groves of trees. Life in such villages might be very comfortable and attractive; and with really substantial homes and increased wealth and comfort in the villages, the people probably would be more ready to defend their village homes from the dacoits than they are now.

THE AFGHAN REFUGEES IN INDIA.

(Indian Daily News.)

There are other objections urged against the presence of the numerous Afghan refugees in India, besides the fact that they cost the State much money which it can very ill-afford. Many of them are located in the Punjab, and a complaint is raised that they are rapidly destroying all game in their neighbourhood. They know and care nothing about a close season, but shoot and snare game all the year round; and Punjabi sportsmen are roused to wrath and the use of strong language. Sirdar Ahmed Ali Khan and General Parvez Khan, with a large following, are settled at Karnal; Yakub Khan lives at Dehra and Mussoorie, and now the Afghan colony is to be largely swelled by the arrival of Ayoub Khan and a great body of adherents, at Rawalpindi and Murree. Besides, there are any number of others scattered here and there. Some searching questions ought to be asked in Parliament about the numbers of these Afghan refugees who are being provided for in India at the cost of the Indian taxpayers, and the total amount of which the impoverished public treasury is annually mulcted in consequence. Added to the subsidy of twelve lakhs of rupees a year sent to Cabul, the calculation would show a pretty considerable total. Mr. Bradlaugh has distinguished himself by his determined and persistent onslaught on the English pension list, and succeeded in getting a Committee appointed by the House of Commons to carry out an investigation with a view to the abolition of permanent pensions. He would have even a stronger case if he would take up the injustice to the Indian tax-payers of forcing them to pay a very heavy sum annually for the maintenance in luxury of a large number of foreigners, whose adoption by the Indian Government is a gross injustice to the country. We would say—give them an asylum by all means if they require it. But let them support themselves. Or, if it is urged that the Government takes charge of them and provides for them in the interest of its friend and ally the Ameer, let the Ameer pay for the accommodation, at any rate so far as the diversion of his twelve lakhs subsidy to that purpose would suffice to pay for them. The Ameer would very possibly prefer to keep his subsidy, and let his relatives and countrymen be thrown on their own resources. He showed himself, when Ayoub Khan made his recent effort, quite able to meet any designs they might cherish for upsetting his authority. Oh, they may say in England, but Ayoub would go over to Russia. Well let him go if the Russians are rich enough and foolish enough to provide for him. Has not Dhuleep Singh gone over to Russia, and become "the implacable foe of England"? And is anyone a penny the worse—excepting himself! If it is considered by English statesmen necessary to detain Ayoub and the hundreds of other refugees from Afghanistan in India, and to keep them in luxurious idleness at the public cost, England should at least share the cost with India.

THE ARYAN SOLAR MYTH.

Paget, M.P. was a liar, and a fluent liar therewith,

He talked of the heat of India as the Aryan solar myth.

Come on a four months' visit, to study the East in November,

But I made him sign an agreement vowing to stay till September.

March came in with the koi, Paget was cool and gay,

Called me a bloated Brahmin, talked of my princely pay.

March went out with the roses, "Where is your heat," says he,

"Coming," says I to Paget. "Skittles," says Paget, M.P.

April came in with the punkahs, coolies, and prickly heat.

Paget was dear to mosquitoes, sand-flies found him a treat.

He grew speckled and lumpy, hammered, I grieve to say

Aryan brothers who fanned him, in a most illiberal way.

May came in with a dust storm, Paget went down with the sun,

All the delights of the season tickled him one by one,

Imprimis ten days' liver, due to his drinking beer,

Then an attack of fever, slight—but he called it severe.

Dysentery touched him in June, after the Chota Barsat,

Lowered his portly system, made him long to depart.

He didn't call me a Brahmin, or bloated, or overpaid,

But seemed to think it a wonder that anyone ever stayed.

July was a trifle unhealthy, and Paget was ill with fear,

Called it the cholera morbus, hinted that life was dear.

Babbled of Eastern exile, talked of his home with tears.

But I hadn't seen my children for close upon seven years.

The heat was 120 once in the court at noon—

I mentioned that Paget was portly—Paget fell down in a swoon.

This was the end of the business, for Paget the perjured fled,
With a practical working knowledge of solar myths in his head.

GENERAL WHEELER IN THE MUTINY.

An interesting letter, addressed by General Sir Hugh Wheeler, from Cawnpore, June 4, 1857, to Sir Henry Lawrence at Lucknow, and which has never before been published, has been placed at the disposal of the Statesman. In this document General Wheeler complains of the wants of European soldiers and foreshadows the dire events which followed some five weeks later. Two days after the despatch of this letter he was besieged by Nana Sahib, who was joined by the Native troops of the garrison. "The whole Christian population," he then wrote to Mr. Gubbins, "is with us in a temporary intrenchment, and our defence has been noble and wonderful, our loss heavy and cruel. We want aid, aid, aid! Regards to Lawrence" (who probably had either not received or not replied to the document which we here reproduce):—

"CAWNPORE, June 4, 1857.

"My dear Lawrence,—I have kept you well informed by E.T. of all going on here. You will see by a letter from Ponsonby, which I enclose, the state of Benares. In fact, the evil progresses and the want of Europeans is greatly felt. Trust in any of the Native Troops is now out of the question. The 2nd Cavalry, which to my knowledge has been ill-disposed for a long time, is now in an almost acknowledged state of mutiny, and ready to start at any moment for Delhi.

"At one time that Regiment stood alone, although disaffection, to some extent, existed in all, and it had intended to proceed by the south of the cantonment to the Treasury and make a dash at it, but it is now said that the 1st N.I. is sworn to join, and they now speak of going off this night or the next, doing all the mischief in their power first—this to include an attack on our position. I fear them not, although our means are very small.—Under 200 men of all arms and 69 old soldiers, railway folk and merchants, six 9-ps., and one 2½pr., exclusive of your two guns. I have heard, but know not how correctly, that a small party of the Madras Fusiliers are to be in to-day.

"Of course we can offer protection to nothing out of our intrenchments.

"It is to be feared that the other two Native Infantry Corps may be carried off by the excitement to join the others. We will do our best.

"The Governor-General has appointed Major-General Read Provincial Commander-in-Chief, until the arrival of Lieut. Gen. Sir Pat. Grant, who has been sent for to Madras. The former is my senior, and I can have no objection to his nomination. The latter is long, very long my junior; and although, if it please God to grant me life, I will continue in the due performance of my duty to the best of my ability until tranquillity is restored; I shall then take the course which I feel due to my professional character and soldierly feelings.

"General Grant is a friend of my own—no doubt a good soldier, but he has not the experience nor the trials that I have had. His connection with Lord Gough has carried him over me on every occasion; but as long as we were not brought into contact I neither complained nor envied him. I cannot serve under him, and it is a poor return for above fifty-two years of zealous, and I may proudly add, successful service, to be thus superseded.

"My name with the Native Army has alone preserved tranquillity here up to the present time, and the difficulties which I have had, and still have, to contend with can only be known by myself. Your late lamented Military Secretary witnessed some of them.

"I have been living in a tent in this dreadful weather until yesterday; I have performed subaltern's duty in going the rounds at midnight, because I felt that I gave confidence, that I saw all right with my own eyes, and that doing my own duty I had a right to exact it from others.

"I write with a crushed spirit, for I had no right to expect this treatment. But, my dear friend, whilst I wear the cloth I will endeavour not to disgrace it.

"My service has been extraordinary—with the exception of my two years in Europe, when unemployed. I have had but three months' general leave and was never absent on medical certificate. I did forty-one years' regimental duty, for I had no friends, and I have had nothing from Government that it could withhold from me and the whole has been crowned by this act—placing me under the orders of a Regimental Lieutenant-Colonel, my junior by more than fifteen years, and my junior as a General Officer.—Believe me, very sincerely yours, H. M. WHEELER.

"P.S.—We got in a lakh of rupees in the usual way, with Guard of 1 H. and 12 S. from the Treasury, three or four miles distant. I have had thanks ad nauseam, but there it stops."

On the July 4, it will be remembered, Sir Henry Lawrence died from the effects of wounds resulting from the bursting of a shell in his room at the Lucknow Residency, two days previously, while General Wheeler and his handful of Christian residents in the trenches were betrayed and butchered eleven days later.

THE DUTY ON INDIAN SILVER PLATE.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The triangular correspondence on the duty on Indian silver plate which has passed between the Indian Government, the Secretary of State and the Treasury, will strengthen the impression that it is exceedingly difficult for India to get strict justice in the discussion of financial questions with the home authorities. Some such idea is insinuated in the concluding letter of the Government of India, wherein it is suggested that the present system is maintained solely in the interests of the Goldsmith's Company. The suggestion might have been made a little stronger, since it was entirely in obedience to a trade agitation that Mr. Gladstone's Government a few years ago abandoned the intention which had been announced in the Budget to abolish the duty on silver plate. That incident alone has made it very difficult for the Government to resist the imputation that in maintaining the rebate which gives the English silver plate manufacturer an advantage of eighteenpence an ounce over the Indian they are yielding to trade influences at home. The unfairness of the preference which the existing arrangement gives to English manufactures will be realised if it is asked whether this or any similar treatment would be perpetuated if the aggrieved interest were in one of the Australian colonies instead of in England. It is a small matter, but even in small matters a Government is bound to be fair and consistent, and there is neither fairness nor consistency in a fiscal arrangement which puts the Indian silver worker at a substantial disadvantage in competing with the English manufacturer, and which checks the industrial and artistic development which it is the declared object of the representatives of the Queen's Government in this country to foster.

BENGAL.

THE Calcutta Municipal Bill will require to be considered by the Viceroy, both as an administrative measure and in its legal bearing. Some ten days to a fortnight are, therefore, likely to elapse before his Excellency's intentions regarding it can be made known.

In a letter to the Bengal Government, says the Englishman, the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce again strongly supports the recommendation that the Howrah Bridge surplus of two lakhs should be contributed towards the construction of the proposed Central Road. The Chamber thinks that the Government of India must be "under a misapprehension of the facts of the case, otherwise it is inconceivable that they should have advanced a claim to the bridge surplus on the part of the East Indian Railway." For fifteen years the public has paid tolls on the bridge, while the railway has paid absolutely nothing, merely acting as the collecting agency for the terminal charges on goods and passengers. Under these circumstances what possible claim has the railway to this surplus? As for the proposed road, it will not only directly benefit the commercial public, which has been the largest contributor to the bridge funds, but it will vastly improve the Native city. Even the railway will largely share in the advantages of the new road, which would immediately become one of the main lines of communication in the city.

THE untimely death of Mr. G. K. Lyon, Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling, has rendered it necessary to provide for the charge of that district by appointing Mr. H. H. Risley, now on special duty with the Government of Bengal, to officiate as Deputy Commissioner until the return of Mr. Paul who is on deputation as political officer with the Sikkim Field Force. This involves the temporary suspension of the scheme for reorganising the Secretariat and extending the powers of Commissioners in Bengal, on which Mr. Risley was engaged. It is understood, however, that he has already proposed some important changes in the constitution and working of the Secretariat, which are now under the consideration of the Bengal Government, and may possibly be introduced experimentally, pending Mr. Risley's resumption of the inquiry. Meanwhile, the troubles on the Tibet frontier, the growing difficulties of transport during the rains, and the indefinite possibilities of Sikkim and Nepal politics, render it essential to have a strong officer in charge of Darjeeling during the next few months.

It is only a few years ago, observes the writer of Echoes of the Week in the Saturday Evening Journal, since the Government reintroduced the fashion of bestowing some ancient Native titles upon those Natives whom they delighted to honour. Such titles as Maharajah, Nawab, Rajah, Rajah Bahadoor, Khan Bahadoor, &c., have always been somewhat freely bestowed, but of late years we have got into a much more difficult class of titles, which, I fancy, may puzzle even those astute gentlemen who preside at the Heralds' College accurately to define. But what puzzles me most is, how am I to address a letter to a Native gentleman who rejoices in the title of Mahamahopadhyaya? Am I to put this long and unpronounceable name before his real name, or after it; or can it be abbreviated in any way like Esq., or Mr. or would he feel injured if I omitted it altogether? But though this title is bad enough, it is completely left in the shade by some of those bestowed upon certain distinguished Burmese, though I have not the least idea what these titles may mean. These Burmese gentlemen will for the remainder of their natural lives be entitled to call themselves Seith Kyet Thaye Zange Suwe Salwe Yu Min, or Thaye Jaungguo Daya Min, and I hope that they will feel duly gratified; but to my mind such titles chiefly offer a fine opportunity to any comic gentleman who may have to write topical songs for a burlesque in Burma, for there is a good sort of a ring for a chorus about both of them.

MADRAS.

MRS. BARTOLI, the widow of the late Mr. C. Bartoli, of the Madras Railway Company, has quite recovered from her wounds.

THE Brecks Memorial School at Ootacamund has now been converted into a Municipal School, and formally handed over to the Municipality. This is the outcome of the recent long correspondence on the subject between Government and the Director of Public Instruction.

MRS. CALDWELL, wife of the Right Rev. Dr. Caldwell, has issued an appeal to all the local Chaplains and Missionaries for money to assist her in the establishment of more girls' schools, and of a Female Training College for teachers, at Tuticorin. The appeal contains a history of her forty-four years' work in Tinnivelly in the cause of female education. The clergy will preach special sermons, and devote the offertories of a Sunday for the purpose.

THE Bangalore Spectator has it on good authority that the project of constructing a line of rail from Bangalore to Goontacul is now receiving attention. "The line," it says, "is to be on the broad gauge, like that of the Madras Railway, and the construction and working of the Goontacul branch will form a part of the Madras Railway system. The S. M. Railway projected a narrow aguge line to Hindpore to this station, which would have in a manner gone far to complete their system. This line, instead of joining at Bangalore, is recommended by the Consulting Engineer to join on at Tumkur, and if carried out on that plan will be of great service to the northern talukas of Bangalore District and eastern ones of Tumkur. On the other hand, the broad gauge line from Bangalore to Goontacul will complete and maintain direct unbroken communication from Bombay and the north, an item of much importance from a strategic point of view, and on account of which, we believe, the broad gauge line to Goontacul has the support of the military authorities. It may be added that the latter line passing through the fertile taluks of Chota, Bellapur, Davenhully, and Sidlaghatta—where sugarcane is largely grown and jaggery manufactured, and where food grains are abundantly produced—will create and develop a return of traffic which may not be despised."

AT Secunderabad on June 9th a shocking tragedy occurred in the lines of the 3rd Madras Cavalry. At about 8 o'clock a Mahomedan sepoy of only eighteen months service, who was confined in the guard-room, made his escape and managed to get possession of a carbine and ten rounds of ball ammunition. Thus provided he proceeded to the lines and shot dead Subadar Ali Khan of his regiment, against whom he is stated to have had a grudge. He then ran off, and, meeting some unoffending wayfarers, fired at but luckily missed them. A few paces further on he came across a naique of the regiment and shot him dead, and then he disappeared in the darkness and has not yet been caught, though several parties of mounted men have been scouring the country in search of him. He is believed to have taken refuge in Hyderabad city.

BOMBAY.

COLONEL J. G. LINDSAY, R.E., Agent and Chief Engineer of the Southern Mahratta Railway, has been appointed Honorary Colonel, Southern Mahratta Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps.

MR. RIBENTROP proceeds to Burma early next month to arrange some differences of opinion which have arisen between the local Government and the Bombay-Burma Trading Corporation regarding the forest contract.

INFORMATION was received in Bombay on Friday that Mr James Grant, the late agent for the Bank of Bombay at Kurrachee, who was undergoing a sentence of six months' imprisonment in connection with the deficit discovered in December last, died in jail there on June 14.

THE High Court re-opened on the 11th ult. after the summer vacation. Messrs. Justices Bayley, Scott and Jardine presided in the courts of the Original Side. The first court of the Appellate Side was closed owing to the absence of Sir Charles Sargent, Chief Justice. Messrs. Justices Birdwood and Parsons sat in the second court.

HIS Grace the Most Rev. Dr. Porter, Archbishop of Bombay, is at present seriously ill at Kirkee, whither he proceeded under medical advice.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain throughout Presidency proper. Harvesting late crops still continues in parts Hyderabad. Ploughing operations progressing in parts of Kaira, Surat, Khandesh, Sholapur, Satara, Bijapur. Sowing early crops in progress Poona, Belgaum, Dharwar, Kanara, Kathiawar, Baroda, Sind, Konkan; nearly complete in Kanara. Fodder scarce in parts of Broach, Tanna, and Rutnagherry.

AT the meeting of the Bombay Municipal Corporation on June 14th a long and rather animated debate took place upon the subject of the appointment of an architect to design and carry out the proposed new municipal offices. Mr. Geary moved that Mr. Stevens be appointed architect to design and carry out the buildings on the usual terms of 5 per cent. Major Selby moved an amendment to the effect that both Mr. Chisholm and Mr. Stevens be asked to prepare the necessary designs at a remuneration of Rs. 5,000 each, on the understanding that the architect, if either, whose design might finally be accepted would be employed to supervise the construction of the building on the usual professional terms. Mr. Kabraji moved an amendment, to the effect that Mr. Chisholm be appointed architect on the usual terms, and that he be requested to alter his original design to suit the altered circumstances of the locality. Mr. Charles, the Acting Municipal Commissioner, observed that the Corporation had by their last resolution, in which they asked Mr. Chisholm to alter the design of the proposed new buildings, entered into a sort of a contract to employ him to carry out the construction of the building. It was contended by several members that the Corporation had neither any moral or legal obligation imposed upon them, Mr. Chisholm being paid for the work which he had done in connection with the proposed new buildings. Several speakers made highly complimentary remarks about the skill and talents of Mr. Stevens as an architect and an engineer, who, they thought, should be entrusted with the work of carrying out the building. After considerable discussion, Mr. Geary's proposition to employ Mr. Stevens as architect for constructing the new buildings was carried by a large majority.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH AND PUNJAB.

THE Secretary of State in Council has decided that the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway shall be worked as a State Railway from the 1st of January, when the Government of India take it over from the Company.

THE latest report of cholera at Cashmere, dated Srinagar, 13th, states that the epidemic is decreasing. There were 126 new cases at Srinagar in the previous three days and twenty-eight during the previous twelve hours. There were 108 deaths in the same three days, all, except fourteen, in old cases.

From the return for the quarter ending the 31st March last, it appears that the total number of cattle killed during that period by tigers and cheetahs in the Madras Presidency amounted to 1,771. Of these, cows form the principal sufferers, no less than 677 having been destroyed, of which number, Malabar and South Canara are alone responsible for 499, having thus only 178 to be accounted for by the other 21 districts of the Presidency. Of bullocks 508 have been destroyed, 400 in the two afore-mentioned districts; of calves 164 perished, 81 in the above two districts; of buffaloes 111, of sheep 107, of goats 140, of horses or ponies, 36, of asses 10, of dogs 10, and of pigs 8. In the Tanjore, Kistna and Madras Town Districts, there have been no casualties; in Chingleput 1, in Trichinopoly 2, and in South Arcot 3. The average number of animals of all sorts killed in the whole Presidency, excluding the Malabar and South Canara Districts, was 32 per district.

BURMA.

OOPYINAYO, the Mandalay phoonghyi who arrived at Rangoon by the steamer Shahzada from Calcutta, and was arrested for importing a concealed revolver and a flask of powder, and in whose possession was found a peacock seal, which the accused stated he obtained from the Mengoon Prince at Pondicherry, has been sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment. The prisoner seemed astonished at the sentence. Numerous phoonghyis have petitioned in favour of a mitigation of the punishment.

A RANGOON telegram says that the shipping clerk of the Flotilla Company has been brought up for signing unstamped shipping orders. Mr. Moylan appeared for the accused, and pleaded guilty. The Public Prosecutor wished to call evidence to prove that the practice of issuing unstamped shipping orders was common. The Court inflicted a fine of Rs. 10. Several more prosecutions for breaches of the Stamp Act will probably be instituted, as the revenue has lost enormous sums—probably lakhs—by the remissness of the authorities in enforcing the Act.

THE DEATH OF MR. POWELL.—A Meiktila telegram to the Rangoon Times says that the circumstances connected with the death of Mr. Powell, of the Survey Department, are as follows:—He went to the village of Sanain to obtain a guide. He was unsuccessful apparently, and, having lost his temper, he struck some of the villagers. These turned out with guns and dahs, whereupon Mr. Powell ordered his escort to fire. Two villagers were shot dead, another wounded, and the ring-leader gave himself up, when Mr. Powell had him tied, and was about taking him to his camp when the wounded man, who had crept into his house, fired at Mr. Powell and shot him dead. Mr. Hildebrand, the Superintendent of the Shan States, also says Mr. Powell lost his temper, ordered his escort to fire, shot two young villagers dead, and wounded their father, an old man of sixty-four, who crept to his house, and from thence fired at Mr. Powell, and killed him. The correspondent who sent the news to the paper alluded to says he was informed by an eye-witness at the burial that Mr. Powell's body was mutilated, the eyes being gouged out: how this could have happened the correspondent fails to see, unless the deceased's escort bolted. The inquiry into the occurrence is still proceeding.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE PRINTING FIRM OF MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN AND CO.

The annual dinner of the printing firm of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. was held to-day at the Bull Hotel, in the picturesque little village of Wrotham. The day was, unfortunately, rather cloudy, and so the beautiful landscape view from the hill was somewhat obscured; but now and then the clouds lifted, and allowed the eyes to be gladdened with a glance at one of the most charming of Nature's panoramas in England. The "comps." and their colleagues had taken time by the forelock, and gone early, so that they might get through a number of field sports before the dinner hour.

The big event of the day was a 100 yards handicap, for which there were five heats, the winner of each to run in the final. The wet state of the road caused some of the "doubtful starters" to be scratched; but some good racing resulted. The result all through showed that the handicapper had done his work, if not wisely, too well. Messrs. Drake, Perry, and H. Brooks were handicapper, judge, and starter respectively. The following are the winners of the various heats:—Heat 1, J. Hay; heat 2, Geleit; heat 3, Bloomfield; heat 4, Biss; heat 5, Hurt; Final, Geleit.

A later train brought to the scene Mr. Johnston and his fellow partners, Messrs. Randall and Danby (Mr. Heathcote was on holiday tour) with their guests, Colonel Spalding, Major Fenwick, Captain O'Callaghan, Mr. Pattison, and Mr. Jones, junior, whose skill as an amateur photographer was severely put to the test in having to take a picture of the whole party in somewhat irregular formation, and under atmospheric difficulties. At the early but welcome repast which followed, when justice was fully done to an excellently cooked and well served dinner of solids and dainties, Mr. Johnston as senior partner of the firm, took the chair, the vice-Chairman being the popular "general of the comps," Mr. F. Pincott. After the toast of "The Queen," followed by the singing of the national anthem, the health of "The Firm" was given in a few happy sentences by Mr. H. Brooks, and the enthusiastic manner in which the toast was met showed the cordial feelings of respect and attachment held by all the workers towards their employers—a bond of good-will which the senior partner, in his reply, declared was fully reciprocated by himself and all the members of the firm. Mr. Johnston's own health was then given by Mr. Bloomfield amidst much cheering and the singing of the ancient classic melody, "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Mr. Johnston, who always makes an excellent chairman, made one of his excellent speeches, full of humour and point in reply. Mr. Walsh gave the health of "General" Pincott, which was drunk with great enthusiasm, and brought from the able commander of the "comps" one of his characteristic little speeches, in which, while accepting the honour paid to him, he told his friends and fellow-workers that the secret of his success as their manager was the maintenance of discipline and strict justice, which accounted for the goodwill and cordiality existing amongst them. The toast of "The Visitors," given by Mr. Wills, was ably responded to by Colonel Spalding, and the last but not least deserving toast, that of "The Stewards"—who certainly did their duty well—was proposed by Mr. Geleit, and responded to by Messrs. H. Brooks and B. Hogg. Interspersed with the speeches were some excellent songs—serious and comic—sung with excellent effect by Messrs. G. and H. Brooks, Ben Hogg, C. Baker, Cannon, Willis, and a duet by Messrs. Perry and Forbes. Time would not permit of encores, or there would have deservedly been many. Mr. A. E. Wilson, who ably presided at the piano, and gave a very clever sketch entitled "The Travelling Opera Company," which was vociferously applauded, followed it up by some capital imitations of "Popular music hall singers."

Altogether a very enjoyable day was spent—to make full the enjoyment of which nothing was wanting except, perhaps, a little more consideration and sympathy from—the weather.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 30.

GOLD IN CEYLON.

Mr. M. CAMERON asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether his attention had been called to an article in the Times of Ceylon of May 31, reporting the discovery of gold in the district of Sarangalla by Constable Arachchi; whether it was true that the Ceylon Government purchased nuggets from the constable for the museum in Colombo; and whether the Secretary of State would advise an inspection of the district by a competent gold-mining expert at the Government expense with a view to ascertaining whether the gold area is sufficiently rich to warrant its being worked in the interests of the colony.

Sir J. GORST: The Secretary of State has seen a reference in the Ceylon newspapers to the subject, but there has hardly yet been time for any report by the colonial Government to be received in this country. Such a report will doubtless be made in due course, and when it arrives the Secretary of State will consider the suggestion made in the last paragraph of the hon. member's question.

UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS OF INDIA.

Mr. KING asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether it was true, as stated in India, that the Secretary of State recently sent out a despatch to the Viceroy in Council suggesting that pensions of uncovenanted servants should be paid at a fixed rate of exchange, or anything to that effect; what, if so, was the reply of the Indian Government; and whether he would lay a copy of the Secretary of State's despatch and the reply thereto upon the table.

Sir J. GORST: The statement made in India as described in the question is inaccurate. The correspondence which has passed between the Secretary of State in Council and the Government of India on the subject cannot, in the opinion of the Secretary of State, be laid upon the table with advantage to the public service.

THE CANTONMENT ACTS IN INDIA.

Mr. J. STUART asked the Under-Secretary of State for India what steps Her Majesty's Government and the Government of India had taken for carrying into effect the resolution of this House of June 5th with respect to the Contagious Diseases Act and the Cantonment Acts in India.

Sir J. GORST: A despatch has been sent to the Government of India bringing under their notice the resolution of June 5th. There has not yet been time for a reply to this despatch to be received by the Secretary of State.

MR. TAYLER OF PATNA.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether, for the convenience of hon. members, the Government would lay upon the table a reprint of the minutes of Sir Barnes Peacock and Sir Henry Ricketts with reference to a recommendation of Sir Frederick Halliday, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, that Mr. Tayler, ex-Commissioner of Patna, should not be granted the public commission of inquiry for which he had asked, but that the records of a certain case formerly tried by Mr. Tayler during the Mutiny should be submitted to the Judges of the Sudder Court of Bengal for their opinion and report without the presence or further examination of Mr. Tayler; whether the Government would now be willing to submit Mr. Tayler's case to Sir Barnes Peacock for his decision; and whether as a fact Mr. Tayler was ever informed that he was at liberty to demand a commission as recommended by Sir Henry Ricketts.

Sir J. GORST: The minutes referred to, which are inaccurately described in the question, have already been laid before Parliament in No. 308 of 1879. The Secretary of State sees no necessity for reprinting them. The action of the Secretary of State in refusing to reopen the case of Mr. William Tayler has been approved by a large Parliamentary majority, and the Government cannot now reverse that policy. Mr. William Tayler was never entitled to ask for a commission. In 1859 he was offered, as I have before stated, an inquiry by the Sudder Court into his judicial conduct at Patna, which he declined.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE, arising out of the answer of the Under-Secretary, asked whether it was not the fact that Sir H. Ricketts did recommend that Mr. Tayler should be allowed a commission, and said that the commission, if asked for, would be granted.

Sir J. GORST: I must refer the hon. member to the minutes, which will speak for themselves.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

A CIRCLE Pay Office and a Commissariat Audit Office have been established at Rangoon for a period of six months, and they will be subordinate to the Controller of Military Accounts, Madras, their constitution being determined by the Accountant-General, Military Department. From the date of the formation of these offices at Rangoon the Field Pay Office, Upper Burma, will be abolished, and in consequence of the formation of the latter the office of the Examiner, Commissariat Accounts, Madras, will be reduced by twelve clerks, who may be employed in the new office. The Circle Pay Office will be charged with the duty of paying the army serving in Upper and Lower Burma from the 1st May, and its accounts will be rendered to the Pay Examiner, Madras. The Commissariat Audit Office will deal with the Commissariat Accounts of Upper and Lower Burma for the period commencing 1st April, 1888, and render monthly compilation returns to the Controller of Military Accounts, Madras.

The 3rd Madras Light Infantry, commanded by Colonel Dicken, paraded on the 8th in the Doveton College compound, when Burma medals were presented to the European officers of the regiment by Mrs. Smart, the wife of the Brigadier-General commanding the Eastern District, to the Native officers by the European officers, and by both these to the non-commissioned officers and privates. General Smart, after the presentation, made a speech, in which he said he had very much pleasure in presenting Colonel Dicken and Captain Teversham with the Star of the Distinguished Service Order and also the Burma medal. The regiment had exhibited in the arduous duties which fell to its lot, in which exposure, hardships, and sickness were constant, a most soldierly and cheerful spirit, thus upholding the excellent character always borne by the regiment. The Commander-in-Chief has officially expressed in high terms his opinion of the work done by this regiment.

The Madras Army List, dated the 1st inst., shows sixteen vacancies existing in the appointment of Wing Commanders in Madras Infantry regiments, and also that two Wing Commanders are to be promoted to fill the places of retiring Com-mandants; so that altogether there are eighteen vacancies, while only seven officers are at present qualified for them, the rest not having passed the required examination.

THE following transfers of officers of the Military Works Department have been ordered:—Major F. T. N. Spratt, from the Meerut Command to the Sialkot Division; Lieut. A. J. H. Swiney, from the Sirhind and Lahore Command to Headquarters; and Lieut. J. W. Pringle, from the Presidency and Oudh Command to the Rawalpindi Command.

THE GRIEVANCES OF BRIGADE SURGEONS-MAJOR.

It is about a year ago that we (Pioneer) gave an account of the grievances which the Brigade-Surgeons complain of, pointing out how hard it was on these officers that they should receive no extra pay or allowances for the responsible duties they are called on to perform. Briefly, the Brigade-Surgeons, who are specially selected for promotion, and occupy an intermediate position between the executive and administrative grades, receive only the same pay in India as Surgeons-Major, though at home and in the Colonies they receive pay at much higher rates. Indeed, at the present rate of exchange, the difference in the pay of Brigade-Surgeons at home and in India amounts to only about £6 per month, while in some of the Colonies, where a Colonial allowance is given, the actual amount received is more than the Indian rate of pay reduced to 1s. 4d. per rupee. Early in 1887 all the Brigade-Surgeons in India, acting under instructions from Lord Cross, communicated to them by several influential M.P.'s, who had taken up their case, submitted memorials, through the Government of India, to the Secretary of State, in which they prayed that their position, as regards pay and liability to routine duties, might be amended. These memorials were submitted about fifteen months ago, and only now has the reply been received declining to reopen the case, the Secretary of State having intimated to the Government of India that he is unable to reconsider the existing regulations. This would appear to throw the onus of the refusal on the Secretary of State; but a letter recently received from a prominent Member of Parliament throws quite a different light on the transaction. In this letter it is stated Sir John Gorst had informed him (the member of Parliament) that he would be glad to do all he could to assist the just claims of these officers, but he was not sanguine as to the result, "as the Government of India state they are unable to support the prayer of the memorialists, and no arguments seem to be brought forward which have not been considered already." The result of the appeal has been, as just stated, a refusal to reopen the question. As the case now stands, then, the refusal to reconsider the case of these officers would seem to rest on the Government of India and not on the Secretary of State. This is remarkable, because it is generally understood that when General Wilson was a member of the Government of India he sent home a despatch to the Secretary of State advocating in the strongest official language the claims of these officers to consideration, and recommended, on the part of the Government of India, the grant of a special rate of pay to Brigade-Surgeons. On that occasion the Secretary of State refused to accede to the request of the Government of India, but now the position is reversed, and while the Secretary of State admits the justice of the claims the Government of India are "unable to support" the very recommendation they made some years ago. Surely there must be something wrong here, and we would ask, on behalf of these officers, that General Wilson's despatch be unearthed from its pigeonhole and reconsidered. As matters now stand both the Government of India and the Secretary of State have at different times admitted the justice of these officers' claims, and as there are very few of them—only about fifteen in the whole of India, and a very small staff allowance would satisfy them and mark the importance of their duties and position—we trust the Governor-General in Council will see justice done, and remove a reasonable complaint. Even with the rupee at 1s. 4d. the good old maxim of fiat justitia should not be lost sight of.

DR. ADDISON'S Ambulance Class at Simla has filled to overflowing, more than the sixty applicants, to which it was restricted, having presented themselves.

RECENTLY a Sepoy of the 13th Madras Infantry was tempted to follow a Burman into the jungle close to Pinyinana. On reaching the jungle he suddenly found himself in the midst of a gang of dacoits. They first thrashed him well, then ordered him to show them how to load and fire some Sniders in their possession. After this they marched him off to another camp of theirs at Sinthawa, where there is a large police force; borrowed five rupees from him, and then released them, ordering him to purchase some plantains for them. The Sepoy made for the police as fast as he could, led them back to the dacoits' camp, but only to find it empty and the dacoits fled.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

OUR ENGLISH SHORES.*

The season is rapidly approaching when paterfamilias has to set to work to inquire diligently as to the locale to be visited during the autumn recess: places are legion, and each and everyone of them claims unrivalled advantages—from a “native” standpoint every village on our coast is the “Queen of watering places,” so that to make a discreet and judicious choice is a task beset with perplexity and trouble. In these circumstances tourists in search of health will find Mr. Miller's vade mecum a material help. The author does not aim at an exhaustive analysis of the rival pretensions of the various towns enumerated in his volume—he contents himself with just a slight outline of their peculiarities. One is good for bathing; another possesses an unrivalled promenade; a third poses for scenery; while a fourth hopes to charm the “quiet family” by retirement and freedom from bustle and noise. Again, in some cases apartments are cheap, while in others a long purse is an essentiality. The information thus imparted, undoubtedly but slight and scanty, is sufficient to enable a reader to form a pretty fair judgment as to the spot which is likely to suit his taste, while his opinion will perhaps be influenced by the sketches which are interspersed throughout the work. We are glad to have an opportunity of drawing attention to a publication which undoubtedly meets a want, and in a concise and handy form affords a considerable amount of chit chat anent “Our English Shores.”

A MARTYR TO PRIDE.†

Of all the vices which ensnare mankind in the meshes of misery and ruin, none perhaps is more fatal than that of pride. It is not that it is more deadly in its nature than other failings on the part of poor fallen humanity, but that the scope of its influence is more extended. Pride is not confined to birth, to wealth, to name, to reputation; it ramifies in every direction, showing itself in the most out-of-the-way places, and at most unexpected seasons; old, fantastic, incomprehensible, it cannot be gauged—there is no common standard whereby to measure its depth or ascertain its intensity. For a novelist, therefore, it is a source of incalculable wealth; and, in the hands of an experienced writer such as Mr. Stanhope, it is sure to be turned to good account: but the vice in this instance, albeit followed with such incalculably and abnormally sad results, was not in its nature particularly blamable. It is natural, perhaps—indeed, to a measure it is desirable—that a man who succeeds in life, who becomes wealthy, powerful, honoured, respectable, courted, should take a pride in the profession which placed him on this pinnacle of greatness. To clamber up the ladder of life and have no regard for the means which enables one to tread the paths of eminence is far from a desirable state of things: the hero of the novelette, however wrecked the ship of happiness, by too heavy a press of canvas, had he sailed gently along the ocean of life content to live to others rather than himself, satisfied to devote to his family some of the energies which he expended on his own advancement and glorification, then Mr. Stanhope's romance could not have seen the light of day.

The book is well written, and it presents some new and novel situations. Some, too, of the incidents are dramatic in the highest degree, yet withal they are somewhat strained here and there. There is an air at times of unreality—a struggling for sensational effect none too natural, and not altogether in keeping with the experiences of daily life. Still there is some pleasant reading, and the important lesson underlies the whole fabric of the fiction that matrimony is a tender and delicate plant, needing careful, gentle nurture; roughness, rudeness, harshness are, as it were, a searching blast which nips the blossom of happiness in the bud of its earliest bloom. What this may mean is the secret of the “Martyr to Pride,” a work sensational without indelicacy, harrowing without impropriety, and exciting without raising a blush—in a word, the antithesis of the modern school of fiction.

NAVAL SUPREMACY: WHERE IS IT?‡

“Naval Supremacy” is, and rightly so, the burning question of the day. Public opinion has begun to take alarm—and perhaps none too soon—at the importance of setting at rest once and for ever all doubts as to the power of Great Britain to hold her own in the event of any outbreak amongst the nations of Europe, and to defy any possible combination on the part of peoples who bear no love to old England, and would gladly see her humiliated and brought low as suppliants for mercy. The pamphlet under review discusses the matter calmly, and with evident care in the preparation of statistics; but the raison d'être of its appearance is the hazardous suggestion that the Suez Canal shares should be sold and the proceeds devoted to the increase and improvement of the navy. The proposal does not err on the side of timidity. It is bold even to rashness, since with all power over this highway to the East what may—perhaps it might almost be written will—happen to our commerce, is it quite prudent to rely upon the desire of gain as a factor which will force the French to respect our interests as traders through this highway of nations? Surely, if England parts with her shares, she would, as regards the mercantile marine, lay herself open to the same charge of “trusting to chance,” which is now hurled against her with reference to the Royal Navy.

The matter merits consideration. At the first blush there seems much—nay, everything—to condemn the suggestion; but so far as we are concerned we gladly draw attention to a brochure which aims at attaining what every patriotic Englishman must desire to witness, the “Naval Supremacy” of his native land.

BRITISH INDIAN AND COLONIAL MILITARY SPORTS.*

It would be difficult, perhaps indeed impossible, to surpass the excellence which characterises these coloured representations of military sports. Artistic, accurate, replete with life and vigour, there is no room for improvement, and old and young alike may find pleasure in scanning pictures which appeal to the instincts of “all sorts and conditions of men.”

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—“Greville Memoirs,” Vol. VII. (Longmans & Co.); “English Worthies—George Canning,” by Frank H. Hill; “Marlborough,” by G. Saintsbury (Longmans & Co.); “Saint Mungo's Bells,” by A. G. Cullant (David Bryce & Son); “Orient and Occident,” by Major-General R. C. W. Beverley Mitford (W. H. Allen & Co.).

It is some months ago, says the Pioneer, that an announcement appeared in our columns to the effect that Lieut.-Colonel C. F. Thomas, of the Military Accounts Department, was to be sent on special duty to Burma in connection with the military expenditure in that Province which, to say the least of it, was not found to be decreasing so rapidly as could be wished. Not but what the actual rate of outgoings had been considerably lowered, even before the reductions effected in the garrison by the spring relief; but after the disorganisation of a campaign arrear claims keep coming in, which tend to obscure the position, and throw difficulties in the way of accurate estimating. So Colonel Thomas went, taking with him a staff of clerks, and arriving at Rangoon, stayed there some time, and drafted a lengthy report. Having completed this, he started for Upper Burma, but in the train between Rangoon and Prome his despatch-box was stolen or lost and in it a considerable sum of money and—the report. This was of course a most serious loss, Colonel Thomas having to re-write the whole as best he could from memory. It is understood, however, that the general result of the inquiry has been to show that a reasonably efficient check has been kept over expenditure, and that the Field Pay Office has done its work well. The head of expenditure most liable to the charge of extravagance seems to have been the Telegraph. With a great number of scattered posts, each commander of which was free to use his own discretion about telegraphing, this was only likely to be the case: and as a matter of fact the figures shown under this head in the Quartermaster-General's Office at Rangoon are said to be appalling. The Government of India followed this up by sending a telegraph officer to Rangoon to check the original messages, and the result went to prove that the wire had been used regardless of expense. Many officers had made “urgent” messages the rule and “deferred” the exception, quadrupling the cost to no purpose whatsoever. And although it is true that the money thus spent goes back to Government in another department, it is not the less expedient for the Military Department to keep a check upon such outgoing. A great proportion, too, of messages seem to have been needlessly diffuse. Officers at the Staff College are taught to write brief and lucid orders; perhaps it would be useful if some instructions were super-added in the art of telegraphic composition. Or a shorter way would be to make the sender answerable for superfluous words.

THE HOME OF CHOLERA.

UNDER the above somewhat sensational heading the Calcutta Englishman of June 9 has an article describing the disgraceful state in which the City of Palaces now is, owing to the neglect of sanitation, but expressing satisfaction that public attention has been roused in England to a source of danger which might disturb the general health of Europe. "For years past," says our Bengal contemporary, "we have been clamouring about the excessive death-rate of India, and if Simla has been indifferent to the tragic tale an echo has at last been roused beyond the seas. It may be that the present awakening in England is due more to fear than to genuine sympathy, but it is not the less likely to produce the desired result. When English fears and prejudices are fairly stirred and there is danger of English ships engaged in the Indian trade being boycotted, it is not likely that the Government of India will long remain inactive and apathetic. It is no exaggeration to say that the present state of things would amount to a serious reflection on the worst governed of civilised nations."

We fear that our contemporary is too sanguine regarding the interest which he imagines is being taken in England in the work of sanitation in India. Mr. Justice Cunningham certainly delivered a lecture on the subject, but those who listened to him cannot be correctly described as representing "the public mind of England;" and although several newspapers of wide circulation and influence commented upon the lecture, the whole matter was forgotten in a few hours after the type was dry. It is very difficult to arouse the attention of the British public concerning Indian matters of any kind. The feeling here is that India should take care of itself, or that the Secretary of State should take care of it. Unless, indeed, there be some question which has taken hold of certain fanatical minds—and the more unsavoury the question the better, as the sympathies of the fanatical amongst the weaker sex will be then enlisted—then if the agitation is certain to do possible harm to India, the probabilities are that Exeter Hall will holla loudly, and it is possible carry the howl successfully to the Houses of Parliament. But unless the agitation be warranted as mischievous it is not likely to find favour with the philosophers of purity, who would reform India morally, and leave its material condition untouched, quite forgetful of the fact that cleanliness is next to godliness in both.

What is the condition of Calcutta to-day as depicted by the leading journal in that city? Many of our readers may recollect what it was immediately after the vigorous rule of Sir Stuart Hogg—a city in which sanitary laws were being enforced to the great benefit of the whole community, a city that was being swept and made clean, and from which the pestilence of cholera had almost been banished from the Native as well as from the European quarters of the town. The picture presented to-day is in sorry contrast to that of the past, but here it is:—

"Of late years Calcutta has been visited by several severe outbreaks of cholera, but fortunately they have not spread throughout the area of the city; and in this respect the inhabitants are almost precisely in the position of the helpless-citizens who watch with anxious gaze the course of a great and spreading conflagration, hoping and praying that the wind will carry off the flames in another direction. As matters stand, it is not too much to say that the fate of the city is at the mercy of any accident that may start an epidemic on its fell career. Nor is it only the Native parts of the city that would be swept by the disease; encircled as the European portion is by a ring of pollution, and made over to the management of a Hindu Municipality, the danger is one that strikes equally at all races and classes, at rich and poor."

The cause of this extraordinary retrogression is to be found in the fact that the control of city affairs is in the hands of a Municipality in which the Babú house proprietors of Calcutta are all powerful. These men are utterly unfitted for the task which under the attractive designation of "Local self-government" has been committed to them. Lord Ripon may earn the thanks of the Natives for permitting them again to wallow in the old miry ways, but the European community of Calcutta has righteous cause for indignation. As our contemporary justly says, "It is monstrous to suppose that the classes who have made the city wealthy and prosperous are to be continuously debarred from all share in the management of its affairs, and that a Hindu Municipality packed in the sordid interests of the landlords is to be allowed to ruin the public health, to undo all that has already been done in the way of improvement, and, it may be, to bring disaster upon our relations with the trading nations of Europe." The last expressed fear may be a far off contingency, but the others are sufficient in themselves to warrant immediate action. But, as we have said, there is little use in looking for help from England. The faddists and the sentimentalists will have it that local self-government is as fitted for every Indian community as it is for the most enlightened of European communities, and no appeal founded upon experience and facts derived from India itself is likely to be of any avail. Municipal Government under the system now prevailing may be proved to be a lamentable failure in Calcutta, but the remedy must come from the Government of India, which is responsible for the failure. It is quite certain that matters cannot be allowed to remain as they now are.

LUDHIANA CHRISTIAN GIRLS' SCHOOL.

WE learn by the last mail from India that one of the most successful Christian scholastic institutions in the Punjab is being closed for want of funds. Miss West's Christian Girls' School (Ludhiana), which was doing excellent work among Native Christians of the Punjab, and which was maintained with funds supplied by some charitable Zenana Society in England, has, we regret to learn, ceased to exist, and the seventy or eighty girls who were hitherto associated there for purposes of education have been "disbanded," many of whom, we are afraid, will never see the inside of a school again. Among the many useful missionary institutions which now flourish in the Punjab, we do not hesitate to give the Christian Girls' School a very high place. From the inspector of schools, who officially inspected the Christian Girls' School once a year to the casual visitor who was drawn to it from a strong sympathy with the cause of Native education, all spoke of it in terms of warm praise.

The girls of this well-known school were instructed in English, Urdu, and Hindu up to a practical standard well suited for the work which they were likely to do in after-life; and the higher classes were prepared, if our memory does not fail us, to take part in the Zenana work in connection with the local missionary establishments. We believe Miss West had successfully "passed" some of her pupils for the Lahore Medical School, in view to their employment in furthering the objects of Lady Dufferin's grand scheme for medical relief for the women of India. Even more commendable than the purely literary training of these girls were the instructions they received in the management of a household; they had to look to their household duties as not the least important part of their studies in the school. Habits of cleanliness, of application, of punctuality, so much missed in Native households (especially among the poorer classes), were instilled into them with great care and persistency; and the results of this training, which the well-wishers of the Christian Girls' School must have noticed with sincere gratification, were much appreciated by the Native public at large. We cannot but express our deep regret that such a successful enterprise as the maintenance of the Christian Girls' School of Ludhiana should have been cut short in its useful career for want of pecuniary support. We have not the slightest hesitation in saying that in the course of the next fifteen or twenty years such a school as this would have been self-supporting. Not only was excellent work done there for the social and moral improvement of the girls who attended the school, but the finance of the institution was managed on rules of the strictest economy; and we cannot but express our wonder that the society at home which furnished funds for the school did not before closing it for good, appeal to the public for the support which it found it could not afford. Our information from India on the subject is so general and so limited that we are not able to say more than we have done; but it strikes us that there has been some precipitation in the matter, and that if the circumstances of the school and the excellent work it was doing were properly laid before the public at home and India that funds would be forthcoming to save what we cannot but regard as a public calamity—the closing of the Christian Girls' School of Ludhiana.

THE average time occupied in the transmission of messages from Calcutta to the United Kingdom by the Indo-European Telegraph Company during the last fortnight in May was 57 minutes.

MR. G. HENNESSY, Muttrapur, writes to the Englishman.—As there has been a good deal of discussion about the length of a tiger, it might interest some of your sporting readers to learn that a tigress measuring 9 ft. 10 in. from nose to tip of tail, measured between the ears and along the back, was killed by me on the 24th inst. in the Malda district. The tigress was measured four times in the presence of Messrs. E. B. Harris, O. Warner, and H. Clogstoun, and the skin, which is now before me, measures 11 ft. 6 in.

TEMPERANCE IN THE ARMY.

BY ONE IN THE ARMY.

THE question of temperance among soldiers and how to promote habits of moderation in our thirsty troops, has excited considerable attention during the past ten years. Societies, such as the Good Templars and the Abstinence Association, founded by Gelson Gregson, have been started and worked with continuing success. Still I fancy several important aids in this good work have been ignored, or have not made themselves apparent to the apostles of tea and mineral waters. The first question to be considered is "Why do soldiers become abstainers?" The true answer may not be palatable to army chaplains or zealous Wesleyan ministers, still you cannot go "agin" facts. Out of a hundred men who go on "the tack"—thus leaving off drink is called by the inmates of the barrack room—five may do so from really conscientious motives, regarding intoxication as a crime; ten more have their health in view, abstaining through fear of sickness; the remaining seventy-five only forsake the canteen for the coffee-shop for the purpose of saving money. These latter would infinitely prefer drinking to non-drinking, were it not a matter of rupees, annas and pies. Say a man has been in trouble, got fined for drunkenness, and is generally down on his luck; promptly he avows his intention of joining the ranks of the reclaimed, purchases a temperance ticket, and for the next two or three months scrapes and saves like a veritable Harpagon. The fine is paid off, he most probably has become the owner of a watch and other useful articles, and has by him a nice little sum of ready money. Alas! the old Adam asserts himself, he has the means of amply gratifying the longing for drink which he has controlled of late; so he repairs to the canteen, indulges in a regular orgie among his friends (for the news quickly spreads that Jack, Bill, or Tom has "broken the tack"), and the next day the watch is sold to some prudent teetotaler, and he continues frequenting the bar until lack of funds compels him to stop, when he will in a benumbed fashion declare his resolution of taking another ticket. There are plenty of men in every regiment who, without belonging to either of the Societies I have mentioned, are yet strict abstainers, or if they drink at all do so in moderation; to such men all honour is due. The Good Templars, in my humble opinion, affect too much mystery, and see harm when it exists not, to become very popular with Tommy Atkins, who has a keen perception of humbug. A bill sent to a Good Templar by the Secretary of his Lodge for the sum of one rupee amused the writer not a little by the way in which it concluded. After stating how the debt was incurred, and requesting a prompt settlement of the same, came the words (it was on a printed form), "yours in Faith, Hope, and Charity." How sublimely touching! Faith in the man who owed the rupee being perfectly solvent; Hope that he would pay up at his earliest opportunity; and Charity in the event of his sticking fast to the "dib," and neglecting to forward it to the Secretary. Dancing and theatrical entertainments are forbidden to soldiers who become Good Templars—how such a decree promotes the cause of Temperance, I confess I cannot comprehend. The system introduced by the present Commander-in-Chief is doing more towards inducing the soldier to leave off the degrading vice of habitual drunkenness than all the Good Templar Lodges between Cape Comorin and Peshawur. In place of a dingy room, its only furniture a few deal tables and forms, with no amusement to beguile away an hour, and serving merely as a temple of Bacchus, we can now perceive a clean, well-lit up, cheerful apartment, probably boasting of a stage at one end, and piano on which accompaniments are played for those who choose to sing or to shake their feet in a step dance. The longer hours (especially of an evening) that a canteen is opened, the less drunkenness there is in a regiment; nor is the reason of this hard to discover. No private soldier can afford to establish himself as a fixture in the canteen and drink persistently for three hours or more; his pay cannot support such a strain upon it. Moreover, when restricted to a certain period for indulgence in malt liquor, he strives with mistaken zeal to consume as much as possible during that period; when conscious that he will have no difficulty in procuring drink during the evening, he has a game of cricket or a stroll, only entering the Canteen later on to quench his thirst, not to get intoxicated. The selling of a pint of beer in the coffee-shop to men having suppers there is an excellent move in the right direction, although I believe it has excited the wrath of the Rev. Gelson Gregson. That divine, entirely forgetting the hearty co-operation of the military authorities with his Temperance movement, nor remembering the free passage home granted to him by the Indian authorities, has chosen to sulk, like Achilles in his tent, and withhold all aid to the scheme of an amalgamated Reading Room, Canteen, and Coffee shop. Not content with this, he has inveighed in the columns of "On Guard," the organ of the Soldiers Abstinence Association, against soldiers being allowed the services of cooks, barbers, boot-wallahs, and even bhistics, on the ground of their encouraging idleness among the rank and file. If the reverend gentleman were deprived of the use of his domestics, would he not ventilate his grievances in glowing language? If it is hard for those accustomed to ease to have to rough it, surely it is even worse for those inured to hardships, the being denied a few paltry indulgences, for which be it remembered they pay out of their private means. Ne sutor ultra crepidem. By all means let Temperance reformers strive to redeem the British soldiers from their besetting sin, to wit drunkenness; and before commencing a crusade against the mode of Indian barrack life, let them remember a proverb concerning stones and edifices of glass.

GOORKHA GALLANTRY.

In the attack against the party commanded by Major Battye, in which that officer and his friend Captain Urmston lost their lives, it appears that the Goorkhas behaved with great bravery, especially a Native officer, Subahdar Kishnibir, who has already been decorated three times with the Order of Merit for Conspicuous Gallantry. The Times of Monday last publishes a telegram, giving full details of the attack. It appears that on approaching Chitabat heavy firing was opened on the advanced guard, which was accompanied by Major Battye and Captain Urmston. On its being reported that a Havildar with the rear-guard had been wounded, Major Battye and Captain Urmston joined the rear and placed the wounded man in a dandy. The fire now became very heavy, and Major Battye ordered the Goorkhas to retire on a village occupied by the advanced guard. The jungle here was very thick, and while retiring Captain Urmston was severely wounded with an axe in the left shoulder. Shortly after this Subahdar Kishnibir heard the bugler boy calling out for assistance, and exclaiming that the Major was attacked. On rushing up the Subahdar saw Major Battye, severely wounded, defending himself. The Subahdar dashed in and drove his sword with both hands through the chest of the assailant, who dropped dead. Seizing Major Battye's arm, Kishnibir led him off, but after a few steps Major Battye fell.

Large numbers of tribesmen now surrounded their small party, cutting off retreat in every direction, save down a precipitous khud. A dash was made upon Captain Urmston. The subahdar shouted, "Fight bravely, my children; do not desert your English officers! If you must die, let some of these dogs die with you!" The Sepoys fought staunchly together until Major Battye and Captain Urmston were both dead. The subahdar, who had exhausted his rifle ammunition, discharged his remaining revolver cartridges, and shouted, "Both the officers are dead; now you may save your own lives!" He then, with the two surviving sepoy, jumped down the khud, and eventually managed to rejoin the main force. He was badly wounded. A bullet had passed through his thigh, and he had a gash on the head and a disabled arm. Nevertheless, he insisted on marching back with the force to recover the bodies of Major Battye and Captain Urmston. The Sepoys accordingly fought their way back, and eventually carried off their dead, and succeeded in returning late in the evening to Oghi Fort.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO WRECK A TRAIN.

What is believed to be a deliberate attempt to wreck and loot a goods train is reported from Bir on the Jabalpur line of the G.I.P. Railway. Unfortunately, the attempt was partially successful, for a passenger train was thrown off the rails, causing considerable delay to traffic, though resulting in little injury either to rolling stock or passengers. It appears that a rail had been torn up, and the train which left Bombay at 7.30 A.M. May 31, was the first to travel over that portion of the line. It consisted of nineteen vehicles, inclusive of fourteen third-class carriages. The train left Khundwa punctually for Jabalpur. It arrived there at 3.19, leaving again at 3.24. Shortly before mileage 373 was reached speed was slackened, preparatory to stopping at Bir station. Here the engine suddenly left the rails, and dragged the fourteen third-class carriages after it, before it could be brought to a standstill. A rail on the left side of the down line had been removed, and the train was disabled. Information was speedily conveyed to Bir and transmitted to Khundwa. Breakdown gangs were speedily on the spot, and by ten o'clock in the morning the train was able to proceed on its journey. Goods traffic was, as a consequence, seriously delayed, the line here being single; but through traffic was resumed before the Jabalpur mail passed the station on Friday afternoon. None of the vehicles were injured. It is stated that other attempts have been made to derail the trains on the G.I.P. Railway, and the theory the officials are compelled to adopt is that the intention is to loot trains carrying grain, which at this time of the year are especially numerous. In this particular instance it is assumed that the intention had been to derail a grain-laden train, but that the would-be wreckers, miscalculating or improperly knowing the time at which the goods trains pass, had plucked up the rail in the night to find to their disappointment that the train they brought to a standstill contained a sufficient number of people to oppose their operations had any attempt to loot been then essayed. Strict inquiries are being made by the Railway Police, but as yet, no arrests have been made. It is a matter for gratulation that the passengers escaped with only a slight shaking from what might have proved a most disastrous affair.

HIGH COURTS IN INDIA.—The Secretary of State for India, Viscount Cross, has introduced a Bill for constituting and also for extending the jurisdiction of High Courts of Judicature in India. The Bill empowers the Queen to establish by letters patent a High Court of Judicature for any portion of the territories within Her Majesty's dominions in India not included within the limits of the local jurisdiction of another High Court. A new High Court would consist of a Chief Justice and such number of other Judges as the Queen may think fit to appoint, with the same qualifications as are required in persons to be appointed to the High Courts of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay. Authority is also given to the Queen to enlarge and extend, by Order in Council, the limits of the territorial or personal jurisdiction of any High Court of Judicature for the time being established in India, so as to include therein any part of the territories within Her Majesty's dominions in India not included within the limits of the jurisdiction of another High Court. Power is also conferred on such local authority as the Governor-General of India in Council may at any time nominate for the purpose to direct at what places within the local jurisdiction a High Court or any of its Judges shall sit, for the purpose of hearing such cases as, being within the Court's jurisdiction, the local authority may direct. It is expressly declared that nothing in the Bill is to interfere with the powers of the Governor-General of India in Council at meetings for the purpose of making laws and regulations.

A REMEDY FOR HYDROPHOBIA.—Mr. Edwin Phillips, Anglo-Burman headmaster of the vernacular school at Allamyo, has discovered a rare remedy for hydrophobia and snake-bite. It consists of a root "which gives instant relief from both sufferings." The discoverer, we are told, is "ready to produce testimonies from those who have been cured by the use of the root."

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1888.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF
INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is especially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 16, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 26th June; from Allahabad and Madras to the 24th June; and from Calcutta to the 23rd June.

On the 17th June the Commander-in-Chief of India sent the following telegram to Count Seckendorff, Chamberlain to her Imperial Majesty the Empress Victoria, at Potsdam:—"The Army in India wish to express their heartfelt sorrow at the terrible affliction which her Imperial Majesty has sustained and of the great loss to Germany and Europe by the Emperor Frederick's death." The answer, dated from Friedenskirche, was from the Empress herself, and consisted of the simple words, "Grateful thanks."

On June 16th Lord Reay and the chief Civil and Military officers at Poona paid visits of condolence at the residence of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught.

A MEMORIAL service was held in Poona on the 18th June at the hour of the late Emperor's funeral. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Lord and Lady Reay were present.

SALUTES were fired at all the naval and military stations throughout India on June 20th, in honour of the accession of the Queen-Empress.

THE farewell ball by the United Service Club, Simla, to the Viceroy and Lady Dufferin has been fixed for September 25th.

IT is expected that the new Viceregal palace at Simla will be occupied by his Excellency next month.

LORD CONNEMARA has been suffering from the effects of exposure to the sun.

INSPECTOR BOYD and three Native officers of the Calcutta Police have been committed for trial on a charge of torturing a Native boy to extort from him a confession of theft.

OWING to the continued fall in exchange the foreign telegraphic rates have been increased—European messages by three annas per word and other continents in proportion.

COLONEL W. H. WILSON has been appointed Commissioner of Police in Bombay in succession to the late Sir Frank Souter.

IT has been decided to perpetuate the memory of the late Sir Frank Souter, C.S.I., C.I.E. The fund already exceeds Rs. 13,000.

EFFORTS are being made in Madras to raise Pacheppa's College to a first grade college, in order that the Hindus may obtain higher education free from mission influence.

THE Teheran Shahabul Railway, the first line in Persia, was opened on the 21st of June. Its entire length is but 15 kilometres.

MR. LARPENT, against whom serious charges were preferred in reference to his conduct as registrar of the Punjab University, has been dismissed the service.

In the N.W.P. High Court the marriage of Mr. William Jackson Hindlaugh, of the E.I. Railway, and Miss Ellen Prim, his deceased wife's sister, has been declared null and void.

BORING machinery for the Madras diamond fields has been received in India.

THE master of the British barque Ganges, which founded at the mouth of the Davy river, has been found guilty of negligence, and his certificate has been suspended for a year.

THE South Indian Railway is to be extended from Tinnevely, via Shencottah and Quilon, to Trivandrum.

THE Gilchrist Scholarship in India is to be continued.

THE charges against Nawab Ahmed Ali Khan and Morris of tampering with telegrams at Hyderabad have been withdrawn for want of evidence.

THE work of reviewing the opinions of the Local Governments on the Public Service Commission's Report, preparatory to the Government of India's despatch being submitted to the Secretary of State, is now proceeding at Simla.

THE sower of the 3rd Madras Cavalry who ran amuck at Secunderabad, killing two of the officers of his regiment, has surrendered.

H.H. THE AMEER has removed his camp lately to a place called Alliabab, near the tomb of the Emperor Baber, in Cabul, owing to ill-health, his old complaint, the gout, having returned.

MR. PLOWDEN, it is stated, is not likely to leave Cashmere for some little time to come, a difficulty apparently having arisen regarding the filling of the appointment temporarily.

THE heat in Calcutta this month (June) has reached the highest point registered by the Meteorological Department for that town.

ATTENTION has lately been directed to the necessity for a new Factory Act for India.

MR. BIGG WITHER is now in Simla on the subject of the petroleum deposits in Kelat. These, being in the open plains, are more accessible than those at Khotan.

THOUGH Sir Charles Bernard resigned the Civil Service some weeks ago, no formal intimation of the fact has as yet reached the authorities in this country. Thus, to them, he is still officiating Resident at Mysore, though practically no longer under their orders.

THE Government of India are now considering whether the policy of giving loans for what are known as local works may not be further developed. To begin with, entire control of these loans and advances will probably be entrusted to the Local Governments, who will be allowed to open a loan account with the Imperial Government, paying the latter four per cent. on all advances credited to them. The Government of India's interference will be limited to careful examination of outstanding advances in each Province, to prevent them becoming excessive.

THE Civil and Military Gazette says that the post of Resident in Cashmere has been offered to Colonel Gordon Young for four or five months, this temporary arrangement being the result of a compromise, as the Foreign Office wished to appropriate the post, but Sir Charles Aitchison urged that it ought to be held by a Punjab civilian. Later advices, however, state that the appointment has been given to Colonel Parry Nisbet.

THERE seems to be a conflict of opinions in India as to whether Major Battye and Captain Urmston were killed in British territory or not. The Lahore paper of June 23 gives the account of the incident as follows:—"The latest reliable information regarding the unfortunate incident on the Agror frontier which resulted in the death of two British officers shows that a party consisting of Major L. R. Battye, second in command of the 5th Gurkhas, with fifty-eight men of that regiment and nineteen police, left Berchar, a British outpost, early on the morning of the 18th, and ascended the spur of the Black Mountain on the base of which the post is situated, to examine the water-supply. Instead of keeping within British territory the party crossed the border and were attacked at Chorkalan in independent territory by a party of Akazais, Khan Khel Hasanzais, and Purari Sayads. The British party was attacked in flank and rear as it descended a heavily-wooded hill spur. During the retreat Major Battye, Captain Urmston, a Gurkha havildar, a naik, a bugler, and two Gurkhas were killed. The bodies of the British officers were recovered; the others were left on the hill. On reaching the bottom of the hill the party received loyal assistance from British villagers.

THE Pioneer, however, says that "the attack was perfectly unjustifiable, as it occurred on our own ground. Major Battye did nothing to bring on the fighting, and the manner in which he and Captain Urmston came to meet their deaths was such as well befitted British officers."

THE same paper says:—"The statement of the Lahore paper that an expedition will be sent immediately against the Black Mountain tribes is incorrect. That such expedition must take place in the autumn is certain, the reluctance of the Government of India to move against the tribes on the Hazara border having at last given way. Some six or seven thousand men will presumably be required, and the commissariat and transport arrangements can be matured during the next three months."

THE Government of India, it is said, intend submitting proposals to the Secretary of State which will revolutionise the financial relations between the Imperial and Provincial Governments. The idea is to carry decentralisation further by separating as far as possible the Provincial expenditure from the Imperial, and to empower Provincial Governments to raise by local taxation such funds as they may require for their special needs. Under this system each Province would in such a matter, say, as education have to trust entirely to its own resources. It remains to be seen if the proposed change will be acceptable to the India Office.

NOTES.

FROM India proper there comes but little eventful news this week, either by wire or post. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs an account of a brutal case of cruelty which is now being investigated before the Chief Magistrate, in which a Hindu girl of eleven years of age accuses her mother-in-law of branding her with a red-hot iron, because she used too much salt in a dish she was cooking. The girl was married, and her husband, it is stated, held her down, with the assistance of his brother, whilst his mother branded her. The correspondent telegraphs that the incident is "illustrative of the evils of child-marriage," and hopes "that the scandal caused by the case will support Rukhmabai's appeal for reform in the law." We fail to see the inference thus drawn. Carried to its legitimate conclusion, it would be an argument against marriage altogether if a wife, no matter what her age, be assaulted by her husband and mother-in-law. The arguments against the evils of child-marriage are surely weighty enough already without trying to find others in this sensational manner.

THERE has been a serious outbreak amongst the prisoners in the Darjeeling Jail, and, strange to add, an attempt at escape. We say strange, for an Indian jail has generally been the criminal's earthly Paradise, wherein he finds shelter, care, and comforts during his intervals of gang robbery or petty pilfering. Why should he wish to escape from the hospitality which a paternal Government insists shall always be shown to him? The threat of being "turned out" used always to allay discontent within prison walls in India, for as dear departed Ali Baba wrote:—"To be expelled from jail and driven like Cain into the rude and wicked world a wanderer, an outcast—this would be a cruel ban. Before such a presentiment the well-ordered mind of the criminal recoils with horror." In Amritsar Jail a prisoner has murdered a warder, but that is nothing; it is the desire to escape which is inexplicable.

THE latest telegraphic news from the Sikkim camp confirms the report of Thibetan reinforcements, but no further attack has been made on our position, although Gnatong is as usual "expecting a night attack." There is, however, a bit of humour in the telegram from the Calcutta correspondent. It is rumoured that the Thibetans applied to China for assistance, stating that they had defeated the British troops three times. The Chinese Government replied that, with such convincing proofs of their military superiority over the British, aid from China would appear to be entirely superfluous.

Does this humour come from China or from Calcutta?

If from the latter place it may be accepted as a proof that more genial weather reigns there now than when the present mail left. The heat then is described as having been terrific. Application had been made to temporarily close the law courts, and business had been almost suspended. We read that, "owing to the great heat, thousands of Natives resort to the river banks to sleep at night. On Saturday night an enormous number collected on the Strand, opposite the Mint. Before stretching themselves on the bare ground the majority plunge into the river." The Patriot says:—"The heat in Calcutta within the last few days has been such as the oldest residents cannot recall to mind. Cases of apoplexy and sunstroke have been numerous. The hospitals are crowded with patients suffering from the effects of excessive heat, and some deaths also have resulted."

REUTER telegraphs that "the Government has adopted a resolution on the subject of State education in India, which is regarded as calculated to benefit in a high degree the extension of education in that country. It recommends that wherever possible Government schools should be substituted for private ones, and that the education staff should be strengthened by the engagement of specialists in Great Britain. The resolution deals largely with the question of technical education, and urges that as a beginning an industrial survey should be made of each province. It also proposes that moral training should be provided by a moral text-book founded on natural religion."

THE Calcutta Statesman continues to attack all who are connected with what now generally goes by the name of the Hyderabad (Deccan) Scandal. But not content with denouncing Mr. Cordery for his belief in Abdul Huq, it brings forward a curious account of the late Resident's action with regard to another case, in which Major Nevill figured in a more than questionable way. The charges are so damaging but so distinctly formulated, that either Mr. Cordery or the Government, under whose orders he still is, must take notice of them. It will hardly do for him to follow Mr. Parnell's method of "contemptuous indifference."

YET this is the method which the Government of India commended to Sir Lepel Griffin when he asked that Government to prosecute his libellers in the Native Press. Sir Lepel has had to accept the official refusal, but he has not done so without a vigorous protest. A remarkable letter which he wrote to the Secretary to the Government of India from the Indore Residency before leaving is given in extenso by the Pioneer; but the concluding paragraph sums up its purport, and concentrates some very wholesome truths in a very able and concise way.

HERE it is:—"In conclusion, I would most respectfully invite the Government to consider that its policy of indifference to malicious libels on high officials is misunderstood by the people of India of high or low degree. They either believe that the libels are true, or that the Government is afraid to prosecute the Native Press which utters them. Whichever be their belief, it is equally injurious to the power and prestige of the Imperial Government—more so than the open preaching of sedition. The surest foundation of our power in India is the general and well-founded confidence of the people in the justice, impartiality, and honesty of English officials; and if the Government allows this to be undermined, and treats this invaluable possession as of small account, and a thing unworthy of defence, it will lose its chief support in time of danger, while it will degrade the quality of its official class, for honourable men will hesitate to serve a Government which refuses to defend their honour." This is very plain and outspoken. Sir Lepel knows how to hit hard, and straight too.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

A resolution of the Financial Department deals with the accounts for the year 1886-87. The net result agrees closely with the Budget, but there are considerable differences in details. The revenue in India was Rs. 14,49,900 better than the Budget; the expenditure in India was Rs. 52,600 worse. The provincial adjustment was Rs. 10,11,100 worse; the net expenditure in England was Rs. 1,61,700 better. The exchange on English expenditure was Rs. 5,51,700 worse, making a final result of Rs. 3,800 worse than the Budget.

The following items of revenue were worse:—Opium, Rs. 2,84,624; State railways, Rs. 12,489.

Items better.—Salt, Rs. 2,65,144; excise, Rs. 2,40,874; telegraphs, Rs. 1,09,395; guaranteed railways, Rs. 5,13,616; army, Rs. 1,21,218; sundries, Rs. 2,01,853.

Items of expenditure worse.—Police, Rs. 2,67,197; marine, Rs. 1,55,436; army services, Rs. 13,32,116; special defence works, Rs. 1,23,110.

Items better.—Famine relief, Rs. 10,52,280; State railways working expenses, Rs. 3,49,211; buildings and roads, Rs. 2,62,511; sundries, Rs. 1,61,250.

The improvement in the Imperial revenue occurred chiefly in the receipts of the guaranteed railways, owing to the unexpected development of traffic, especially on the Great Indian Peninsula line. The excess of expenditure was due chiefly to the extended military operations in Upper Burma, and occurred under the heads of police, marine, and army. The charges for special defence works also contributed to the excess, as they were shown in the Budget outside the revenue account, but it was afterwards decided to charge them against the revenues of the year. On the other hand, the famine insurance grant was largely reduced.

In the provincial and local portions of the accounts there was an improvement in revenues of Rs. 8,60,900, chiefly under land revenue and excise, and a saving in the expenditure of Rs. 1,50,200, chiefly under buildings and roads, resulting in a total improvement of Rs. 10,11,100 in the balances at credit of provincial Governments. The Budget estimate was framed on the basis of an exchange of 1s. 6d., or £1 equals Rs. 13 1-3. The rate actually realised at which the English revenue and expenditure were brought to account was 1s. 5 4/8d., or £1 equals Rs. 13 7/8.

There was a severe fall in the price of Bengal opium, the average price obtained during the year being Rs. 1,123, against Rs. 1,200 in the Budget, and Rs. 1,235 and Rs. 1,296 actuals in the two previous years. The chests sold numbered 54,750, as against 55,500. The estimated deficiency, however, was supplemented by increased receipts from the duty on Malwa opium. There were imported from Bombay 39,745 chests, against 36,134, as estimated. The balance in the stock of Bengal opium on the 1st of April, 1887, was 79,455 chests.

Telegraphic communication between India and Australia is completely interrupted, as both the cables between Java and Port Darwin have been broken. It would seem desirable to carry out the project of connecting Western Australia with India direct, so as to avoid further interruption of this character.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JULY 14.

The last official bulletin in regard to Upper Burma shows no material change in the condition of the province. Notwithstanding the large number of dacoits who recently surrendered in Minbu under the amnesty proclamation, disturbances have been renewed there. A gang of seventy dacoits have captured Segu, a police post, killing five Burman police, wounding five others, and carrying off some arms. In the Upper Chindwin Valley a band of dacoits have burned the large village of Shekan. Mounted infantry and police have been sent in pursuit. Numerous dacoits are reported in various districts. The military police have had several successful encounters with dacoit bands, in which the police captured prisoners and arms.

Brigadier Steedman has returned from a tour of inspection in the Mogoung district. He reports that the post at Mogoung is well stockaded and safe. Four mountain guns have been sent there. Any attack on Mogoung during the rains is improbable. A detachment of Goorhas proceeding to Mogoung in boats was attacked by a band of dacoits, whom they repulsed.

Mr. Colquhoun has returned from Momeit, having organised the defence. It is hoped that this renders Momeit secure during the rains.

Southern Tenasserim continues in a disturbed and dangerous condition. A band of dacoits 200 strong is assembled in the hills near Tavoy. It is highly discreditable to the Local Government that Tenasserim, which has been sixty years British territory, and was always known as the most peaceable portion of Burma, should be allowed to continue for months in its present lamentable condition.

The settlement of claims against the late Burmese Government is proceeding slowly. M. Andriano, late Consul-General for Italy at Mandalay, has been granted Rs. 2,600 for ropes sold by him to the Burmese Government. M. Andriano claimed Rs. 12,400.

The Rangoon Gazette publishes the judgment of Mr. Hildebrand, Superintendent of the Shan States, on the death of Mr. Powell, who was recently killed by a Burmese villager. Mr. Hildebrand says:—

"I consider that the Ngammi man who killed Mr. Powell was justified in firing that shot to effect the release of his son-in-law. Even had his son-in-law not required his assistance, the fact of seeing his two sons illegally and with the grossest injustice butchered before his eyes would exonerate his hastily revenging their deaths on their murderers."

The Rangoon Gazette thus comments on this passage:—

"It practically amounts to giving leave to any semi-savage to shoot down British officers when he finds the latter arresting a relative in what he may consider an illegal manner."

Mr. Hildebrand's action has been approved by the Local Government, and the facts proved before him certainly called for strong comments.

A Burman residing in a suburb of Rangoon has been arrested this week. In his house were found documents and seals apparently proving him to be an emissary of the Mengwoon Prince. Among other papers discovered was a remarkable proclamation calling on all Burmans residing in Lower Burma in the districts traversed by the iron enemy—the Burma State Railways—to unite and make up for the want of foresight previously displayed, and assail the only vulnerable place in the power of the great enemy. The people living on the Prome and Tounghoo lines are exhorted to destroy the parts of the railway in their immediate neighbourhood. Special mention is made of mail trains, which are desired to be overturned and destroyed utterly. Some mystery exists as to the identity of the prisoner. It is alleged that he is an Alompra Prince.

It is unquestionable that a hostile and dangerous feeling is being developed among the people in several districts of Lower Burma. This is partly due to the harsh and unsympathetic manner in which the administration is carried on, but mainly to the manner in and extent to which punitive taxes are being imposed. These taxes, which are levied alike on innocent and guilty, have recently been inflicted in a wholesale manner for which there is no justification. This system is undoubtedly alienating large classes of people who have no sympathy with the dacoits, and causing many to listen readily to disloyal proposals. The local Press have remonstrated against the extent to which punitive taxes are being imposed.

The Government Gazette to-day announces the imposition of a further punitive tax of Rs.40,000 on the people of the Tharrawaddy district, which is one of the poorest in the province, and where the great bulk of the inhabitants are petty cultivators. Very heavy fines had been already imposed on this district. It is impossible for the people of Tharrawaddy to pay these fines and support themselves and their families. The Rangoon Times declares that the people of one village in Tharrawaddy were summarily fined Rs.200, because Deputy-Commissioner Young, an officer of six years' standing, considered the stockade round the village not sufficiently high. The Local Government deny that any illegal fines have been imposed by the Deputy-Commissioner. The Tharrawaddy rural police tax, of which no public notice was given, appears to be used as a means of inflicting severe fines on the most flimsy pretexts. The local Press comment on the fact that the party of punitive police who dacoited the village of Sembui, in Tharrawaddy, in May, and committed a murder, have not yet been punished.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

A TRADES MARK FOR INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

A correspondent of a Calcutta paper urges the local Chamber of Commerce to take action in securing a Trades Mark Act for India, but at the same time dreads the passing of a too stringent Act by "officials who in their utter ignorance of details may inflict an unmerited and onerous punishment on a developing branch of trade." The reference here is to the cotton industry, and there can be no doubt that too stringent regulations would undoubtedly have a bad effect; but the writer need have no anxiety about the action which the Legislative Department is likely to take in the matter. When the matter was under consideration some years ago the practical difficulties were found to be so great that the projected legislation was dropped with the consent of the mercantile community. If the Chambers of Commerce and other experts will now take a little trouble to point out where the shoe pinches, the Government of India will be only too glad to listen to their suggestions. There is no apprehension, as the Calcutta writer seems to think, of an Act being passed in Simla in such a way that it will escape effective criticism. What will probably be done is the drafting of an Act, and its formal introduction into the Legislative Council a month or two hence, in time to obtain the fullest expression of mercantile opinion upon it before the Council meets in Calcutta. Then, during the cold weather session, the Bill can be exhaustively discussed and finally passed in a shape which should be acceptable to manufacturers generally. Traders in England would undoubtedly welcome legislation in India, chiefly because unscrupulous firms on the Continent flood our markets with spurious articles, the English labels and trade marks being closely imitated, and only a letter in a well-known name being changed to give an appearance of honest trading. No regulations can be too stringent which shall put an end to imposture of this kind. This is a matter in which the Trades Associations might bestir themselves, for our retail dealers undoubtedly suffer serious losses by the bazaars being stocked with inferior goods, which are palmed off on purchasers as being of English manufacture.

THE HILLS SCANDAL.

(Englishman.)

Although the Bombay Government is in the habit of resorting to two hill stations—it used to have a third in Matheran—it only spent Rs. 19,000 on its hill emigration in 1885, or less than a fourth of the sum which the Bengal Government spent in its Darjiling account in the same year. The Finance Committee, however, is of opinion that the expenses of Bombay can be cut down to Rs. 5,000, and proposes to abolish allowances for residence at Poona, which is not, strictly speaking, a hill station, being "cheap and salubrious, and a favourite place of residence for Natives." Mr. Justice Cunningham maintains that the officials who go to Simla and other hill stations should forthwith have their salaries reduced by a third, as is done in the case of an officer who goes to Europe. "The unfavourable conditions of life in India no longer affect him, and it becomes equitable, accordingly, that he should be paid at a rate somewhat more like the European scale than that which prevails in India." This is the conclusion which the Government must inevitably accept, as the logical outcome of the argument in favour of the present system. The existing scale of pay was arranged solely with a view to Indian service and to continue the old rates of pay to officers in the hills is to discredit all recent profession of a desire to effect economy in the public service. It is impossible to read the report of the Finance Committee without feeling a consciousness of insincerity underlying the whole inquiry. The Committee, while mercilessly exposing the extravagant system of allowances to subordinates, are evidently haunted by a sense of the absurdity of the arrangement by which the greater evils are carefully removed beyond the reach of controversy. But, as Mr. Cunningham says, the movement to Simla takes place confessedly for the health, convenience, and gratification of the high officials. "The officials at Simla enjoy conditions of life which in many respects are more conducive to health than those of his own country, and thus escapes many of those serious privations and expenses with reference to which the scale of Indian salaries has been adjusted at rates greatly in excess of those which prevail in England." If the Government of India is earnest in its efforts to retrench, and at the same time desires to put an end to the open scandal attaching to the Simla system, it will recommend a reduction of the salaries of all officials serving in the hills. We do not suggest that a lower rate than that of England should be adopted, as Mr. Cunningham seems to think fair; but we are certain that, were the question to come before any impartial tribunal, the present rate of pay would be unhesitatingly condemned. Probably if the Government knew how this matter is regarded by the Civil Service throughout India—that is, by the Civilians who have to support the heat and burden of an Indian career—it would be more inclined to listen to reason on the subject. It is to be hoped that the question will soon be brought before Parliament, and if this is done as a result of the recent inquiry it will readily be admitted that the Finance Committee did not sit in vain, and that the huge folios of the report are not a mere monument of barren and delusive toil.

ANOTHER HYDERABAD QUEER STORY.

The following narrative has been published by the Statesman with a request that all the newspapers in India shall reproduce it, so that the world may see what "Mr. Cordery is capable of doing on his own account, irrespective of Abdul Huq altogether":—

In February, 1885, a Mahomedan widow, named Bulsumbee the legal representative of Major Nevill's deceased butler, sued him before Mr. Van-Ingen, Judge of the Suburban Court at Hyderabad, for Rs. 5,000, being the balance alleged to be due for advances made by the deceased butler to the defendant's wife for housekeeping purposes. Mrs. Nevill went into the witness-box and swore positively that "she owed not a penny of the amount claimed;" and, in particular, that she had never given the late butler two promissory notes, for Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 1,832 respectively, which the late butler's "abstract of account" recorded as having been executed by her, but which promissory notes, as well as the detailed "house account books," the widow had not been able to find among the deceased's effects. While thus denying the claim in toto, Mrs. Nevill accounted for her signature on a confirmatory memorandum filed by the widow, by swearing that it had been got from her by a trick, when she was too ill to know what she was doing. Major Nevill himself then entered the box and swore, "As far as I am aware I owe no money at all claimed in this suit." On this sworn testimony of the two Nevills the widow was about to lose her case, when through a further search being made in her house before the next hearing she found all the six detailed "house account books," which had been missing. These books supported in every detail the figures of the memorandum to which Mrs. Nevill had sworn that her signature had been obtained by fraud only. Nay more; along with the account books were found the originals of the two promissory notes which Mrs. Nevill had sworn she had never granted, and one of which was written bodily with her own hand.

The finding of this fresh evidence acted as a bombshell on both Major Nevill and his counsel. The latter promptly appeared in Court, with his client accompanying him, and declared that "Major Nevill and himself had examined the further exhibits which had now been filed, and that the result was to induce Major Nevill, with his entire approval, to cease further opposition to the claim;" the counsel added that Major Nevill was satisfied "that the balance signed for by Mrs. Nevill did actually represent the aggregate of the monthly balances shown in the books," and he, in consequence, handed to the widow's pleader "a cheque for the whole amount claimed, together with the cost of the suit."

This extraordinary confession of judgment, following on the defence which had been set up, created a painful impression, and naturally made the Hyderabad Government call for a report from the Judge who had tried the case. Mr. Van-Ingen reported very unfavourably as regards the character of the defence as originally set up and supported by evidence on oath. Meanwhile, an application was made for leave to prosecute Mrs. Nevill for perjury, and Major Nevill for abetment of perjury.

It so happened, however, at this stage, that two persons, a local newspaper proprietor and its editor, named respectively Edwards and Verner, published in their paper an article on the case, which went beyond the bounds of fair criticism. Major Nevill sued them criminally in the Bombay High Court. He, however, to the astonishment of the Court, proceeded to procure the formal acquittal of Verner—who was the admitted writer of the article—by offering no evidence against him. The remaining accused (Edwards) was also to the surprise of the Court then induced to plead guilty. There was thus no defence; and Major Nevill, with no one to cross-examine or contradict him, put before the High Court Judge ex parte a series of perfectly novel allegations as to the original case which he had himself so eagerly closed by confession of judgment in Hyderabad. The Judge with these ex parte allegations before him as evidence, naturally characterised as a fraudulent claim the self-same claim which, in the Hyderabad Court, both Major Nevill and his wife had admitted to be just, and had paid.

As soon as these proceedings were over, Mr. Cordery seems to have formed a determination to rescue Major Nevill from the stigma he was under by terrorising the Nizam's Minister into showering rewards upon him, and punishing all those who had shown themselves favourable to the cause of the widow. Mr. Ali Abdulla, of the Stud Department, had assisted the widow with funds to carry on the prosecution, and Mr. Cordery at once decreed that he should be summarily dismissed and deported from the Hyderabad State, and that his brother, Captain Ahmed Abdulla, should be degraded and removed from the capital. He ordered further that the very judge who tried the case should be immediately dismissed from his Highness's service. The Nizam and his Minister, deeply aggrieved at the receipt of these orders, attempted to postpone their execution. Mr. Cordery had by this time put the case for Major Nevill before the Government of India, just as he had put before them the case for Sirdar Diler-ud-Dowla, and again wrote calling upon the Nizam and the Minister "to consider his letter as urging upon them in the strongest terms the need of early action in the matter." The Nizam could resist no longer, and in the case of all the three persons above-named, Mr. Cordery's infamously unjust orders were forthwith carried out.

But even these arbitrary proceedings against the Nizam's old and tried subordinates did not fill up the measure of his Highness's humiliation. Mr. Cordery next demanded that his Highness should open his treasury and indemnify Major Nevill, from the funds of the State, for all the expenses which he had incurred in the prosecution of Edwards and Verner! Thus addressed, the Nizam's Minister had no course open to him but to write to Major Nevill requesting him "to send him an account of the expenses he had incurred in prosecuting the said suit." Major Nevill thereupon submitted a paper in which he claimed no less than Rs. 32,773.13. A verbatim copy of this extraordinary document, which it will be observed bears neither heading, nor date, nor particulars of any kind, runs thus:—

(Signed) R. NEVILL.

There is a characteristic brevity in the wording of the curious items in this statement. Evidently the very last thing which Major Nevill feared was an unfriendly audit by Mr. Cordery. The item of Rs. 1,168-8 for "detective fees" is, to say the least, remarkable in a case in which both the accused pleaded guilty to the open publication of a libel in a newspaper. Major Nevill and his wife were altogether about a week in Bombay, and he charges no less than Rs. 1,574 "for expenses of self and family to Bombay." Again, he charges Rs. 2,140 for interest on Rs. 20,500, "without explaining what this charge is for, or why he makes a charge which is equal to the interest at 5 per cent. thereon for more than two years. The amount charged in the name of "Macfarlane and Edgelow's cost," viz., Rs. 19,563-13, seems enormous for such a short criminal case; but as they have the data they must be left to judge of its correctness. Finally, Major Nevill has the astounding audacity to include in the above statement the whole amount of the widow Kulsumbee's claim on him, with costs, viz., Rs. 5,343-4, notwithstanding that he had himself made confession of judgment of the claim, and had himself handed to her pleader a cheque for the full amount, with costs, in open court. Now, this outrageous bill of Major Nevill's was actually referred by the Nizam's Government to the British Resident, and approved by him. Whereupon the whole amount was forthwith disbursed from the public treasury of Hyderabad.

This last proof of the extent to which Mr. Cordery as Resident was prepared to countenance the claims preferred by Major Nevill, demoralised the Nizam's Government on the one hand, while it emboldened Major Nevill to increase his demands. His fresh demands were first of all, a loan of Rs. 20,000 from the Government Treasury; second, the remission of some thousands of rupees due by him to Government for the rent of the house in which he lives; third, exemption from having to pay any rent in future, and fourth, an increase to his pay with retrospective effect, from the date, some three years before, when a certain increase had been recommended by the Peskar, but not sanctioned, owing to the change of Ministry. The dread of Mr. Cordery already established by all too conclusive proofs of his determination to support Major Nevill, simply compelled the Nizam and his Minister to accede to those outrageous demands. Major Gough, the Military Secretary to the Regular Troops, unable, it was said, to accept the Resident's view as to the triumphant vindication of Major Nevill's character, which was supposed to have taken place, resigned his office. The Nizam, himself, probably considering that Major Nevill was the proper man to resign, and not Major Gough, directed that a Commission should be appointed to inquire into the reason of the latter's resignation. But this only caused his Highness to be informed by Mr. Cordery that the suggested Commission was an insult to Mr. Cordery himself. All opposition to Major Nevill being thus stamped out, as a final step he was appointed by Mr. Cordery Commissioner for the Hyderabad State to the Colonial and Indian Exhibition in London, in which capacity he, along with others, received the decoration of C.I.E. Doubtless he will ever remember with gratitude the names of Mr. Cordery and the widow Kulsumbee.

Lord Dufferin will probably learn the facts of this story for the first time as he reads them in our columns. That Mr. Cordery would lay the whole discredit of these exposures in Parliament at the door of Abdul Huq was certain, of course, from the first. The assurance that he was going home to explain everything to Lord Cross and to rehabilitate his injured friend has given place to an attempt to make a scapegoat of him, and it is therefore necessary that we should show what Mr. Cordery is capable of doing on his own account, independently of Huq altogether. The public has now an opportunity of discerning this for itself. We certainly hope that every newspaper in India will feel it to be its duty to reproduce this story in its columns. We give it because there is little hope of its fact being brought to light before the Select Committee, where every effort will be made to circumscribe the inquiry as much as possible.

BENGAL.

THE Calcutta High Court, after showing mercy to so many malefactors, has now taken compassion on itself. In consequence of the intense heat, all business has been suspended, except for one bench that deals with urgent applications, and the majority of the Judges and Bar have taken themselves off to Darjeeling.

INDIGO in Bengal and Behar has suffered a good deal from the late hot and dry weather. Fair showers have fallen in Krishnagur, Moorshedabad, Rajshahye, and a few other districts, but more rain is still wanted even there, and in those districts where no rain has fallen the spring sowings have been seriously affected. Manufacture has consequently been delayed, and though it has been begun in a few factories with chur lands, it will not be general for nearly another fortnight. In Behar several factories have started manufacture, and so far produce is reported to have been satisfactory. But in Southern Tirhoot, and in most parts of Chupra, the plant is said to be suffering to some extent from burn and want of rain. In these districts Mahai will be late, and will not probably begin before the first week in July. More rain is also wanted in the North-West Provinces, but the crop is holding out well.

AMID all the complaints, says the Englishman, that are made regarding the Value Payable Post in India, the fact that it is a most valuable boon is not to be lost sight of for a moment. In 1886-87 no less a sum than 29½ lakhs was paid to Calcutta tradesmen alone for articles sent to purchasers in the mufasal under the V.P. system; and although the figures for last year have not yet been published, we understand that they show a large increase. It will thus be seen that, although the system is not free from abuses, the abuses sink into insignificance in comparison with the advantages which are conferred by it upon trade and the mufasal public. Residents in the mufasal are enabled by means of it to supply all their wants at cash prices, and a little trouble is all that is needed to prevent fraud, as the receiver has only to consider whether he or she has ordered anything from the sender whose name is given on the intimation received from the Post Office. Even the absent addresses can guard against risks by giving instructions to the Post Office to deliver articles in his name to some persons who may be provided with a note of what V.P. articles are to be accepted.

MADRAS.

THE Madras Government, at the instance of the Finance Committee, have directed that the appointment of Superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum, Madras, be abolished, a Senior Apothecary being placed in charge of the institution and its management supervised by either the Secretary to the Surgeon-General H.M.'s Forces, or with the Government without any extra remuneration. Orders have also been issued for the abolition of the Lunatic Asylum at Calicut, and the patients therein are to be transferred to the Lunatic Asylum at Colaba, in the Bombay Presidency.

THE HON. C. G. MASTER, Senior Member of the Madras Council, has been seriously ill at his residence, Ella-hill House, Ootacamund. The symptoms were first declared to be those of gastric fever, but subsequently it was said that the honourable gentleman was suffering from an attack of ordinary enteric fever. According to the last accounts, Mr. Master was improving.

THE ryots of Coimbatore, Mettapolium, and the surrounding villages have lost upwards of four hundred bullocks this last season from some cattle disease, which the village doctors were unable to cure.

LORD CONNEMARA, it is reported, will pay an early visit to his Highness the Maharajah of Mysore in his capital. His Excellency will travel from Ootacamund by the Seegoor Ghaut to the city of Mysore, where he will be the guest of the Maharaja. After spending a few days in Mysore, his Excellency will journey by rail to Bangalore, where he will be the guest of the acting British Resident, General Sir Harry Prendergast.

On the 16th June while the s.s. Clan Macintosh, now in Madras, was on its way out, a series of deaths, due to asphyxia caused by poisonous emanations from a portion of the hold of the steamer where stores were kept, occurred. The chief steward, Mr. Williams, accompanied by the butler and a boy, entered the store-room to issue the week's rations to the native crew; another man was left on the second deck to receive the stores handed up. The three were asphyxiated at once. The man above then fell into the hold. Seeing him fall a fireman reported the matter to the second officer, Mr. Macpherson, who proceeded with a lighted lamp. He had hardly reached the bottom when the lamp was extinguished, and he fell. The first officer, Mr. Shortland, then went down in slings, found the body of Mr. Macpherson and had it hauled up, following himself. He then went down again to recover the steward, but fell dead. The second officer, third engineer, two quartermasters, and several native crew were with difficulty resuscitated.

BOMBAY.

H.E. LORD REAY has subscribed Rs.500 to the "Souter Memorial Fund."

COLONEL R. WESTMACOTT, 28th Bombay Pioneers, has been elected a Steward of the W. I. T. Club, vice the late Sir Frank Souter.

MR. CURSONDASS VULLABDASS has been elected a director of the Queen Insurance Company, of Liverpool, London, and Bombay.

THE subscriptions on behalf of the Souter Memorial Fund amounted to about Rs.13,000, up to June 20.

THE second issue of the Bombay Natural History Society's Journal for the current year has just been issued. It contains, amongst other variable matter, Mr. Vidal's very original and lively paper on the Bis Cobra, Mr. Steel's paper on "the Nearest Allies of the Horse," and a contribution by Mr. Carstensen, Superintendent of the Victoria Gardens, on the conditions for the distribution of plants, with special regard to Indian species.

THERE has been a considerable improvement in the condition of his Grace the Roman Catholic Archbishop. He is now considered to be out of all immediate danger, and in the opinion of his medical attendants needs but a period of rest to be restored to his former health. The Archbishop still remains at Kirkee, and had a sympathetic visit from his Excellency Lord Reay, who since his arrival in Poona has made frequent inquiries as to his Grace's progress towards recovery.

THE chiefs of Kathiawar, to mark their appreciation of the kindness and friendship shown to them by Colonel Wodehouse, C.I.E., during the two years he has been acting Political Agent of the Province, and to acknowledge the constant interest evinced by him in their welfare have, through their representatives, requested his acceptance of his portrait to be placed in a conspicuous part of the Jubilee Museum Hall, the proposal to erect which as a fitting memorial to Her Majesty's Jubilee emanated from him, and the foundation-stone of which was also laid by him on the 9th of January, 1888. They also asked to be allowed to present to him a valedictory address. Colonel Wodehouse very cordially accepted their offer of the portrait as a record of his connection with the Province, but he regretted his inability to accept a valedictory address, it being against the rules of the service. The chiefs, however, have requested the Government to allow him to accept a valedictory address.

BURMA.

A wonderful order appeared in the last official Gazette, says the Rangoon Times:—The Chief Commissioner has been pleased to declare that for the purpose of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Burmese language shall be the language of all courts in Burma except the Special Court, the Judicial Commissioner's, and the Recorder's Court. We could have understood making Burmese the language of the courts of Upper Burma, but to make it the language of the magistrates' courts in seaports like Rangoon, Moulmain, Bassein, and Akyab seems ridiculous. It would be as sensible to make Bengali the language of the magistrates' court in Calcutta, or Tamil of the magistrates' court in Madras. Burmans are in the minority in the Rangoon courts, and the reason for making their language the language of courts principally used by Europeans and Natives of India is not apparent. The Appellate Court for the Rangoon magistrates' court is the Recorder's, so that translations will be necessary of the proceedings if they are in Burmese. The order seems to us an absurd one likely to cause confusion and trouble, and we hope it may be altered, at any rate as regards the criminal courts in Rangoon and other seaports in Lower Burma.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Queen-Empress has been pleased, on the recommendations of the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief, to gazette Nawab Afsur Jung, A.D.C. to his Highness the Nizam and Commanding the Golconda Brigade, as an Honorary Major in Her Majesty's Army.

THE Government of India have confirmed the recommendation of the Government of the N.W. Provinces that Major A. H. Pirie, who has succeeded Lieut.-Colonel Charsley Thomas in the command of the Oudh Volunteers, be promoted to Lieut.-Colonel. The Government of India have taken the opportunity of this reference to place upon record their appreciation "of the excellent services rendered by Colonel Thomas in furthering the Volunteer movement in Oudh, and of the zeal and interest he has shown in the formation and progress of the Oudh Volunteer Rifle Corps."

If it be decided to hold a Cavalry Camp of Exercise at Delhi this cold weather the British cavalry regiments from Meerut and Umballa will probably participate in the manoeuvres. The Native Cavalry which can be intercepted while marching on relief are the 1st, moving from Peshawar to Saugor; the 5th, from Main Mir to Lucknow; the 11th, from Nowgong to Rawal Pindi; and the 13th, from Bareilly to Main Mir. The 10th, on their march from Multan to Umballa, could turn southwards, when nearing their destination, and join the Camp; while the 19th could accompany the 8th Hussars from Meerut. Under this arrangement, which would involve but very small expense, at least eight regiments could be brought together for manoeuvres.

THE following are the results of the competition for his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's prizes by the British and Native troops serving in the Bengal Presidency:—For the silver cup offered to the British Army and the purse of Rs.100 to British infantry the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers made the highest scores. The conditions of the match were not, however, fully adhered to, and the battalion has, therefore, been disqualified, and the prizes awarded to the 1st Battalion Leinster Regiment, which made the next best score. The prize of Rs.100 for British cavalry has been won by the 2nd Dragoon Guards. The gold medal presented to the best shot in the Native Army has been won by Sowar Darya Khan, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, who with a score of 27 points wins the tie from Sepoy Rampeari Singh, 4th Bengal Infantry. The purse of Rs.100 presented to the Native cavalry has been won by the 3rd Punjab Cavalry and that for Native infantry by the 1st Sikh Infantry.

A MILITARY ECONOMY.

(Pioneer.)

It is suggested, with a view to economy, to redistribute the Bengal Army into three divisions, Rawal Pindi, Lahore and Lucknow, and eight brigade commands, viz., Presidency Allahabad, Meerut, Peshawar, Kurram Valley, Umballa, Meerut again by some mistake, and Jhansi.

If this idea is carried out, it is probable the following would be the distribution of commands:—

RAWAL PINDI DIVISION

Consisting of the troops quartered at Rawal Pindi, Sialkot, Jhelum, Campbellpore, Attock and the hills about Murree; 10 battalions of infantry, 10 batteries of artillery, 5 regiments of cavalry—25 units in all.

LAHORE DIVISION

At present consists of troops quartered at Lahore, Mooltan,

Ferozepore and the hills about Dalhousie; it consists of 12 battalions of infantry, 6 batteries of artillery and 3 regiments of cavalry—21 units. It is suggested Quetta should be added to this division, but Quetta contains 6 battalions of infantry, 3 batteries of artillery, and 2 regiments of cavalry—11 units—which would bring this division up to 32 units: both a larger force and extending over too great a space for one general officer to exercise efficient supervision over. But Jullundur might be included: it contains 3 battalions of infantry, 1 battery of artillery, 1 regiment of cavalry, and would bring the division up to 26 units.

THE OUDH DIVISION,

Consisting at present of the troops quartered at Lucknow, Fyzabad, and Sitapur: 5½ battalions of infantry, 3 batteries of artillery, 3 regiments of cavalry—only 11½ units. This division should then be increased by including the Rohilkhand district consisting of 5 battalions of infantry, 1 battery of artillery, 1 regiment of cavalry, to which might also be added Cawnpore, consisting of 1 battalion of infantry, 1 battery of artillery, 1 regiment of cavalry; the strength of the division would then be 21½ units.

Of the brigades mentioned there has evidently been some confusion. Meerut is mentioned twice over, and one has been placed in the Kurram Valley, where there are no troops, nor is it likely the Kurram Valley will ever be used again as a line of advance into Afghanistan. The brigades would then probably be divided into commands thus:—Quetta, Peshawar, Umballa, Meerut, Jhansi, Allahabad, and Presidency.

The Quetta Brigade consists of 6 battalions of infantry, 3 batteries of artillery, 2 regiments of cavalry—11 units.

The Peshawar Brigade of the troops quartered at Peshawar, Nowshera and Cherat consists of 6 battalions of infantry, 1 battery of artillery, 2 regiments of cavalry—12 units in all.

The Umballa Brigade would consist of the troops quartered at Umballa, Rurki and the hill stations near, numbering 4 battalions of infantry, 7 batteries of artillery, 2 regiments of cavalry and the head-quarters of the Sappers—13 units in all.

The Meerut Brigade would be composed of troops quartered at Meerut, Chakrata, Dehra Dun and Delhi: 6 battalions of infantry, 6 batteries of artillery, 2 regiments of cavalry (not including the G. G.'s Bodyguard)—14 units in all.

The Jhansi Brigade of Jhansi, Agra, Muttra, Nowgong, and Banda: 6 battalions of infantry, 4 batteries of artillery, 2 regiments of cavalry—12 units in all.

The Allahabad Brigade of Allahabad, Jubbulpore, Saugor, Dinapore, and Benares, consisting of 8½ battalions of infantry, 5 batteries of artillery, 2 regiments of cavalry—15½ units. Possibly if better communications are opened the troops at Saugor might with advantage be included in the Jhansi Brigade.

The Presidency Brigade of the stations about Calcutta, Durranda, Buxa, and the Eastern Frontier: 9 battalions of infantry, 4 batteries of artillery—13 units in all. This command would be by no means so compact as is desirable.

The divisional commands by this arrangement would be compact, and would consist of three divisions of from 22 to 25 units.

The brigade commands, eight in number, would consist of from 11 to 15 units.

These commands would be proportionate to the rank of the respective general officers and not excessive for any. Rawalpindi already consists of 25 units and is not enlarged; whilst the Punjab Frontier Force, commanded by a brigadier-general assisted by 2 staff officers, consists of 12 battalions of infantry, 3 batteries of artillery, and 5 regiments of cavalry (including Guides Cavalry).

This note does not pretend to do more than work out practically the suggestion contained in the article referred to.

COMMERCIAL.

INDIAN JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.

CHERRA TEA COMPANY, LIMITED.—The ninth yearly report shows that the outturn for the year was 12,467 maunds. The year's working is satisfactory. About one quarter of the crop was sold in Calcutta, and the remaining three-quarters in London, where the Teas realised considerable surpluses over earlier Calcutta valuations. A further area of 34 acres has been planted, and if labour permits, 50 acres more will be added during the current year. The Revenue Account shows a balance of £8,296, which is carried to Profit and Loss Account. The balance at debit of Profit and Loss Account from 1886 amounts to £1,777, which leaves a balance of £6,518. This the Directors propose to appropriate in writing off the Building, Extension, Machinery, and Old Coolie Accounts. The total cost of the Tea laid down in Calcutta amounts to 5½ annas a lb., and the average price realised has been 7½ annas. The estimate for the current season is 12,050 maunds at an outlay of Rs. 3,16,300. The estimate of crop is based upon rather finer plucking than last year, and it is expected that the improvement in quality should compensate for the reduction in quantity. There were sent to the gardens during the year 160 fresh coolies, and the force, excepting on Panicherra, has been fairly adequate. Since the commencement of the cold weather, 185 more adults have been despatched. The agents have concluded a satisfactory agreement with the India General Steam Navigation Company for the conveyance of tea at the uniform rate of 14½ annas per maund net, while stores upwards will in future be carried at a reduction of 15 per cent.

GROB TEA COMPANY, LIMITED.—The outturn for 1887 was 3,297 maunds. The season closed unusually soon, the rains practically ceasing in September. The average price realised for the crop was annas 7-10 per lb., as compared with annas 7-8 the previous season. Twenty-five acres will be planted during the coming season at Dessoie, where labour is now ample. The expenditure has been Rs. 1,16,700, leaving a balance on the season of Rs. 12,992, which the directors regret is barely sufficient to pay the interest on the mortgage debt and to cover the adjustment of the 1886 account. The balance at the debit of profit and loss account stands at Rs. 53,651 at the close of the year. The estimate for the coming season is 3,378 maunds at an outlay of Rs. 1,14,289. Eighty coolies were imported during the year.

ENBOGRAM TEA COMPANY, LIMITED.—For the past season the outturn shows a considerable increase, being 6,316, against 5,625 in 1886. The bushes were again practically free from blight. The season was, on the whole, favourable, although the shortness of the rainfall considerably curtailed the outturn. From September onwards finer plucking was adopted, which resulted in an improvement. During the current season 25 acres at Coombergam, which have already been cleared, will be planted out with indigenous seed from Budlicherra. The expenditure has somewhat exceeded the estimate, partly owing to the increase of 800 maunds in the crop, but also to the heavy expense of recruiting fresh labour, which has been charged to revenue. The revenue account shows a total available balance of £4,665. This the directors propose to apply to the liquidations of outstanding machinery and factory accounts, £1,306, and in payment of a dividend of 6 per cent. on the capital of the Company, free of income-tax, which will absorb about £2,900, and admit of about £450 being carried forward. This will clear off practically all outstandings from the balance-sheet, and admit of the Company standing clear for the current season. The cost of the tea (including, however, the entire cost of the newly-imported coolies) amounts to 5½ annas a pound. The average price realised for the Tea has been 7 annas, which shows a slight improvement. For 1888 the estimate is 6,250 maunds at a total outlay of Rs. 1,56,850. The labour force has been increased by 156 new adult coolies, and will be further added to during the current year. The agents have signed a satisfactory agreement with the India General Steam Navigation Company for the conveyance of Tea at the uniform rate of 14½ annas per maund net, while stores upwards will be carried at a reduction of 15 per cent.

WASHABARIE TEA COMPANY, LIMITED.—The outturn for 1887 was 2,549 maunds. The garden was badly cut up at the beginning of the season by a severe hailstorm, which, followed by an attack of red spider, led to a loss of over 200 maunds of tea. Towards the close of the season mosquito blight was again very bad on older parts of the garden. Of the crop, 1,675 maunds were sold in Calcutta at an average price of annas 8-3 per lb., and the remainder in London, where it realised the equivalent of annas 7-2, making annas 8 for the season. During the year 24 acres were put out, and the estimates provide for planting out 20 acres during the current year. The result of the season's working is a profit of Rs. 18,665, making Rs. 21,373 at the credit and profit loss account. From this an interim dividend of 5 per cent. was paid at the close of the year, and the Managing Agents propose to pay a final dividend at the same rate, making 10 per cent. for the season, to write off Rs. 4,341 from the 1886 machinery account, and to carry the balance forward. The estimate for the coming season is 2,700 maunds of tea for an outlay of Rs. 73,369. A full labour force has been collected. The muster is now about 750 coolies, with some of the recruiters still to come in.

NEDDEM TEA COMPANY, LIMITED.—The outturn for 1887 was 4,067 maunds. The crop was sold in Calcutta, realising an average of 0 9-1 per lb. During the year 30 acres were put out at Neddem, raising the area under cultivation to over 900 acres. On the Neddem division, 50 acres more will be added during the current year. The expenditure has been Rs. 139,068 against receipts of Rs. 1,86,970, leaving a balance on the season of Rs. 47,901. Adding Rs. 5,356 brought forward from 1886, there remains at the credit of Profit and Loss Account a balance of Rs. 53,258. The Directors have transferred Rs. 32,338 in reduction of the cost of the Block and Factory Accounts, and from the balance they recommend that a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent be declared payable, leaving Rs. 5,919 to be carried forward. The estimate for the coming season is 5,000 maunds at an outlay of Rs. 1,59,072.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.*

No subject possesses more overwhelming importance to every Briton than the inviolability of his native land. The energy which has been displayed in resisting the attempts of disaffected Irishmen, and their (even more culpable because better informed) allies, to bring about the disruption of the British Empire from within, is as nothing, compared to that which would be shown in presence of the danger of foreign invasion, were it possible to make people realize what is the imminence of the danger, and what foreign invasion means. The entire change in the position of our Empire, relatively to foreign Powers, which has been brought about by the introduction of steam, has been much be-spoken and be-written; though, hitherto, all but in vain. But, as Sir S. Baker observes in the first article in the present issue of the National Review, the British public has, at length "awakened to a sense of insecurity."—Shakspeare's bold words,

"This England never did, nor never shall, Lie at the proud feet of a conqueror," and the no less confident motto of the men of Kent:—

"Vale of Holmesdale, Never conquered, never shall,"

date from a period when the annihilation of the silver streak by steam, or its being undermined for the benefit of a few private individuals, would have been deemed a maniac's dream. Would that it were at the present moment possible to feel such confidence. Widely different is the actual state of things. "There is," says the distinguished explorer, "no country in the world so rich in material as Great Britain, but at the same time so devoid of organisation. . . . Her commercial marine represents the commerce of the world; it would according be the alluring prize to every enemy." He points out the facilities which we possess for the formation of a volunteer fleet; our men-of-war, too often lying, for want of guns,—“with toothless gums, like dogs that cannot bite,” and concludes a vigorous article by expressing his belief that, were the patriotism of our people invoked, “no object exists which would raise a greater furor of sentiment and devotion than a volunteer fleet for the protection of our shores.”

Mr. W. Greswell has established a fair claim to be heard on the subject of his inquiry, how far it be possible to utilise friendly societies, which represent the embodiment of thrift among the lower classes, and which, as Mr. Evan Richards remarks, “are teaching men the duties of citizenship,” in the formation of an emigration fund, “distinct from their ordinary business routine.” Such a fund might, Mr. Greswell thinks, “be supplemented from time to time with donations from private philanthropists, or even the public exchequer.”

Two articles, “The Lambeth Conference,” and Mr. S. Leighton's “Nonconformity in Wales,” deal, from different points of view, with the efforts made by the Church of England to vindicate her undoubted claim to be, as well as to be called, the Church of the British Empire. Mr. Leighton has no difficulty in showing the decadence of Dissent in Wales, which a really good measure, dealing with the tithe question, could not fail to accelerate.

Mr. Bates' proposal to substitute for Civil Service pensions a compulsory life insurance, the annual premiums being a pro rata deduction from the salary, is not altogether new, and has not found much favour in the Civil Service; the average reader will be more attracted by Mr. Groome's interesting and suggestive paper on “Gipsy Folklore,” which forms, he thinks, “a missing link” between the popular stories of Europe and Asia. We will recur to this subject when we peruse the writer's promised collection of Gipsy tales.

An amusing paper by “A Desultory Reader,” on Ibn Batuta as “A Rival of Marco Polo,” a well-written account of Beaconsfield, replete with memories of Waller, Edmund Burke, and of the great Statesman who took from it his well-earned title—and, last but not least, a pleasing description of the reopening of the ancient Laurium mines, by Lady Jersey, combine to give varied interest to a very good number of this popular Review.

NORTHERN AFGHANISTAN.†

National memories die hard; for forty years the recollections of the fearful massacre in Cabul, which in 1842 shocked and terrified the people of this country, lingered in the minds of the public. Taking advantage of this circumstance, and turning it to account in shaping their policy, the Liberal Party stoutly proclaimed, as the leading reason for a withdrawal from Kandahar, that the inhabitants of the land were a fierce, fanatical race, whom nothing could mollify, nothing could induce to submit to the tread of an intruder. Yet, withal, within a decade we find an English Commission sending forth its members here there and everywhere, not only to the outskirts of Afghanistan, but to the very heart of the Empire; to Herat, ay, even to Cabul, the scene of so many a stirring deed in the past of England's history. “Northern Afghanistan,” by Major Yate, is a literary outcome of this activity, in which the author tells his experiences during the summer of 1885, when war with Russia trembled in the balance, the subsequent progress of the demarcation of the frontier, and its ultimate settlement, the operations extending over a period of about two years. And what says Major Yate in regard to the all-important question as to the attitude of the people towards the British? “Officers on detached duty have wandered about, and camped night after night in out-of-the-way villages, inhabited by all kinds of people, and have slept safe and sound without the protection of a single sentry or watchman of any kind whatever.” Again: “Everywhere on the march they had been cordially received and well treated.” Nor did the kindness and friendly feeling of the populace of the country fail to be reciprocated by the magnates of the cities. Everywhere and on every occasion the greatest consideration was shown to the Mission, from the Amir down to the meanest Court functionary.

This being so, what becomes of the argument in favour of a “backward policy,” based on the assumption that in Afghanistan every man's hand would be against any and every nation which should chance to interfere, indifferent as to the object of the intruders, or the reason which might have induced them to cross the borders which separate the Crescent from the Cross? Is it not demonstrated to a certainty that this pusillanimous policy is the outcome of timid counsels and weak-kneed deliberations? Is it not clear beyond the pale of doubt that in the East as in the West courage always gains the day? And is it not fair to deduce from Major Yate's most valuable work that the withdrawal from Kandahar was a retrogression in the eyes of the world, indicating rather the setting than the rising sun? And, as such, it must ever remain one amongst the many blots upon the escutcheon of a party who prefer place to responsibility, and self-profit to the honour of their country.

WALTER STANHOPE.*

“Walter Stanhope” is a type of a not uncommon class of individuals in this country—rich, endowed with intellect of a high—almost, perhaps, the highest—order, yet, withal, not destined to surpass others in the race of life. The reason is simple. Destiny had written across the pages of existence, “unstable as water thou shalt not excel.” He never threw all his heart, he never concentrated all his energies upon any one subject of study, but, like a butterfly, flitted about from flower to flower. How he was cured of this propensity, how his talents in the end shone forth in the splendour of their proper worth, is the plot of Mr. Copland's tale.

The author is evidently familiar with life amidst the denizens of the “Fatherland”; and taking his hero amidst scenes which are new to most of his readers, his story well merits perusal, if only on the score that it gives an admirable account of how time is spent, alike by the quiet citizen of the German Empire as by the rollicking reveller of that powerful monarchy. And how curious are the ways and customs of nations! In that country, for instance, there is no affectation of wealth, but honest, domestic duties honestly performed are not considered beneath the dignity of many a maiden who, liked circumstance in England, would scorn to “degrade” herself to the level of a servant. There, after a dance, it is not considered comme il faut for a young lady to promenade with her partner. Here the balcony and the alcove play an important part in the drama of matrimony. There the daughters of the house wait upon the father and brother. Here the lords of creation are the humble servants of the silliest and most insignificant schoolgirl who whirls in giddy ecstasy through the ball-rooms of society. There the ladies and the men withdraw together to the drawing-room. Here each sex is allowed, in uninterrupted seclusion, to pick the guests to pieces; and the tongue of scandal never fails for a “job” when the wine is in and the wit out. Lastly, there death is a bereavement which requires “family” consolation. Here the widow is left to pine in solitude upon the truth of the preacher that all is vanity.

We are not able to say how far the portrait of Bismarck as a young man is true to life. The scene of the tale is laid half a century ago, and it is quite probable that the sketch is not drawn entirely from imagination. At any rate, the picture is just what one would expect as portraying in true colours the early years of the greatest statesman of modern times. Mr. Copland has produced a very readable tale; his characters are well conceived, and considerable literary skill is displayed in making them "strut on the stage of life"; but the tale might with advantage be curtailed by the exclusion of many a German passage. Moreover, the introduction of an artless maiden into a haunt which raises a blush upon every modest cheek is questionable in taste, and unpalatable in effect. Such things do happen; but if our daughters and children are to take up books from the drawing-room table such incidents had better be conspicuous for their absence; and the fault is the more to be regretted in so far that the tone of the tale is quite the reverse of indelicate. This one faux pas mars an otherwise pretty novelette.

A NEW ENGLISH DICTIONARY ON HISTORICAL PRINCIPLES.*

Of all embarrassing problems in this world of letters nothing is more difficult than the preparation of a dictionary. Even in a work so elaborate in its nature, so comprehensive in its scope as that compiled under the superintendence of Dr. Murray, it is not possible to include everything in its pages. As he himself writes, "Practical utility has some bounds, and a dictionary has definite limits; the lexicographer must, like the naturalist, 'draw the line somewhere.'" Yet, withal, seeing that "A" and "B" monopolise no less than 1,240 pages of close print and huge paper, it may well be supposed that there is but little room for enlargement—to most persons the error is rather of "commission" than "omission." It is unduly minute as far as the ordinary requirements of everyday life; but as a standard and unimpeachable work of reference it is altogether unapproachable. Nothing in the English language can compare with it in fulness of research, accuracy of information, and soundness of principle; but who amongst us dare expect to witness its completion? One word of "spite" cannot be suppressed. Would it not be as well to use accurate grammar as regards the announcement that "with this section is (sic) issued the preface and introductions to the first volume?" Oh! shades of Lindley Murray, is "our" Mr. Murray asleep or dreaming?

The June number of the Indian Magazine (London, Kegan Paul and Co.; Bristol, Arrowsmith), contained a Paper on the—for India—astounding innovation of the appointment of a Native lady as Professor. She could not do better than perpend an article on "The Improvement of the Teacher" in the July number, which has just reached us. Many of the alumni attending her classes will, almost certainly, be destined to "teach the young idea how to shoot"; and no small success will be that of the Lady Professor, if she can give them even an elementary notion of the way in which they should set about their task. The writer of this article quotes Mr. Quick, who pertinently remarks that "not all practice makes perfect, but only rightly directed practice: what we should secure to the young teacher is rightly directed practice. . . . All beginners should have their teaching inspected and directed."

Colonel Walter's brilliant success in obtaining the unanimous consent of the Rajputana Chiefs to regulations limiting the age, as well as the expense, of marriages in that vast and most interesting Province (already referred to in the June issue of this excellent and well-edited magazine) is the subject of warm commendation in an article from the Times of India, which is here quoted at length. Colonel Walter has shown himself a true leader of men; and his work merits marked recognition at the hands of the Government of India.

Two papers on Female Education in Bombay and in Southern India, and Mr. Dvija Das Datta's notice of "The English Works of Rajah Ram Mohan Roy," deserve the attention of our readers.

Colburn's United Service Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) is decidedly improving under its present management. The number for July is very good and varied in its contents. Colonel Higgins furnishes a thoughtful paper on "The Scare of 1888," and from the well-known pen of Colonel Lonsdale Hale we have some interesting "Glimpses of German Military Life." Dr. Dickinson contributes an article on the British Navy, in which no stinted praise is meted out to Lord Brassey and his book. The serials, which have been running for some time, are continued with the same energy of pen and purpose; and many readers will hail with pleasure the commencement of a paper by H. G. Keene, of Anglo-Indian fame, but who has "divided" literary "honours" with many brilliant knights of the pen in England too. The editorial notes are crisp, and intelligently written. This magazine is growing in strength, and deserves the support of the "united" Services.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"The English in the West Indies," by J. A. Froude (Longmans and Co.); "Turkey," by Stanley

Lane Poole (T. Fisher Unwin); "Wellington," by G. Latham Browne (W. H. Allen and Co.); "English Worthies—Shaftesbury," by H. D. Traill (Longmans and Co.).

A FUGITIVE from the action at Gnatong of the 22nd May was captured the other day at Rongli Chu. He had lost his way in trying to escape, and said that he did not want to fight against us, but the Llamas having boiled his brother in oil for declining to do so he had judged it best to become a soldier and save the clergy from resorting to such extreme measures in his own case.

A DESPATCH has been received in India regarding promotion to the rank of colonel under the Warrant of the 15th November, 1887. It shows that the home authorities have no intention at present of appointing colonels by selection to the vacant posts, it being apparently proposed to absorb first of all the large number of colonels already unemployed.

MR. F. VINCENT, of the Madras Forest Department, has received the special thanks of the Government of the Colony of Victoria for a Memorandum prepared by him on the Crown Forests in Victoria, while on leave from India in that Colony.

A NATIVE paper says:—"Perceiving the evil effects of drinking, the weavers of Poona and the gardeners of Ahmednugger have promulgated very strict rules in their society. The weavers of Poona have made it a rule that any one seen drinking among them will be liable to a fine of Rs. 5, and in default he will be excommunicated. Persons found drunk among the gardeners of Ahmednugger have been subjected to the ignominious punishment of having a bottle hung round their necks, and made to go round the city. These kinds of punishments are much needed."

THE METHUEN SETTLEMENT, BECHUANALAND.—The progress already made augurs well for the future success of this Settlement. Those who have gone out have written home to say how perfectly satisfied they are with all the arrangements made for their reception, and speak in the highest terms of the climate and the perfect adaptability of the soil for all farming purposes. These letters can be seen at the office, 2, Waterloo-place, S.W. Retired Anglo-Indians who are considering what to do with their sons cannot do better than satisfy themselves of the bond fides of the Settlement and see the courteous secretary. They will learn that with an outlay of £600 a young man is provided with a farm of 3,000 acres, a house, necessary farm implements, guns, saddlery, &c., as per schedule, stock (25 head of cattle, 100 sheep, and two horses), a first-class passage to Cape Town, first-class rail to Kimberley, and conveyance thence by road to the property. Instruction and assistance in farming is also furnished him free of charge on his own farm by experienced colonial farmers engaged for the purpose. A well is provided for each homestead. By this arrangement the settler knows definitely the amount of capital he requires to cover all his expenses from leaving England, and to start him on a sound footing in the colony. To approved settlers part of the amount specified may be advanced, and, where desired, additional land and stock can be had on very favourable terms. A Government title will be given with each grant of land. The climate is excellent, and entirely suited to Englishmen, and Dr. Norman M'Leod on a late occasion observed: "he knew of no greater privilege than to be a pioneer, especially in the land of the future—Africa."

CIVIL SERVICE OF INDIA.—The following gentlemen are declared by the Civil Service Commissioners to have obtained the first forty-four places in the recent open competitive examination for the Civil Service of India, but their selection is conditional on their passing a medical examination, which will be held in London in the course of a few days. ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 16, 1888.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMY COMMANDS.

THE Anglo-Indian Press has once more reopened the discussion regarding the retention or abolition of the present system of the Presidential Army Commands. Upwards of nine years ago a Commission, of which the late Sir Ashley Eden was President, was appointed in India by Lord Lytton's Government to report on "what share of the unavoidable reductions in public expenditure can be borne by the military charges without injury to the general efficiency of the Army, and in what manner such savings can best be effected." That Committee recommended, in the interests of efficiency as well as of economy, the abolition of the system of the Presidential Armies; but as the suggestions of the Commission were not favourably viewed in certain influential quarters, efficiency and economy were put out of mind, and things have remained as they were ever since. There is still in India three Commanders-in-Chief, with Personal and Headquarters Staff for each, and each acting pretty independently of the others. Sir Frederick Roberts is at present nominally Commander-in-Chief of all the Forces in India, but his control over the Bombay and Madras armies is of the very slightest, except as regards the movements of British troops to and from the limits of those Presidencies. The Commission recommended that the Madras and Bombay armies should pass from the control of the local Governments under the direct orders of the Commander-in-Chief and the Government of India; and this recommendation met with the general approval of the Press and the Services, with the exception of certain interested discontents. Nothing, however, has been done towards carrying out the Commission's recommendation; but public opinion having been again turned to the subject, the Press is agitating the question once more. The Pioneer and the Civil and Military Gazette, which may be considered the leading representative organs of military opinion in India, are strongly in favour of the change; the Times of India is equally strongly against it. But the grounds of objection urged by the last named paper have no reference to economy or efficiency. They are purely sentimental. If the Bombay and Madras armies should pass from the control of the local governments they would be relegated to a subordinate position. "As our readers are aware, under the new scheme the new Bengal Army would be divided into two army corps, the Punjabi regiments forming one, the Hindustani regiments the other. Well, the Punjabi regiments being considered to contain the best fighting men in India would form what an officer recently lecturing at Simla called the first or fighting line, while the Bengal Army Corps, the Bombay Army Corps, and the Madras Army Corps would sink almost at once into the secondary position of reserves." This is merely an assertion, but we fail, even if it were fact, to see the evil of it. But the reason assigned for retaining a Bombay Commander-in-Chief is a curious one. It appears that General Hardinge when in that position got an order of Sir Donald Stewart's, which was hard upon the widows of Bombay Sepoys dying on service out of the Presidency, rescinded. This will show, says the Editor triumphantly, that a Bombay Commander-in-Chief has his uses. If this be all that can be said in favour of retaining such an office, it is little indeed; but this is all that the Times of India has to say in favour of it. The Civil and Military Gazette is more sensible and logical. "It is curious," it says, "that more than fifty years ago the necessity for a reform in the administration of the Indian Army was urged by one of the ablest and most liberal-minded of the Governors-General of India. So far back as 1831 Lord William Bentinck advocated the complete severance of the connection between the local administration and the Armies, and the amalgamation of the Military administration of the country upon a simple and definite plan under one central authority. And yet for fifty-seven years the Indian Government has been plodding on—spending huge sums, and suffering inconvenience of no ordinary kind—for the sole object of maintaining the antiquated Presidential system and—tell it not out among the Philistines—the loaves and fishes in the way of good Staff appointments which the maintenance of that system produced. It is most certainly time that we should abandon the additional expense, and the grave inconvenience, caused by the continuance of the present obsolete system, in order to reconstruct the Military system of India on a simple basis suited to the present condition of the country."

The arguments in favour of the abolition of the present obsolete and extravagant system may be unanswerable; but old abuses die hard, and the temptation to keep the loaves and fishes within grasp is always a strong and abiding instinct even in military human nature.

THE SIMLA TOWN HALL.—A correspondent writes:—Our new Town Hall will, in a few weeks' time, present a very curious appearance. It has been found that, with the funds available, it is impossible to make the building thoroughly water-tight without using corrugated iron and accordingly the ball-room, the band-gallery and the south staircase will be roofed over with the shining sheets which destroy the picturesqueness of all Indian hill-stations. The flat roofs will be asphalted, and when the stone work of the outer wall has all been "pointed" it is hoped that rain or snow will never penetrate again into ball-room, theatre, or library. If what one knows as Allahabad tiles had been used at first, similar to those which cover some of the public offices, this corrugated horror might have been avoided; but it is now too late, I fear, to protest against the new scheme particularly as the Municipal Committee have only funds just sufficient to carry out these cheap alterations. We must be thankful to get a building that does not leak like a sieve and must soothe our injured aesthetic feelings as best we may.

India in Parliament.HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 11.*WILD BIRDS IN INDIA.

In reply to Mr. J. MACLEAN,
 Sir J. GORST said: The Act as to wild birds referred to received the assent of the Governor-General on the 21st of October, 1887. It has, therefore, been scarcely long enough in operation to see whether it will be effective to prevent the evils complained of in the question.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACTS IN MADRAS.

In reply to Mr. W. M'LAREN,
 Sir J. GORST said: The orders of the Government of India for the suspension of the Contagious Diseases Acts in Madras, Bombay, and Bassein were issued on the 19th of May. The Secretary of State has been informed, in answer to an inquiry made by him, that in Bombay the suspension did not take place till the 30th of June; but that the Government of India is making inquiries into the reason for this delay.

INDIAN COTTON MILLS.

In reply to Mr. S. SMITH,
 Sir J. GORST said: The careful attention of successive Secretaries of State and Governments of India has been from time to time given to the subject of factory labour in India. A Commission was appointed ten years ago, and reported as described in the question of the hon. member for Oldham. Act No. XV. of 1881 regulates factory labour and restricts the employment of children. A special report on Indian factories was recently drawn up by Mr. Jones, formerly inspector of factories in Bombay, which is printed as an appendix to the report of the Chief Inspector of Factories (in this country) for the year ending the 31st of October, 1887. On the 3rd of May a despatch was sent by the Secretary of State in Council to the Government of India calling attention to this report, and asking for an early report on the working of the Indian Factory Act, and inquiring whether it is proposed to modify the Act in the direction of additional stringency. To this despatch the Secretary of State is now awaiting a reply.

INFANT MARRIAGE IN INDIA.

The Earl of NORTHBROOK asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had received any information from the Viceroy of India on the subject of the reported recent action of the Princes of Rajpootana regarding the Hindoo custom of infant marriage. He said the Princes of Rajpootana held the highest rank in Hindoo society in India, and the associations connected with their history not only showed the bravery of the men, but also the heroism of the women. If the reports he had seen were correct the Native Princes of Rajpootana had come forward voluntarily to make the greatest social reform that could be introduced into Hindoo society in India. The custom of infant marriages in India had been productive of greater misery to a greater number of the women of that country than any other custom, and if the Rajpootana Princes had made such alterations in the custom in their own territory as would mitigate the existing evil they deserved the thanks of every one who was a well-wisher of India for the enlightened view they had taken of this important social question. (Hear, hear.)

Viscount CROSS was quite sure that not one word had fallen from the noble earl which was not deserved by the Rajpootana Princes. (Hear, hear.) They were the leaders of the Hindoo race, and any example set by them would, he was sure, have the widest effect throughout India. (Hear, hear.) He was very happy to say that the rumour which had reached the noble earl was strictly correct. (Hear, hear.) There had been no greater reform made in India, and he looked upon it as one of the greatest advances that had taken place there during the present century. The step which the Rajpootana Princes had taken might lead to changes such as no man living could foresee, so far as the health, comfort, and welfare of the Native Indians were concerned. Colonel Walker, in October last, addressed a circular to all political officers on the subject of the adoption by the Rajpootana Princes of a set of resolutions regulating the ages at which marriages could take place, and suggested that a large representative committee should assemble in March from each of the States to consider the question. His suggestion met with the heartiest approval of the chiefs, and at a meeting they, among other things, unanimously passed a rule that in future no girl should be married under the age of fourteen and no boy under the age of eighteen, unless there had been a contract of marriage existing previous to the meeting. This announcement had been received with great satisfaction throughout the country, and he agreed that it was one of the greatest steps in advance that had been taken in India. The despatch which had come from India on the subject was one of great interest, and if the noble earl would move for its production he would be very glad to lay it on the table. (Hear, hear.)

The Bishop of CARLISLE said he was sure that the intelligence the noble viscount had given to the House would be received throughout England with most extreme joy.

The Earl of KIMBERLEY said that though he welcomed, as every one must, the announcement of the noble viscount, there seemed to him to be one consideration which ought not to be overlooked, and that was the initiative of the chiefs themselves. (Hear, hear.) All who knew anything of India were aware that many great changes proceed from the chiefs themselves. Such an event as this, the initiative being taken by such an important class as the Rajpootana Princes, was likely, he thought, to prove a precedent which would work to the permanent interest of the country.

Viscount CROSS said the circular would not have been issued if it had not been known that the Princes themselves were in favour of the change.

The subject then dropped.

JULY 13.

INDIAN STAMPED PAPERS.

Mr. HANBURY asked the Under-Secretary for India whether the competition for the supply of Indian stamped papers had yet been settled; whether it was the fact that in the early part of the year Mr. Purcell, the Comptroller of Stamps, reported to the Secretary of State or to the Board of Inland Revenue, acting as his agents in this matter, that stamps which now cost £34,000 a-year could, upon competition be obtained for some £19,500; whether the Comptroller's estimate had been borne out by the result of the competition; what was the name of the firm whose tender had been accepted; and what was the aggregate amount of that tender.

Sir J. GORST: I have to answer the first of the hon. member's questions in the affirmative. The second I have also to answer in the affirmative, the result being arrived at by the use of cheaper paper. With regard to the third question, I have to state that the new contract is £19,928 per annum instead of £34,840; but of this reduction of £14,912 £7,188 is due to the substitution by the Government of India of a cheaper paper for certain stamps, as allowed for by Mr. Purcell. Messrs. De la Rue and Co.'s tender was accepted. (Hear, hear.)

GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS IN CEYLON.

Sir E. WATKIN asked the Under-Secretary for the Colonies whether the Government railways in Ceylon were being worked for revenue and not to promote cultivation and trade; whether complaints had reached him that the high rates of transport charged with this object seriously affected the planters of coffee, tea and other crops in competing with planters in other countries; and whether he would have the subject investigated with a view to the rates being assimilated to the English or American standards.

Sir J. GORST for Baron H. DE WORMS, said: The Ceylon Government railways have been constructed and are being worked with the object of promoting cultivation and trade. There appear to have been no complaints of excessive rates, and there is no intention of assimilating them to the standards referred to. The railways having been constructed mainly for the benefit of the planting interest, it is not unreasonable that the charges should be fixed at such a rate as to throw upon that interest a fair share of the costs for which the whole tax-paying community is ultimately responsible. In these circumstances there would be no advantage in any special investigation.

MISS ALICE GOMES, the accomplished Eurasian cantatrice, has returned to India. A change is said to have taken place in her voice, during her stay in England, from pure soprano to contralto. Her stay in India is limited, as she has engagements in England in November; but during her short visit she will give two concerts in Calcutta, and probably one in Darjeeling and one in Simla.

COORG SAUCE.—The Civil Service Stores, Haymarket, have made a new departure, in that the directors have introduced an entirely new sauce, which from the accounts received promises to rival—if not surpass—most of the well-known sauces now in use. Anglo-Indians will be glad to learn that the sauce is made from the receipt of a Coorg Highlander, and, like all Indian condiments, is composed entirely of fruit, vegetables, and spices. Unlike English sauces, there is no liver in it, nor is it adulterated with fictitious ketchup. Coorg sauce is very well known in many parts of India, and gives the delicious flavour to English curries and chitskies for which Madras is so celebrated. Anglo-Indians and chefs will welcome Coorg sauce as a valuable culinary adjunct, and vegetarians will doubtlessly appreciate the enterprise of the directors of the Civil Service Stores for being the introducers of the only sauce suitable for vegetable made-dishes.

THE LARPENT CASE.

The following is the full text of the Government resolution on this subject:—The Governor-General in Council appointed Mr. F. E. Elliot, Bengal Civil Service, District and Sessions Judge of Allahabad in the North-Western Provinces, and Mr. C. R. C. Kiernander, Deputy Auditor-General, Commissioners to inquire under Section 2, Act XXXVII. of 1850, into the truth of the following charges against Mr. Frederic de H. Larpent, Deputy Accountant-General, Punjab, viz.:—

(i) That the said F. de H. Larpent, being Registrar of the Punjab University and a public servant, namely, Deputy Accountant-General, Punjab, did, at Lahore, on or about the morning of the 30th day of December, 1886, agree with one Ram Saran Das, son of Hira Lal of Sahabad, in the District of Umballa, a Mukhtar and candidate at the examination for Licentiate of Law, held at Lahore on 6th-11th December, 1886, knowing, or having reason to believe, that he was such a candidate, to receive from him a sum of Rs. 2,500 without lawful consideration, such sum being intended by the said Ram Saran Das to be paid by him to Mr. Larpent as a bribe, in the hope that in consideration thereof he (Mr. Larpent) would show favour to him by endeavouring to secure the successful passing by him of the said examination by improper and unfair means, the result of the said examination not having then been ascertained; and that the said Mr. Larpent did, in pursuance of the said agreement, receive from the said Ram Saran Das at Lahore sums aggregating Rs. 1,510 between the said 30th day of December, 1886, and the 7th day of February, 1887, without lawful consideration and not as a bona fide loan, but exclusively as a bribe as aforesaid; such conduct amounting to misbehaviour by the said Mr. Larpent as a public servant within the meaning of Section 2 of Act XXXVII. of 1850.

(ii) That the said Mr. F. de H. Larpent, being Registrar of the Punjab University and a public servant, viz., Deputy Accountant-General, Punjab, did, at Lahore, between the time at which the examination for the Licentiate of Law was held on 6-11 December, 1886, and the time at which its results were published, permit one Gunda Sing, son of Bishen Sing, to introduce into his presence certain persons whom he knew, or had reason to believe, to have been candidates at the said examination, he knowing or having reason to believe that the said Gunda Sing was then actively engaged in going about among the candidates who had presented themselves at the said examination, and leading, or endeavouring to lead, them or some of them to believe that their successfully passing or failing to pass the said examination depended upon their coming to terms with Mr. Larpent by satisfying such demands as he might make upon them or otherwise securing his aid; and that he knew, or had reason to believe, that he would be likely to thereby aid the said Gunda Sing in obtaining a gratification (whether for himself or for some other person or persons) other than legal remuneration from the said persons or from one or more of them; such conduct amounting to misbehaviour by the said Mr. Larpent as such public servant within the meaning of Section 2, Act XXXVII. of 1850.

(iii) That the said Mr. F. de H. Larpent, being Registrar of the Punjab University and a public servant, namely, Deputy Accountant-General Punjab, did, either before or during the examination for Licentiate of Law held at Lahore on 6th-11th December, 1886, at Lahore, either himself communicate to some other person or persons, or knowingly or by gross and culpable negligence permit some other person to ascertain some or all of the examination questions or their substance, such questions being then in his special and sole charge in his capacity of Registrar of the said University; such conduct amounting to misbehaviour by the said Mr. Larpent as such public servant within the meaning of Section 2, Act XXXVII. of 1850.

2. The Governor-General in Council has now received and considered the report of the proceedings of the Commissioners, together with the evidence recorded by them and their finding on that evidence. The Commissioners find that the first two charges are fully proved against Mr. Larpent; and that, having regard to the wording of the third charge, they are unable to acquit Mr. Larpent upon it. After a most careful consideration of the proceedings of the Commissioners, the Governor-General in Council is fully satisfied of the truth of the first two charges. His Excellency in Council is of opinion that, though there was laxity on the part of Mr. Larpent in supervising the examination for Licentiate of Law, held at Lahore on Dec. 6-11, 1886, the third charge is not established against him.

3. Having regard to the serious nature of the first two charges, the Governor-General in Council has with much regret come to the conclusion that no lighter punishment can be inflicted on Mr. Frederic de Hochepeid Larpent than dismissal from Her Majesty's Service; and accordingly directs that Mr. Larpent be so dismissed.

BECHUANALAND METHUEN SETTLEMENT.

PATRONS:

COLONEL the HON. PAUL METHUEN, C.B.C.M.; the Right Hon. LORD ELIBANK, R.N.

Gentlemen proceeding to this colony as settlers can for a sum of £200 purchase 3,000 acres of freehold land, to be selected on arrival. Through Bechuanaland lies the great trade route to Central Africa, and the extension of the railway from Kimberley to Vryburg, the centre of British Bechuanaland, is only a question of time. Gold has been discovered near the settler's. A settler writes: "I am delighted with my two farms; have plenty of water and trees. Shall be able to find a market for my produce. The Kaffir cattle, sheep, and goats on the veldt were in splendid condition. I consider the settlement should be a gigantic success."

BROAD ARROW

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1933

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it ... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1888.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Son e from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF
INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNECOUGHS, COLD,
ASTHMA,
BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances being eliminated), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This caution is necessary, as many persons desire purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 12th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaar, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances of the efficacy of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, Life Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE IS THE TRUE PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN OF EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. Is. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 39, Russell St., W.C.

Our Ladies' Watches are made with beautifully chased cases at the same Reduced Price. Gold and Silver Jewellery at Wholesale Prices. Cheques or Post Office Orders must be made payable to

J. B. DENT, Manager.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, JULY 21, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 3rd July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 1st July; and from Calcutta to the 30th June.

THE first meeting of the Legislative Council was to be held at Simla July 4th.

LORD CONNEMARA, who had a touch of the sun and suddenly fainted one day while engaged in official duties, is reported as now almost restored to health.

THE HON. C. G. MASTER, the Senior Member of the Madras Council, has been seriously ill at Ootacamund, and will take short leave immediately. Mr. Stokes, Chief Secretary, will become Provisional Member of Council; Mr. Price, Revenue Secretary, will act as Chief Secretary; and Mr. Grose, Acting Second Member of the Board of Revenue, will act as Revenue Secretary.

MR. DONALD SKEATON, Chief Secretary to the Government in Burma, will go home on five or six months' leave in August.

MR. T. J. C. PLOWDEN, the Resident in Kashmir, will not be relieved of that appointment till October.

COLONEL CONWAY GORDON is again in trouble with his eyesight: just at a time, too, when the new Railway Bill is likely to make an unusual demand on it. The agents of all the railway companies in India have been supplied with drafts of the Bill, and requested to communicate their views to their respective Boards at home; whilst the Boards are to communicate with the Secretary of State.

ACCORDING to the statement of the Subadar with Major Battye's party and the Inspector of Police, the tribesmen who made the recent attack on the Agror border numbered 150. Major Battye's sword and revolver were carried off, as also some weapons and the watches of both officers. Major Thompson, of the 3rd Sikhs, who proceeded to Oghi with reinforcements, is holding an inquiry.

AFFAIRS on the Gilgit border seem to make but little progress towards a final settlement. The Hunza and Nagar chiefs who attacked Chaproti have not yet evacuated the place, though it is alleged that they offered to do so. The Kashmir troops at Gilgit are now quite numerous enough to turn them out if necessary.

LETTERS from Herat to May 31 describe the northern frontier as quiet, so evidently Russian intrigue among the Salor Turkomans could have had no further effect up to that date. News of Ayub Khan's deportation to India is said to have caused some speculation in Herat, but it also put an end to the bazaar rumour that the town was likely to be made over to the young Sirdar.

LIEUTENANT J. I. HENDERSON, 10th Madras Infantry, was accidentally drowned at Myingyan, in Upper Burma, on the morning of June 28.

THE scheme for the redistribution of command in the Indian Army will probably take effect from October 1st.

THE question of the Sind-Punjab annexation is for the moment in abeyance, waiting for the opinion of the Central Provinces Government.

THE Report on Indian Education prepared in the Home Department has just been sent home to the Secretary of State. It takes stock of the progress made by the local Governments in carrying out the recommendations of the Education Commission.

COLONEL WARD, Minister at Bhopal, has been granted two months' leave from the 1st August next, if the state of his health allows of his deferring it so long.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GALBRAITH, Commanding at Karachi, succeeds General East in the Saugor district. The Duke of Connaught will appoint a cavalry brigadier to the Sind district, in succession to General Galbraith. Colonel Truman, lately commanding the 7th Dragoon Guards, had been selected, but it seems doubtful if he will return to India.

COLONEL HUTCHISON, Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry, retired on his half-pay lieutenant-colonelcy from July 1.

THE portrait of Sir Charles MacGregor was unveiled by the Commander-in-Chief in the presence of the Viceroy at Simla on July 3rd.

THE Willoughby Memorial over the gateway of the old magazine at Delhi has been completed.

SIR ASAM JAH, K.C.I.E., the new Minister of Hyderabad, has been invested with the K.C.I.E. and the Dewan-i-Khilaat with great ceremony.

SIR SALAR JUNG has been permitted to return to Hyderabad.

AN expedition of about a thousand strong will be sent in the cold weather to the Chittagong Hills from India to co-operate with troops who will penetrate the hills from the Burma side.

THE defective working of the Stamp Act in Burma was shown recently by the fact that 130 prosecutions were ordered by the Public Prosecutor within a few days.

GOVERNMENT is taking steps to protect the mineral wealth of Burma by issuing prospecting licenses to persons of approved respectability only.

IN the Northern Division of Burma all is reported quiet. The mounted infantry in Shwebo surprised the camp of Boh Nga Yaing, and took ten dacoits prisoners; and the military police at Yen killed eight, also capturing arms and stolen property.

AN agitation is developing in favour of the construction of a coast-line of railway between Calcutta and Madras.

MR. NOBEL's proposals regarding the petroleum investigations in the Punjab, and the suggestions to form a restricted company to carry out the work, are under consideration.

THE Umballa Treasury narrowly escaped destruction by fire on June 29.

COMMITTEES have been formed in Rangoon to raise funds for the purpose of perpetuating the memory of the late Rev. J. A. Colbeck.

THE Souter Memorial Fund has reached upwards of Rs. 20,000.

HIS HIGHNESS the Maharaja of Cochin died on June 29.

THE reconstruction of the Ponnair and Gadilam bridges, in South Arcot, destroyed by the floods of 1884, has been sanctioned by the Madras Government.

ONE of the sections of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, Raj-Nandagaon to Raipur, forty-two miles, will shortly be completed.

THE total number of passengers on Indian railways during last year is returned at 95½ millions, of whom 89 millions were third class.

THE net Indian sea and land Customs revenue, exclusive of salt, for the first two months of the current financial year has amounted to Rs. 2,289,000, as compared with Rs. 2,480,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

VERY favourable reports are current relative to the discovery of gold in the Raichore district.

KHEMA NAIQUE, a resident of Indore, has been sentenced to seven years' penal servitude for harbouring the notorious outlaw, Tantia Bhil; an appeal against the decision was quashed.

DURING 1889 not more than 57,000 chests of Bengal opium will be offered for sale, and not more than 4,750 each month.

RAIN has fallen generally throughout all parts of India, and the prospect of good crops is more hopeful.

BOMBAY society is agitated by a very grave scandal. Mr. A. T. Crawford, C.M.G., commissioner of the first grade of the Bombay Civil Service, has been arrested. Though the nature of the charge is not stated, it is generally supposed it will be that of bribery and corruption, says the Standard correspondent at Bombay. Mr. Crawford, who entered the service in 1854, is now the highest but two on the list, has had a distinguished career, rising steadily to his present position. He was entrusted with the negotiations for the Anglo-Portuguese treaty in 1884, and for his services on that occasion was rewarded with the Companionship of St. Michael and St. George. Three other arrests have been made upon the information of a Brahmin. A later telegram states that Mr. Crawford has been released on bail to the amount of 70,000 rupees.

NOTES.

THE most important business which was being transacted at Simla, the headquarters of the Government of India, just before the Overland Mail now to hand, left was—burlesque. The Times of India publishes a telegram in big type from the official paradise, to the effect that "the principal event of the week has been the production of Captain Hobday's burlesque Bluebeard" and the Pioneer devotes several columns to the description of the piece and the acting, for the delectation of its home readers. The programme of official work which has to be gone through this season is, we are told in the same journal, "indeed a heavy one," but no mention is made of when the work is going to begin. In the meantime, "the play's the thing."

THIS is very irritating to the Calcutta journals, whose editors and staff were suffering the tortures of an unusually high temperature. It is not, therefore, surprising to find the complaints against the Simla exodus breaking out "all over," like prickly heat. The Englishman thinks that if the Government officials who are disporting themselves on the mountain must have a lower temperature to work in, they should be given a lower rate of salaries, a suggestion which the gods themselves consider as altogether beside the question.

"MAY not," says the Allahabad mouthpiece of the Celestials, "the Governor-General and his Councillors, the Secretaries and all who help to keep the State machinery in motion, claim that at least they should have a good climate in which to labour?" Of course, and therefore we can fully understand that in the burlesque "the song with the refrain 'Far, far away!'" was so much to the point that there were repeated demands for encore verses."

BUT we read also that "work in Calcutta seems to have become an impossibility, and even the High Court judges, who usually never cease their labours, have had to succumb. Ten have taken flight to Darjeeling." Heat affects people in different ways, but flight is a better remedy than that adopted by a Chinaman in Calcutta during those sultry days, who was observed at four P.M. on June 19 butting with his head as hard as he could at the base of the Ochterlony monument, "in order to rid himself of headache, the heat was so intolerable." The Pioneer is inclined to sneer at the Chief Justice of Bengal running away to Darjeeling, but it surely would not have had his lordship driven to the alternative illustrated by the Chinaman?

THE Uncovenanted Servants in India who have been agitating for a redress of grievances do not appear to be altogether of one mind as to what those grievances really are. Some consider that a mistake has been made in forcing the question of payment of pension in sterling; some are of opinion that it was also a mistake to reject the proposition of a fixed rate of exchange at 1s. 8d.; others hold that there are more serious grievances to be remedied than any arising from the fluctuating value of the rupee.

SOME of such grievances are mentioned. First—the rule which lays down that the services of an officer count towards pension only from his twenty-second birthday. It is pointed out that much valuable work is often done by members of the Service before attaining that age, and that such services should not be totally ignored.

AGAIN—to qualify for pension the Government requires thirty years' work from each of its Uncovenanted Servants. It is, therefore, impossible for any one to retire before the completion of his fifty-third birthday. As no other leave but privilege counts towards service, it almost invariably happens that an officer has but one option left him of retiring, and that is, on his attaining his fifty-fifth year. It is suggested to ask the Government to give its Uncovenanted officers either the option of retiring after twenty-five years' service, or permitting two years' leave to count in thirty years' service.

A CORRESPONDENT instances a third grievance:—"Whilst the Government of India has confined itself to the payment of pensions in rupees in the matter of furlough allowances, it seemed that its action was far more liberal. Half average salary, the usual furlough allowance, has a maximum of Rs. 500 per month if paid in India, and £150 a quarter if paid at the home treasury of the Government of India. To those who come under the more favourable rules the maximum leave allowance is, if paid at the home treasury of the Government of India, £200 a quarter, and, if paid in India, Rs. 666 2-3 a month. In both these instances just quoted the rupee is reckoned at two shillings—and yet, when I was in England a short time back, I received my furlough allowance at the exchange of the day."

AT the meeting held at Simla some of the speakers went out of their way to contrast the treatment by Government of its Uncovenanted Servants with the consideration shown towards the Covenanted, and one speaker went so far as to hint that the former were as good, if not better, men. A writer who signs "Uncovenanted" to a letter to the Bombay Gazette very properly rebukes this line of argument as both impolitic and misleading, and it is to be hoped that his rebuke will have some weight with those who, with the very best intentions, are really injuring their own cause. He says:—"I have no doubt there are as good men in our service as can be found in either the Civil or the Military—but are there as many good men to be found in our ranks as in those of the services? We have few powerful friends, and should hesitate in making any enemies. Such remarks as those made at Simla will only tend to intensify the feeling that already exists against the Uncovenanted Service, and cannot, therefore, be of the slightest benefit to those who only seek to redress their grievances, and who have no wish to make invidious comparisons with members of services famed for their zeal and ability."

THE gallant old Subahdar of the 5th Goorkhas who behaved so splendidly when Lieut.-Colonel Battye, of his own regiment, and Captain Urmston were killed in the late affray with the tribes of the Black Mountain, was three times recommended in the campaign of 1879-80 for the "Order of Merit" by his commanding officer, the present Major-General Alfred FitzHugh, C.B. On the last occasion he went to the assistance of a wounded English officer under a hot fire, and brought him to a place of safety. A correspondent writing to a military contemporary asks: "What will be done for this grand Native officer, who already possesses the three decorations of that which to Native troops is equivalent to the "Victoria Cross"—the "Order of Merit?"

VERY little has appeared in the Press regarding the recent Dacoit Campaign, for it was nothing less, in the neighbourhood of Jhansi and Gwalior. The general "Plan of Campaign" on the British side appears to have been to send policemen armed only with swords against dacoits with firearms, which not unnaturally resulted in a loss of seven men. Several dacoits were, however, killed, and the whole body driven into Gwalior territory. Here the troops turned out with artillery, and what was practically a pitched battle took place, in which the troops may be said to have annihilated the enemies of the public peace. What, under other circumstances, might have become an internal political complication has apparently been passed over in silence both by the Government and the Gwalior Durbar, viz., the fact that the British police drove the dacoits into Gwalior territory and attacked them there.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

A LESSON FROM CALCUTTA.

(Madras Mail.)

We have before us Volume IV. Part I., of the Journal of the Health Society for Calcutta and its suburbs. It is impossible to over-estimate the philanthropy and usefulness of the work upon which this Society is engaged. The Europeans dwelling at the seat of Government groan under a Municipality which, they allege, does not show the same alacrity to remove the causes of the thousand-and-one stench that poison the air in the City of Palaces, as did its predecessors in the Government Department, which formerly attended to the sanitary requirements of the community. Ever since the beginning of this century Calcutta has been a battlefield for the goddess Hygeia and "ye nymphs that reign o'er sewers and sinks;" the former has indeed succeeded in establishing her camp, but her adversaries are Protean; and require as much killing as the many-headed Hydra. The inhabitants of the northern capital have much the same grievances as the people of Madras. They complain of insufficient water, defective drainage, agglomerations of Pariah Natives, Mahomedan burial-grounds productive of noxious gases, tanks that are, for a variety of purposes, horrible to contemplate, and invite the germs of cholera and typhoid; milk mixed with the water of the above-mentioned tanks which is supposed to be a source of scarlet fever and tubercular disease in addition to those already specified; a Conservancy and scavenging department which does not keep down the accumulation of the products of putrefaction and decay; the emptying of sewers too near the city, with the natural consequence that fetid emanations are carried there by the breezes; the need of building regulations to prevent overcrowding and meet the requirements of drainage; the spread of leprosy due to imperfect segregation, through the leper hospitals permitting their patients to go abroad and beg from house to house; and such other minor abominations as are generally to be met with in every large Eastern city. The leper question is one which closely concerns the whole of India, and admits of an easy remedy. The communicability of leprosy is now generally accepted by the medical faculty, though direct proof has not been obtained. Its hereditary transmission is an open question; for heredity in disease may itself be considered to be due to contagion or infection. The ancient rulers of India did not permit lepers to go about amongst the people; consequently they kept the disease under control. Natives say that the disease has been on the increase during the British Raj. In Europe it has practically been stamped out; in Norway, the last European country in which it was prevalent, stringent regulations were enforced and careful records were kept. The total numbers of lepers officially registered in all Norway had, between the years 1856 and 1880 inclusive, diminished from 2,863 to 1,382. In the subsequent quinquennium the decline was from 938 to 645, or over 31 per cent. These figures speak for themselves, and prove the importance of remedial legislation. The Mahomedan system of burial is graphically described in the journal. The corpse wrapped in a winding sheet is placed at the bottom of a grave four feet deep. A foot and a-half below the surface a platform of sticks and mats is laid across, and over this earth is filled in and heaped up. This close chamber becomes a gasometer of foul and dangerous gases. Heat and moisture cause the covering of earth to crack. Pestilential vapours escape and are wafted by the breeze into the dwellings of the living. We are relieved to hear from the Municipal Health Officer that this practice does not obtain in Madras. The Health Society of Calcutta has not been very long in existence, but it has proved itself a substantial benefit to that city. It acts as a stimulus to the Municipality, and, by means of its literature, disseminates a knowledge of the laws of health. The other Presidency towns would do well to follow the example it has set. Medical men are always to be found ready to give a portion of their time to such objects, and there should be no difficulty in enlisting an influential President, an active Secretary, and a sufficiency of subscribers to make a start.

THE DEATH OF MR. GRANT.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The death, in jail, of Mr. James Grant, late Manager of the Karachi branch of the Bank of Bombay, is a sad ending of as sad a story as it has been our painful task for some time to chronicle. Although the unhappy gentleman has been ailing, his death was apparently unexpected, and awakens the more pity in that his sentence has only three weeks left to run. Lenient as this sentence was, apart from the circumstances of the offender, it was yet severe enough to carry with it a sentence of death; for there can be little doubt that the shock of shame and remorse has hastened the sad end. The less that is now said of the unhappy past the better; and we would only pause to point out the real inequality of equal sentences for similar offences being passed on different classes of offenders. To the professional swindler or hardened criminal, a sentence of six months' imprisonment carries scarcely any terrors. To the man who has lived for many years respected and beloved by a large circle of friends—who for unknown reasons has erred from the straight path of honesty once in his life, and is easily detected—such a sentence, even if it bring in no tragic result as in the case of Mr. Grant, yet carries with it a lifelong pain of degradation and sorrow. We wish we could see this distinction more boldly and honestly affirmed by our Judges. Even in this instance, when the attempt was made to have the sentence upon Mr. Grant enhanced, the Court based their refusal to do so, not on the enhanced and justifiable ground that the sentence was ample for this particular offender—although in their hearts they must have known that it was so—but on the feeble excuse that there was no necessity to be severely just in this case, because the newspapers had not taken it up as a class or race question! The implication, of course, is, that if the Native Press had raised a clamour the Court would have been guided thereby in its decision—a preposterous doctrine which, we fear, will not be thrown away on Native journalists. The decision, in fact, however equitable in its bearing, may be found in the long run to have done not a little to bring British administration of justice into contempt. The judges have plainly said to the Native community:—"When an Englishman has received a light sentence for any offence, if you howl loud enough about it we will make it more severe." Passing from this side issue to the sad event of which we have written, we would only say of Mr. James Grant, what we feel sure is the opinion of all—that however much he may have deserved his punishment, he deserved our sympathy also, and so tragic an end was not necessary to close the mouth of malice over his tomb.

THE GHOORKHAS.

(Rangoon Times.)

We have at times drawn the attention of the local Government to the advisability of employing Goorkha instead of mixed Burmese and Punjabee military police. It is not only because the Goorkha sepoys are hardly mountaineers, better able to endure hardship and continuous fight in a mountainous climate, but it is also because they have a constitutional tendency to be used to such materials for diet, as are procurable in Upper Burma; and to learn the dialect of this country, and assimilate themselves with its people in a comparatively short period, that the Goorkhas are just the sort of men that we want in this province, to spread terror and put down rebelliousness with a high hand, and make dacoity scarce. The fitness of the Goorkha Police cannot be better verified than by the manifest marks of bravery and undaunted resolution evinced by the small body of Goorkhas at Mogoung under the command of Lieutenant O'Donnell and Mr. Elliot. Military authorities agree in holding that there is not a people in the whole Empire that will beat the Goorkha in hand-to-hand fight, while in perseverance, in the quality of enduring hardships, in obedience to the commands of their superior officers, in rapid manoeuvres, in hardy physique, and, in general bravery and gentlemanliness after the fight is over, the Goorkhas are unsurpassed by any race in the Eastern World, and are the marvel of the West. Moreover, the Goorkhas are the only sepoys that we have got who properly understand the tactics of hill fights, and can act up to such tactics. Where the Punjabi or the Pathan, with his cumbrous accoutrements, would take three minutes in ascending under fire a hillock, and getting at, say three dacoits firing from its summit, and would most probably fall wounded before reaching half the ascent, the agile Goorkha, lightly habited, and by means of his tactics would not only get up to the top in a minute, but will make the three gentlemen there excellent edge of Kooki before they have had any time to fire their odd old-fashioned muskets more than once, and use their awkward, unhandy and rudely-made dahs, spears, and other nondescript implements of primitive war-fare.

A FACTORY ACT WANTED FOR INDIA.

(Indian Spectator.)

It can hardly be denied that the cotton and other mills in Bombay have retrograded since Mr. Jones was here. In the case of the former the stoppages of the machinery twice a-day for half-an-hour each have become a thing of the past. The mills now only stop at 12 noon for 10 minutes for oiling the engines, and in some mills they pride themselves upon having such good engines that they run from sunrise to sunset without once stopping. Further, when Mr. Jones was here they used to stop every other Sunday for cleaning the boilers. But now the mills have extra boilers, so that a stoppage for this purpose is not necessary. This we look upon as a little short of slavery, and a law alone, we fear, can stop it. It is true the hands get a few of their Native holidays in most of the mills, but, as Mr. Jones says, they have to attend without pay for half the day, for the purpose of cleaning up. There are, we understand, double the number of spinners to each frame here than there are in England, and hence, while half are taking their meals, the other half mind the machines. They commence work in this hot weather at 5.30 and work till 6.30—13 hours, probably 13½ hours. They have to walk three miles to their homes in the evening and three miles back in the morning, so that 15 to 15½ hours are daily consumed in work, and the remaining 8½ to 9 hours at home—not in sleep, for the morning meal has to be cooked before they leave, and the evening meal after they return. The officials themselves and the agents would all be glad, we are told, for the Government to step in, and and pass a 10 hours' law for all hands, men, women and children, also enforce stoppage on every half Saturday for cleaning up, and on every Sunday—not because it is Sunday, but because it gives one day's rest in seven, and allows the hands time to do their marketing in the large and cheaper markets and time to wash their clothes, and also allows the officials a little rest. The Millowners' Association appear to be helpless in the matter, and so must be individual mills, for competition is now so keen that each mill would secretly try to gain a little extra profit by working half-an-hour or an hour longer unless it were declared illegal. Those who know best ask why the English Factory Act might not be introduced into India with most of its rigorous restrictions, though confined to cotton wool, and jute spinning and weaving mills? The immediate effect of this, we think, would be that, as the Indian mills have the monopoly of China trade in 20s. yarns and coarser counts, there would be a diminished production; the prices would go up, and all the mills would make a larger profit, and this larger profit would be permanent for some years at least, until new mills increased the production, and brought down the prices again. The hands used to sleep during the two half-hours in common in Mr. Jones's time, and it was a sight to see the wretched people lying all over the mill floors like an array of dead bodies. Such rest is impossible now—the police peons are at hand to see that they do not skulk. Sleep during the day is an impossibility.

MORAL TEXT BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Is it wise to catch a lad before he goes to College and put him through one course or semi-mechanical process of "being good," and then make him go through two similar processes, while he is reading for his B.A. degree? Will it not generate too many personalities (if one may be pardoned the word) between professors and students? If the thing be carried too far the sympathy that should exist between the teacher and his scholars will too often chill under reactionary tendencies. And who is to write or compile all these guides or morals? The founders of Christianity, and Mahommedanism, and Buddhism, and Hinduism, have all in their own grand ways set their hands to "moral text-books," yet none of these will quite meet the general view in this land. Who is to get the Commission, then? We suppose it may lie between Mr. Samuel Smiles or Sir Roper Lethbridge. The more we think over these moral text-books the less we like them. The man who wrote "Be good, my child, and let who will be clever," would never have advocated the teaching of "being good" on a par with the teaching of mathematical equations or the theory of value. He knew that the secret was the being led to "do noble deeds, not dream them all day long." The text-books have too much dreaming and scheming for our taste; probably they will never be successfully compiled.

THE U. C. S. AGITATION.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Much as we sympathise with the agitation of the members of that great conglomerate of officials known as the Uncovenanted Service, we think the present plan of endeavouring to obtain redress is likely to fail for several reasons. An examination into the constitution of the congeries of services sought to be classed as the great "Uncovenanted" shows that there is nothing in common between the employes of the several departments but the name; and that the principles of recruitment and employment in its various branches are so different that no basis can exist for a combination for the purposes of agitating for general concessions. The great factor in determining the character of the rules to be granted to an Indian official must be the market in which he is engaged, and not his nationality. Accordingly, we find that those branches of the Service, whether Covenanted or Uncovenanted, which it is necessary, for any reason, wholly or chiefly to recruit in England, rightly receive more liberal treatment in regard to pay, furlough, position, and pension than those which can be efficiently supplied from the local Indian market. Stated in another way, we wish to make it clear to the agitators that the European members of all the departments termed Uncovenanted have no common ground to go upon. It, therefore, behoves the officers of each department, who for any special reasons have sufficient grounds for agitating for greater privileges than they now enjoy, to organise their agitation departmentally. There are many departments which can never expect to obtain better rules than they now possess; and for members of such departments to join in the agitation is merely to injure the cause of the others. The question, it seems to us, is not a race question at all, and cannot succeed on the basis of asking for concessions for Europeans in the various Services.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Uncovenanted Service in India cannot but be disappointed at the result of Mr. H. S. King's persevering efforts in Parliament and elsewhere to obtain redress for their grievances. The minority of fifty-five who supported Mr. King on Friday night must have been below his expectations, since at the meeting at Simla last week a solid phalanx of eighty members was spoken of as prepared to follow him into the division lobby. If the division was disappointing there was nothing to mitigate disappointment in the terms in which Sir John Gorst resisted the motion. There seems a distinct invitation to abandon hope in Sir John Gorst's judgment that the complaint regarding leave and pensions is groundless. After this it is difficult to see what advantage can follow from carrying on the agitation while the present Secretary of State is in office, unless, indeed, the Government can be expected to yield to persistent agitation by the Uncovenanted Service as they have just yielded to the persistent agitation of the Temperance party against the Compensation Clause of the Local Government Bill. But, as a matter of practical politics, the service cannot build a very large edifice of hope upon a possibility of that kind. Sir John Gorst having characterised the claims of the Service as groundless will not be converted in a hurry to a more favourable and, we may add, a juster view. The India Office, we should have thought, would have been precluded from taking up so uncompromising an attitude by Lord Cross's proposal to the Indian Government to compromise the claims of the Service by granting pensions at a fixed rate of 1s. 8d. in the rupee—an offer which is freely spoken of now, though when we announced three months ago that it be made those who knew nothing about the matter told us with characteristic confidence that it had never been made. The attitude of the India Office in Friday's debate was as inconsistent therefore as that of the Simla meeting, in refusing anything short of 2s. in the rupee, was impolitic. The debate and the meeting together seem to us to have postponed for an indefinite period the adjustment of the claims of the Service, some of which are very reasonable. We regret that this should be so, but there is no advantage in ignoring so obvious a truth.

BENGAL

THE Calcutta Trades Association has followed up the representation of the Chamber of Commerce and the Calcutta Municipality with a letter on the subject of a grant from the Hughli Bridge Funds towards the proposed new street from it to Sealdah.

AN address was presented to His Highness the Maharaja of Durbhunga on the 17th June by the residents, zemindars, and raises of Durbhunga. In the course of his reply he said:—"Gentlemen, in the address just read over to me, you have lavished encomiums on me which I do not really deserve, but if they are the true echoes of your heart I bow to them. Gentlemen, I do not recollect whether ever in my life I have done anything to displease any sect of my fellow-countrymen, and if I have done so, I hope, gentlemen, you will excuse me, as there is a common adage: 'Man-kind errs and God forgives.' In honour of this public reception and the general rejoicing of my fellow-townsmen at the position which I have been able to receive from the paternal liberal Government, I now declare to you, gentlemen, that the next quarterly municipal taxes of all the residents of this town will be paid off from the Raj treasury; and that for three days there will be Minah Bazaar at the Raj expense, open to you in particular and to the public in general, for your and their amusement and pleasure."

ROY THE NARYAN BAHADUR, of Bhaugulpore, has again come forward with another laudable scheme, namely the organisation of a national orphanage. At an inaugural meeting held lately at the local college premises, numerous letters and telegrams from the Nawabs, Maharajas, and Rajas of Bengal and Behar, testifying their sympathy, were read, and the question as to the desirability of establishing the orphanage was discussed. For the present the institution will embrace the sister provinces of Bengal and Behar, but the projectors contemplate giving it a national character. The head-quarters will be at Bhaugulpore with branches in other centres. The principal object in view is not only to afford relief, in the shape of food and clothes, to orphan boys and girls, but to train them in such a way as to enable them to earn an honest living for themselves.

The following is a characteristic extract from an article in the Indian Mirror:—"The natives of this country are often twitted by their conquerors because they carry their bhat-log along with them to whatever appointments they get. But, gods! look at the favouritism of the ruling race. Cousins, nephews, nephews' cousins and cousins' nephews, brothers and brothers-in-law, all are provided in poor India, and draw princely salaries, too, out of her heart's blood."

MADRAS.

At the meeting of the Madras Harbour Board on the 9th June a G. O. was read forwarding a note upon the north-east entrance to the Harbour, with plan showing alteration of design proposed by Sir Guildford Molesworth, and it was resolved that the Engineer be requested to state whether the proposed plan will not necessitate a great deal more of the old work being taken up, and therefore involve further delay and enhanced expenditure. The Trustees took the opportunity to invite the attention of Government to the very great delay which has occurred in disposing of this question of the design, entailing as it does an enormous waste of money in keeping up a large establishment which cannot be fully utilised.

A DONATION of Rs. 1,000 has been made to the Friend-in-Need Society, Madras, by Mrs. Amelia Sam, widow of the late Mr. Andrew Seth Sam, a merchant of Madras in days gone by.

MR. FRANK WATTS has been promoted to be Assistant Dewan of Travancore, on a salary of Rs. 1,000 per mensem. "The Maharajah of Travancore," says the Western Star, "cannot be too highly commended for so adequately recognising the long and faithful services, and the abilities of one who has ever made it his constant study to discover and follow the best means of proving himself a worthy servant of a worthy Government."

A NEW Fine Arts and Industrial School is about to be opened at Trevandrum by Government.

THE proposal to hold a public meeting in Madras to send an address of condolence to the Queen does not, according to the Madras correspondent of the Bombay Gazette, find favour with a portion of the Press there; it is doubtful if the meeting will be held.

MONSIEUR HAAS, of Upper Burma notoriety, who was appointed by the French Government as Consul for France at the Court of King Theebaw at Mandalay, arrived in Pondicherry from Calcutta on June 17.

A LOCAL paper says:—"It is some time now since the laying of the foundation stone of the Victoria Hospital for caste and gosha women, and the matter has almost faded from public memory. We are glad to find, however, that steps have been taken for rendering the new building a fait accompli. The Secretary of the Institution recently asked the Government that the Public Works Department might be instructed to construct the building according to the plans furnished by the Consulting Architect to Government, Mr. J. W. Brassington, and Government has consented to this, and has agreed to charge only 5 per cent for supervision and establishment."

BOMBAY.

THE Hon. F. Forbes Adam has been reappointed a member of the Council by H.E. the Governor of Bombay.

MR. JOLLEY, after forty-six years' service in the Bombay Pilotage Department, retired on June 22, and was presented with a service of silver plate by his brother officers. Sir Henry Morland made the presentation on behalf of the pilots.

At the meeting of the Corporation of Bombay on June 17 Rs. 67,000 was voted to purchase a site for an infectious diseases hospital at Khetwadi; and the report of the Special Committee on the Bombay Extension Committee's report was adopted.

HEAVY rain has been falling at Castle Rock and Braganza Ghaut on the W. I. P. Railway. It is reported that a portion of the railway line on Braganza Ghaut has been washed away, and the rest of the Ghaut line is considered unsafe for traffic. Traffic, it is further stated, has been stopped between Castle Rock and Marmagao.

THE Indian Spectator writes:—"Colonel Wilson's succeeding Sir Frank Souter as Commissioner of Police for Bombay will be welcomed by the public. He has already acted in the office and has otherwise established a claim to it. We trust to Colonel Wilson devoting himself more to his immediate official work than to other, civic or honorary, that may tempt him. We also hope he will be able to make his subordinates understand that they are not masters, but guardians—and paid guardians—of life and property in Bombay. Colonel Wilson may also encourage educated native gentlemen, who have the physique, to enter the higher grades of the department. This may look like meri adheli mat bhulio; but there would be less blundering and torture to be charged to the account of the police department if its official ranks contained a few more qualified natives, and the public would have more confidence in it then."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH AND PUNJAB.

PROPOSALS for extending the jurisdiction of Divisional Courts in the Punjab, and thus reducing the work of the Chief Court by diminishing the number of appeals, are at present under consideration.

PROPOSALS have been submitted to Government for demolishing the old mounted police lines at Peshawar, and converting the old Military Magazine and other buildings into quarters for the Border Militia Reserve.

A MEETING of the Fyzabad Anjuman was held lately to express condolence at the demise of the Emperor Frederick. Babu Ramsarandas, M.A., presided, and among those present were Babu Gokulchund, Rai Kaccoomal, Sheik Kadirbux, and Syed Rahimullah Shah.

BETWEEN the extreme heat and the hoarding of money by the merchants to lay in grain for the expected famine, the trade of Delhi is for the moment almost paralysed. As regards the famine, the merchants are perhaps counting their chickens a little early.

THE case of Mr. Fitch against Mr. Purcell, editor of the Indian Mail at Saharanpore, was heard at Mussoorie before Mr. Steel on June 25. The charge was criminal intimidation. The accused was found guilty and sentenced to Rs.200 fine, or in default to one month's rigorous imprisonment.

WITH regard to the statement that the late Captain Urnston had been tried by court-martial, the Pioneer is asked to say that he had not actually been brought before the court, though orders had been issued that it should assemble at Abbottabad. He was under arrest and was allowed to go to the Agror Valley for change of scene as he was suffering from melancholia. The fact of his being under arrest will account for his being unarmed when he met his death.

THE Sikh community have lost little time in thanking Government for the appointment of Sirdar Gurdial Singh to a Deputy Commissionership the other day. The following is a copy of a telegram sent a few days ago to his Honour the Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab:—"From the Chief Secretary, Khalsa Dewan. Khalsa Dewan met and resolved to offer on behalf of the Sikh community their heartfelt thanks to the Government for appointing Sirdar Gurdial Singh as Deputy Commissioner of Muzaffargarh."

THE opening day of the Simla Fine Arts Exhibition has been fixed for Aug. 25. Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab and the Sirdar Pertab Singh, of Jodhpore, will give their usual prizes, in addition to those generally offered by the Society. The Hon. Mr. Scoble will also offer one. Sir Guilford Molesworth's prize for photography was withheld last year by the advice of the judges, so wanting in merit were the specimens sent up for competition; but it will be advertised once more with a hope of better things resulting.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

A SCHOOL OF MUSKETRY will be formed at Poona on the 1st of August next.

It has been decided to amend the absurd order in G. O. No. 140 of 1883, so as to allow an adjutant or quartermaster of a Native regiment to hold the appointment of regimental transport officer when there is no other officer, not a staff officer, eligible for the duty.

NO. 4 COMPANY, BENGAL SAPPERS AND MINERS, will be withdrawn from Kaludanda to Rurki before the commencement of the rainy season. The bulk of the company, with British officers and non-commissioned officers and equipment, will be moved by rail from Najibabad, and the mules, under the charge of an escort of twenty Sappers, will march by road.

THE formation of a new Railway Corps of Volunteers has been sanctioned by the Government of India, designated the "Bengal-Nagpur Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps." The strength will be four companies of about fifty men each, which will allow one major, four captains and eight lieutenants. The railway members of the present Nagpur Rifles will be enrolled in the new corps, but this corps will be specially allowed to retain its adjutant, at least for some time to come.

THE transport in Burma is to be reduced to 50 elephants, 2,500 mules and 1,400 ponies, and to replace the latter by mules as they become unfit for work. The reduction of the ambulance transport to 215 dandies and 860 bearers, with a proportionate compliment of petty officers, will also be carried out at an early date, excess establishments being returned to India and temporary hands discharged.

BURMA medals were distributed at Mhow to the 7th Bombay Infantry on the 15th June. The regiment is said to be a very smart one.

THE temporary wound pension of £70 per annum awarded to Lieutenant J. H. de B. Harris, 2nd Battalion the Liverpool Regiment, for the wound received by him in action with dacoits in Upper Burma, has been continued for another year.

THE Government of India have refused to allow Volunteers who may join the Presidency Volunteer Reserve Battalion exemption from income-tax and the right to travel on State railways by a higher class of carriage than that paid for.

LORD CONNEMARA, in distributing prizes to the Nilgiri Volunteer Rifles on June 26, said the shooting is the backbone of volunteering at home and in India, and assured the regiment of his interest in its efficiency. He stated it is probable that the Volunteers will soon be placed under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief instead of the Government, as at present. The step will be one in the right direction—incorporating the Volunteers more closely with the regular Army.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 18.

INDIAN STAMPS.

MR. HEATH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he would lay upon the table the terms of the contract recently entered into with Messrs. De La Rue for printing the Indian stamps and stamped paper.

SIR J. GORST: Yes, if moved for, the terms of the contract with Messrs. De La Rue for stamps and stamped paper will be laid on the table as an unopposed return.

GAMBLING IN INDO-CHINA.

In the Chamber of Deputies on the 17th inst. M. Constans explained the action of the authorities in Indo-China in authorising public gambling. In tracing the origin of the practice the Governor-General declared that the profits derived from games of chance belonged to the King of Cambodia, and he therefore feared that the suppression of gambling would have a prejudicial effect. M. Ternisien, the new deputy for Cochinchina, demanded that the matter should be made the subject of an interpellation in order that the House might receive some explanations concerning the state of affairs in Indo-China and the dispute between M. Constans and M. De La Porte, the Under-Secretary for the Colonies. The debate was fixed for the 18th.

M. Floquet moved on the 18th the postponement of the debate on M. Ternisien's interpellation upon the policy of the Government in the Indo-Chinese possessions. The proposal was agreed to, but M. De La Porte asked leave to reply to the remarks made by M. Constans on the subject of public gambling in Indo-China. The Under-Secretary for the Colonies opposed M. Constans's content on regarding the expediency of prohibiting the practice, and insisted upon the right of the Government to put a stop to gambling in Cambodia, on the ground that it was ruinous to the country.

One correspondent thus describes the proceedings:—"The Game of the Thirty-six Beasts" monopolised the attention of the Chamber of Deputies during a goodly portion of the afternoon of the 18th inst. Members, of course, were not indulging in this wicked jeu so dear to King Norodom of Cambodia and his interesting subjects. They were sitting in their places watching a lively passage-of-arms between M. De La Porte and M. Constans; but there was much merriment over the "Trente-six Bêtes," nevertheless, and the incident was unanimously pronounced to be as good as a play. The Colonial Under-Secretary said that it was one at which those who sought amusement from it invariably lost. King Norodom, who had a solid interest in maintaining it, had described it as "a national game," whereupon a profane Reactionary, amid roars of laughter from his friends, remarked that in the Far East it took the place of the fête of the Fourteenth of July. M. Constans, who was visibly ennuyé, called out from his bench that it was not he who had authorised the game. "No, but you keep it up!" retorted M. De La Porte. The Colonial Under-Secretary went on to remark that M. Constans had interpellated him after interpellating himself. "This is your Republican hierarchy! A resident-general interpellating his superior!" cried M. Paul de Cassagnac. "Finally," said M. de La Porte, "I declare to M. Constans that I have suppressed the Game of the Thirty-six Beasts on account of the dangers which it presents, and that it will remain suppressed." The House applauded this act of vigour and morality, and then M. Constans spoke a word pro domo sua. He contended that it was hardly logical to abolish "one" out of a number of games which were reprehensible from a strictly moral point of view. Moreover, if all these games were suppressed, the King of Cambodia would lose all his revenue, and a new policy would have to be inaugurated. He still maintained that the "Thirty-six Beasts" had been too hastily sent to the "rightabout."

THE AFFAIR NEAR OGHÍ.

The Civil and Military Gazette's correspondent gives the following account of the unfortunate affair which recently took place near the Oghi outpost and terminated in the deaths of Major Richmond Battye and Captain Urnston. The Goorkhas figure splendidly in the affair:—

On Monday, the 18th ult., at 4.30 A.M., Major Battye left the Oghi Fort with 1 subadar, 1 havildar, 3 naicks, 2 buglers, and 53 sepoy for a route march. He also took 18 policemen, the thanadar and some villagers. Accompanying Major Battye was Captain Urnston, who was unarmed, having nothing but a walking-stick. They proceeded up the Barchar spur for about seven miles, when an hour's halt was made at a spring of water for breakfast, after which a further advance was made until the crest of the Black Mountain ridge was reached. Here the party turned to the right—viz., north-east—making for the direction of Chitabat. After proceeding a short distance in this direction a few shots were fired at advanced guard, but were not replied to, as Major Battye had given the Goorkhas strict orders not even to undo their packets of ammunition, saying it was no his intention to fight, but merely to examine into the water supply of that portion of the Black Mountain.

At this point the thanadar, Captain Urnston and others all urged upon Major Battye that he should return; but he replied that there was no danger, and that these few shots had been fired by a few thieves. On approaching Chitabat heavy firing was opened upon the advanced guard, which Major Battye and Captain Urnston were accompanying, and the sound of heavy firing was heard in the direction of the rear guard. Shortly afterwards a report was brought from the rear that a havildar was mortally wounded. Upon this Major Battye ordered the advanced guard to seize a rising piece of ground in front of them, and to hold the same, but he gave no orders to the Goorkhas to commence firing. He then, with Captain Urnston, turned back and made for the wounded man, who was put into a dandy, picked up and carried off in the direction of the advanced guard. On the havildar being wounded Subadar Kishnabir Nagar Koti ordered his men to open their packets of ammunition and to fire. The enemy's fire at this point became very heavy, and Major Battye gave the Goorkhas orders to retire by sections until they reached the advanced guard, whence they were all to retire to Hatir, a village some way below the knoll which had been captured by the advanced guard and was being held by them.

Whilst the retirement was being carried out through the jungle, which was intensely thick, Captain Urnston received a bad wound on the back of his left shoulder, which was delivered with an axe by a man who had crept up unseen, and who ran away after inflicting the wound.

Some time after Subadar Kishnabir suddenly heard the bugler boy crying for help, saying the Major was attacked. He ran in that direction and saw Major Battye with a dreadful wound on his left shoulder, delivered from behind, parrying the blows of his assailant, and the subadar thereupon dashed in and drove his sword with both hands through the man's chest and dropped him dead. He then seized Major Battye's arm, who was feeling faint, and led him off; but, after going about 40 yards or so, Major Battye sank upon the ground and never spoke again. Captain Urmston, the subadar, the bugler boy, one naick, and three Sepoys were the only ones near when Major Battye fell, and Captain Urmston, standing by his body, ordered the remainder to form a ring round him, and then tying his handkerchief round his walking-stick he told the subadar to wave the same continually and cry out, "Sulah, Sayad Sulah, spare our lives, and Government will reward you." Much against the grain the subadar did this. At first only a very few of the enemy were attracted by this, the greater number having followed up the main body of Goorkhas, but they soon called others, and within half-an-hour a large number surrounded them, cutting their retreat in every direction except the steep khud.

The subadar now addressed the enemy, and, joining both hands together, prayed that they would allow them to retire unmolested with their officer's body, promising Rs. 500 for each life spared; but they only replied by abuse; and three men who were close by made a rush with drawn swords to cut him down, whereupon, taking up his revolver, he shot one dead, and the others ran away. The subadar saw it was useless praying for mercy, and having with him the wounded havildar's rifle and ten rounds of ammunition, which he had brought away, he ordered his small party to open fire, and he set the example himself. While the subadar was parleying with the enemy, the company, having all assembled by the advanced guard, began fighting their way down the far side of the ridge, making as directed for Hatir, and never suspecting anything had gone wrong with Major Battye and his party, but concluding he was pushing on the dandy with the wounded havildar.

Major Battye's party being now entirely cut off, the subadar shouted out, "Fight well!" "Now, mera buba, don't desert your Sahibs. If you must die, let some of these dogs die beside you." A rush was made upon Captain Urmston by some of the enemy, and Naick Dhan Sing Thapa, seeing this, dashed out with fixed bayonet and stabbed the man, but received a bullet in the arm and was cut down at once. Sepoy Inderbir Shapa thereupon rushed out with fixed bayonet, crying out, "My brother is dead, my brother is dead;" but was immediately knocked over with a large stone, and as he fell he lost his rifle. He jumped up and ran to the subadar, by whose side he sat. The subadar, seeing that Major Battye and Captain Urmston were both dead, having no rifle ammunition left, discharged the remainder of his revolver cartridges at arm's length, each shot taking effect, and then shouted, "Both our Sahibs are dead—save your own lives, sepoys!" With this he and sepoys Inderbir Thapa and Moti Ram Thapa, the sole survivors, jumped down the khud, rolled some distance, and, when they recovered their footing, ran as hard as they could for about 300 yards, after which they ascended for a short distance, and then hid. Sepoy Moti Ram got lost somehow in the run, and, therefore, only the subadar and Inderbir Thapa were left together.

The subadar had a bullet through his left thigh, one arm was useless from a blow of a stone, and his head was streaming with blood. For an hour he rested, being very tired, and then he and sepoy Inderbir Thapa rejoined the company, which they found drawn up at Hatir, with a non-commissioned officer calling the roll. The subadar at once took command, told the men what had happened, and marched back with them towards the spot where Major Battye and the rest had been killed. He also took some police and zemindars with him.

When about 600 yards off he fired a volley, advanced to 500 yards and fired a second volley, and a third volley at 400 yards, after which he advanced to within 150 yards of the bodies, and sent up some zemindars with charpoys, who shortly returned with Captain Urmston's body, and some time afterwards with that of Major Battye, with which they returned to Oghi Fort, reaching the same at about 8.30 P.M.

It may be mentioned that Subadar Kishnbir Nagar Koti had already gained the Order of Merit three times for conspicuous gallantry during the Cabul Campaign, but it is earnestly to be hoped that his having already won the highest possible honour a Native can gain for valour, will not deter Government from giving him some suitable reward. Major Battye never went a foot out of British territory.

Miscellaneous.

MR. E. T. ATKINSON, Accountant-General of Bengal, takes three months' privilege leave from the beginning of July, and Mr. C. I. Weir will officiate for him during his absence.

IN connection with the raising of the rates for foreign telegrams, it will be remembered, says a Calcutta paper, that when a couple of years ago a slight reduction was made in the rate for messages despatched from the United States to India, the concession was, to some extent, paid for by the Indian public, the rupee charge being simultaneously enhanced one anna per word. The present increase will, therefore, bring up the rate to three rupees a word, a rate which will constitute a heavy tax on trade, which is now suffering both directly and indirectly from the constant decline in exchange.

CAPTAIN ANGOVE, the marine superintendent of the P. and O. steamship Company, and who will be remembered by many passengers as for several years commander of the P. and O. steamship Poonah, has received a commission of honorary commander in the Royal Naval Reserve. Captain Angove has for some time past taken great interest in that branch of the service, and has in other ways rendered valuable assistance to the Government, especially in connection with the late Egyptian expeditions.

THE "Wells Light," which is being put on the market by A. C. Wells and Co. of Manchester, is just now creating some stir, and it appears to be one of the most important inventions of modern times. The patents are owned by Messrs. M. Wallwork and Wells who have worked several years to bring this lamp to perfection. By its use an immense white light is obtained from common mineral oils at a cost many times less than coal gas or the electric light. Not the least remarkable feature in its portability and a lamp giving out the gigantic light of 5,000 candle-power can be carried about by two men from place to place. Its use in large out-of-door-works cannot be over estimated, and we understand that it is the only light in use through the exclusive workings of the Manchester Ship Canal and that it has been supplied for the most varied purposes to some of the largest firms. With the extensive supplies of oils which are being opened up in all parts of the globe such a simple apparatus for burning them must have a very large sale in the future.

INDIAN AGRICULTURAL IMPROVEMENT.—Under the auspices of the East India Association, a meeting of officers and gentlemen interested in the affairs of the British Empire in the East was held on Monday, July 16, in the Exeter Hall Council-room, Sir John Strachey, G.C.S.I., C.I.E., presiding, for the purpose of considering the agricultural improvement of India. The principal address was given by Pandit Srilal, Esq. (late Secretary of the Bijnor Agricultural Society), who pointed out that India is essentially an agricultural country, and that fully three-fourths of its enormous population of 250,000,000 depend upon its soil for their maintenance. The masses of cultivators are complaining that the productive powers of the soil are becoming fast exhausted, which may be attributed to diverse misfortunes under which they are at present labouring. Firstly, there is a want of sufficient manure, and seeds of good quality are not always procurable; then the means of irrigation are by no means adequate, and the implements are of a primitive nature, such as were those of Europe in its early stage of civilization. Secondly, the cattle, which are the source, the mainspring of all existence in India, are, on the whole, in a miserable condition. The relations of landlords and tenants are, generally speaking, not so cordial as they were, and debt is increasing; while cycles of famines cause widespread misery and poverty. To the question, who can alleviate the sufferings, and ameliorate the condition of the rural community in India? Pandit Srilal urged that the only answer was that it is the duty of all whose vital interests are connected with agriculture—viz., the Government, the landlords, and the tenants. Agricultural improvement on any appreciable scale is next to impossible in India unless this trinity all actively work together, and unless the initiative is taken by Government. A discussion followed, closing with the customary votes of thanks.

THE Dewan of Hyderabad, Sir Asman Jah, will leave the capital for Simla in about a month, for the purpose of paying his respects to the Viceroy and conferring with regard to the future of Hyderabad affairs generally.

THE ASIATIC QUARTERLY REVIEW.*

The Afghan Question, with "the next phase" of which the first article of the present number deals, could be treated by no more capable writer than Mr. Boulger, who contributes it. His views are (as are those of most competent men who have seriously envisaged the subject) far from being optimistic. Rapidly tracing the changes brought about during the last few years in the relative positions of England and Russia, first in Central Asia, next in Persia—now almost a Russian Satrapy—lastly in Afghanistan, Mr. Boulger points out that in each case Russia's gain in material power or in prestige (or in both) has been effected at our expense; that we cannot rely on the stability of the lately established Afghan frontier, or on the continued life or supremacy of the Ameer Abdurrahman. As regards the future, he warns us of the need of better local information, urging the posting, with the Ameer's consent, of a British officer at Balkh or Maimana, and the laying down a field telegraph to one of those towns. Regarding a plucky stand by the Afghan garrison at Herat as "the only chance of stirring up public sentiment" in England in favour of active intervention, should that important fortress be attacked by a Russo-Persian force, Mr. Boulger thus sums up his remarks:—"An English officer in Turkestan, a telegraph wire to Balkh, and the necessary preparations for rapidly laying down a railway to Jellalabad when the need arises, are three simple propositions towards placing the Indian Empire in a proper state to guard its rights when the whole Afghan question is reopened by the act of Russia, or by the sudden termination of Abdurrahman's reign."

Lectures on the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Armies, recently delivered, by officers of the respective armies, at the United Service Institution, are summarised by Sir F. Goldsmid in the second article, which is a veritable répertoire of facts connected with the subject of which it treats, and will, as such, be found useful for reference.

"The Indian Council" is the title of a valuable Paper by Mr. W. Pedder, whose recent connection with the India Office gives much weight to his opinion. His experience leads him to the conviction, that the cases in which the views of the Council are set aside by the Secretary of State are few. "Ministers and Council," he says, "are all men of business, and are not subject to the party influences which create friction: the Secretary of State is glad to avail himself of the experience of his Councilors; the latter, who feel that their opinions will be fully and fairly considered, are ready in the last resort to defer to the views of the Minister." Mr. Pedder describes the routine of the India Office (in which he suggests some trifling modifications), and makes clear the utility, nay, the necessity, of a consultative body, such as is the Indian Council, to assist the Secretary of State by bringing local experience to bear on questions, of the merits of which the Minister is necessarily ignorant.

"The Native States of Central India" have, as shown by Mr. F. Loraine Petre, made a progress, during the last few years, which enables us to go far beyond the very qualified self-congratulation placed on record by the late Sir H. Durand some forty years ago. "The country generally," Mr. Petre assures us, "has been opened out by railways and roads; trade has been freed from odious restrictions; education (especially that of the young Chiefs and Nobles) has been encouraged." The attainment of these satisfactory results is substantiated by the writer's carefully-prepared review of the past and present condition of the individual States which form this large and most interesting Province.

Mr. Talboys Wheeler's entertaining Paper on "India Sixty Years Ago" may be read together with the Journals of Bishop Turner of Calcutta, the first instalment of which is contained in the present number, and should be contrasted with Mr. Carr Stephen's remarks on the present state of "Social Inter-course in India."

It will be long ere special interest will fail to attach to everything connected with the heroic Gordon; and some letters from him to Mr. Boulger, contributed by the latter, well deserve the perusal which they will undoubtedly receive. A somewhat lengthy article, by Mr. W. T. Seton-Karr, on "Indian Agriculture and our Wheat Supply," and some practical remarks, by Moulvi Abdur-Rashid, on the present unsatisfactory position of affairs in the Punjab University, complete a very good number of this excellent Review.

THE GREVILLE MEMOIRS.†

The sixth volume of "The Greville Memoirs" touches upon some well-known events in the history of this country. First and foremost in the rank of importance was the French

* "The Asiatic Quarterly Review." July, 1888. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)

† "The Greville Memoirs." Vol. VI. (Longmans and Co.)

Revolution of 1848, when Louis Philippe lost his throne. "In France," writes Mr. Greville, "everything is going downhill at a railroad pace. This great Revolution, which may be termed the madness of a few for the ruin of many, is already making the French people weep tears of blood." It is difficult to point out any considerable advantage either of a positive or negative character which they have obtained." So true was this estimate of the crisis that after an interval of four years of hopeless national imbecility Napoleon III. succeeded, by a coup d'état, in restoring to his countrymen a decade of power and principle—advantages which, since his death, have been denied the most fickle and volatile nation upon the face of the earth.

The spirit of discord and want of repose seems at the middle of the present century to have been peculiarly rife, for even the sedate and sober-minded Britons of this Isle caught the contagion of revolt, as witnessed by the Chartist upheaving of 1848; but amidst ourselves the tree of Socialism took no root, and after a feeble and sickly existence of a few months it withered and ultimately died. But at the time the alarm was great, and the fear widespread.

The political narrative of this volume is replete with interest. Peel had introduced his "Free Trade" Budget. Hated by his friends, distrusted by his foes, it is not altogether clear what part he would have played in the future had not an accident cut short a career which must have been great, and might have been distinguished. Palmerston, "plucky," proud, overweening, rebellious against authority, was a power in the State, but even he at last fell from his pinnacle of greatness; but as a foe he was implacable, and he brought ruin upon those who ruined him. Disraeli, too, at this time had gained power by "leaps and bounds," and towards the close of the volume he is safely installed in the proud position of Chancellor of the Exchequer, and leader of the Conservative party in the House of Commons. There is also much light thrown upon the relations of the Court with the politicians of the time, and the account of the attitude of the Queen towards her Statesmen and Ministers will be read with considerable interest.

Minor matters of importance are the discovery of cholera-form, one of the greatest blessings ever given to man. The opening of the Great Exhibition of 1851, the precursor of the many imitations, all of which aped, but none of whom rivalled their great original. The "No-Popery cry," when the Vatican first gave expression to her long-cherished design of creating an English Catholic Hierarchy; the growing power of Russia as a great nation; the death of the Duke of Wellington, and such-like information of a general and popular nature. Dealing with our own times Mr. Greville now appeals to a wider class of readers, to many of whom the events narrated are matter of individual reminiscence; and none, we venture to assert, will lay down the volume without a regret at its finish, and a thought of gratitude for the pleasant chit-chat, which is as fresh as the day it was penned, and as piquant as if it were written but yesterday.

DAYS AND NIGHTS BY THE DESERT.*

It is admitted on all hands that there is a charm in African travel which does not attach to "globe-trotting" in any other portion of Nature's fair creation. Judging by the fascinating experiences which Mr. Parker Gilmore has given to the world in his "Days and Nights by the Desert" it can well be understood that this should be the case. From beginning to end there is an unbroken series of adventures. At one time a man finds himself inside a cave with a "king of the forest." Of necessity it was a struggle à l'outrance, in which, fortunately, chance (it was too dark to aim) played a satisfactory part, and a terrible contest ended in a superb victory. On another occasion, our hero, finding himself stalked by a lion, conceived the curious but, fortunately, successful ruse of slipping his hunting-coat on the muzzle of his musket, and pushing the ramrod through the sleeves. This extempore "scarecrow" received the full shock of the beast's spring, and, together with the infuriated monarch of the glen, rolled to the abyss below. Again the scene changes, and the reader is privileged to witness a combat between a hound and a hyæna, and to behold the discomfiture of the latter.

Apart, too, from these stirring adventures there are some interesting allusions to African storms, when Nature appears in all her glory, and poor, puny man sinks into utter insignificance beside the mighty efforts of the Lord of the Universe. The chapters, too, are particularly interesting, which refer to the two tame lions which were captured as cubs, and lived peaceably till they attained an age when the fierce instincts of their nature could not be longer controlled, and they learned to taste "blood." The experiment was a novel one, and conclusively shows that it is impossible to tame such creatures, and lead them to see the error of their ways. It is also worthy of note that the stripes of early infancy died out after the animals found themselves in captivity. Whether this was a freak of nature in resentment for the interference of man in her plans, or was the natural order of the day, is not apparent. One word of interest to our "Liberal" friends. The Boers, at the time of Mr. Gilmore's visit to Central Africa, were engaged in a war of extermination against all those natives who had remained loyal to the British Crown after our disasters in the Transvaal. This much for the wisdom with which we are governed when the "Grand Old Man" is King!

Enough has, perhaps, been written to indicate that half-hours with Mr. Gilmore will be spent pleasantly and in right good sporting company.

CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.*

Of all the various styles of composition nothing is more difficult than a biography. To be of value it must be a faithful reflex of the man whose life it records, whose sayings and doings it hands down to posterity—thus far, all will agree as to the aim and object to be kept in view. But the modus operandi is a by no means settled question. What to insert and what to omit are problems of well-nigh insoluble difficulty. The characters of others are in most cases so inextricably intermingled with the actions of the individual himself that it is next to impossible to avoid disclosures that had better have been kept back; and offences against the canon of bad taste and ineptness are neither easy to avoid nor simple to correct. "Hero worship," too, is an attractive vice, the more so that in itself the feeling is commendable, and it is only when indulged to an excessive and unseemly extent that it passes under the ban of adverse criticism.

Taking all these circumstances into consideration, it is, perhaps, no great slur upon the recently-published life of Christopher Wordsworth, Bishop of Lincoln, to assert that, on the whole, it does not fulfil to the fullest extent the requirements of a good biography. There is, undoubtedly, much in it which is most admirable and worthy of praise. The absence of fulsome laudation, the careful portraiture of the man as he was rather than as he might have been, are features which merit, and will meet with, commendation; but to our judgment—admittedly it is a matter of opinion—it would have been preferable rather to have dwelt upon the inner and unrevealed life of the man than to have given to the world the public and comparatively well-known actions in regard to which "he who runs may read." Chapter XIV.—by far the most interesting pages in the entire work—in part remedies the omission; but these details and incidents should not have been reserved for separate treatment, but been interspersed throughout the entire volume. The man then would have grown up before his reader; his infancy, his youth, his prime, his "sere and yellow leaf," would then have passed in review in a regular consecutive series. The stripling, the minister of the gospel, the bishop of the realm, would each have appeared in his own individuality; whereas, under present circumstances, a saint of more than seventy summers passes away, and the world is merely bidden to come and see the place where he lieth. There is, if not too much of his life and actions, at least too little of the man himself. And with such a man as Christopher Wordsworth, so lovable, so gentle, so pure, so holy a saint in the midst of a saintly family surely more than ever there is cause for regret that the veil has not been drawn aside more fully, and the "soul" of domesticity bared to the gaze of the many who would learn therefrom lessons of gentleness, courtesy, and humility. Still, there is much to admire in the volume. The labour was obviously one of love, and the authors may well be pardoned if, doing well, they are compelled to acknowledge that perfection is not the attribute of humanity, or the lot of the denizens of this mundane sphere.

LIFE AND OPINIONS OF MAJOR-GENERAL SIR CHARLES MACGREGOR, K.C.B.

Lady MacGregor has lately completed her arduous task of editing the diaries, letters and memoranda of her husband, the late Quartermaster-General in India, from 1880 to 1885.

William Blackwood and Sons announce the early publication of Lady MacGregor's important work, which will contain valuable and interesting records of Sir Charles MacGregor's military career from the very commencement of the Indian Mutiny in 1857 until his premature death at Cairo in 1887, thirty eventful years.

It may be remembered by the readers of St. James's Gazette, that in the year 1884 a certain sensation was caused in Anglo-Indian circles by the limited circulation of a book written by Sir Charles MacGregor, entitled "The Defence of India." Articles founded on this confidential work were published in the St. James's Gazette, and, if we mistake not, also in the Army and Navy Gazette of the period, drawing attention to the unusually favourable estimate of Russia's power to carry out her aggressive schemes in Afghanistan, and to the unusual difficulties the Indian military authorities might have in placing an adequate defensive force in the field. These articles gave considerable offence at the time to the then Secretary of State of Mr. Gladstone's Administration, and Lord Ripon was instructed to press severely on the patriotic originator of the note of warning. The recall of all available copies from the editors, all of whom (with one exception) loyally returned the confidential volumes to India forthwith, is a matter of history; but the true story of this crisis has never, hitherto, been made public. The whole of this transaction is now, we hear, given in Lady MacGregor's book. A different view of General MacGregor's far-seeing policy is held by the present Government.

Lord Salisbury was thoroughly aware of the value of Sir Charles MacGregor's opinions regarding Central Asia; and, it will be remembered that, prior to the Russo-Turkish war in 1887, Lord Salisbury despatched Colonel MacGregor on a special service mission to find a route from the Gulf of Oman to Herat without infringing the boundaries of Persia or Afghanistan.

It was demonstrated to Lord Salisbury's satisfaction that such a route by way of Zirreh could be used in case it was wanted, and subsequently the Afghan Boundary Commission approached Herat by crossing the Baluchistan desert and then following the debateable no-man's land track along the Harud to the vicinity of Herat, as indicated by the Quartermaster-General.

Lady MacGregor's volumes are enriched by photogravure-portraits of Sir Charles, one representing him in the full highland costume of his clan, for he was a lineal descendant of the famous Rob Roy, to whom, indeed, he had many resemblances. All his Anglo-Indian comrades-in-arms will be pleased with this record of the dashing sabreur and brilliant staff officer, whose services with sword and pen it commemorates.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Eighteen Hundred Miles on a Burmese Tat," by Lieut. G. J. Younghusband (W. H. Allen and Co.); "The British Taxpayer and his Wrongs," by "Finance" (Effingham, Wilson and Co.).

THE Gnatong correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette writes:—"The other day the Political Officer selected two of our unwounded prisoners, and, giving them a letter, despatched them to the camp of the enemy. The prisoners did not want to go in the least. The complained that they were not feeling at all well that morning, that there were no cigars or rum in the Tibetan camp, and that, having lost their guns, they would no longer be treated like soldiers, but would be required to work as coolies, which would be very unpleasant both to their pride and to their persons."

OF the 43,798 British troops in India the returns for 1887 show that 34,200 have obtained certificates of education. The highest rate, as might be expected, was in the Royal Engineers, in which the whole of the men have obtained certificates. In the cavalry the percentage of those remaining uncertificated was 9.03, in the Royal Artillery 19.27, and in the Infantry 23.30. The 6th Dragoon Guards had the highest percentage among the Cavalry; No. 1 Battery 1st Brigade, London Division, among the Artillery; and the 1st Battalion Border Regiment among the Infantry, the Leinster Regiment winning second.

BENGAL COAL COMPANY, LIMITED.—For the six months ending April 30, the deliveries of coal have been 212,570 tons; the quantity raised of all classes has been 212,673 tons; and the quantity of coke manufactured has been 6,628 tons. The stocks of coal and coke unsold stand as follows:—Steam, 19,173 tons; Rubble, 9,615 tons; and coke, 1,862 tons. The expenditure on account of Wear and Tear Fund during the half year was Rs. 36,236. A transfer at the rate 1½ on capital amounting to Rs. 30,000, has been made to this Fund, in conformity with the Articles of Association. After adding the balance of Rs. 24,063 brought forward, and Rs. 8,173, being the nominal profit of the Company's workshops credited to this account, and deducting the expenditure as above, there remains a credit balance of Rs. 26,001. The sum expended on New Stock Account during the half-year has been Rs. 2,573. The Revenue Account shows a profit of Rs. 2,68,987, and there is a balance at Credit of Profit and Loss of Rs. 3,48,976. The Directors propose that a dividend of Rs. 60 per share be declared, which will absorb Rs. 1,44,000, and that the balance, after providing Rs. 13,300 for Directors' remuneration, Auditor's fees, and Superintendent's and General Manager's commission, viz., Rs. 1,91,676, be carried forward in view of the tendency to lower prices for coal, and of the unusually heavy expenditure at the collieries which will have to be made before long.

PROMOTION IN THE CIVIL SERVICE.

BOMBAY has a grievance; but when was Bombay ever without one? At the present moment, owing to the slowness of promotion, the prospects of the Bombay Civilians are not brilliant. This is the complaint formulated by the Times of India, which journal, however, in suggesting a way to meet it, does not, as the Bombay Press is sometimes given to do, propose that all anticipated benefits should be localised in the Western Presidency. The suggestion offered embraces the whole Civil Service of India. It is to the effect that, in order to give an impulse to promotion, retirement should be fixed at thirty years as a maximum, instead of as now at thirty-five years, and that the system of five years' tenure of office should be introduced in the holding of all the higher posts. The writer thinks that it would be better for the Service if the maximum of pay were reduced and a scheme framed by which a man would rise rapidly to a competence of Rs. 1,000 per mensem, and after a reasonable period of time to Rs. 1,800. The argument on which the recommendation is based is that it is not a few great prizes, but the nature of the work and the prospect of being able to marry and have a home which tempt men to come to India. "At present in the Bombay Civil Service we find a few men drawing large salaries, and the prospect of the majority far from bright. It is only a very few of the junior men who can ever hope to gain the large prizes, and they certainly would be gainers if by reduction of emoluments Government could afford to be more liberal in pension rules." But the difficulty in carrying out such a suggestion lies at the threshold of it. Financiers will hold that the Government would have much the worst of such a bargain, and that the amount which the State would save by a present reduction of salaries would be little compared to what it would lose by an increased and lengthy pension list. It may be granted that if civil servants were allowed pensions graduated for each year of their service promotion would be quickened; but such recommendation has been made before, but ignored, owing to the difficulty of correctly counting the cost thereof. The experiment of the five years' tenure rule might, however, be tried in the directions in which the writer points out. He would have it applied to Commissioners, Chief Secretaries, and Civilian High Court Judges, supposing that the officers had completed twenty-one years' actual service and so earned a pension of £1,000. "To make a man retire on £1,000 per annum is no very great hardship. At present a grave temptation is thrown in the way of a civilian judge to remain the full period of twelve years in the High Court to earn the extra pension of £200." Doubtless, and the difficulty will be how to overcome that temptation satisfactorily to all who are likely to fall in the way of it, even were the rule made that retirement after five years' term of office should not necessarily debar a man from being eligible for the Local Council or the Council of the Viceroy.

The scheme suggested looks plausible enough, but to quote the famous query of Sarah Siddons—"Will it wash?"

THE HYDERABAD (DECCAN) SCANDAL.

No indication has yet been given as to the date when the report of the Select Committee on the Deccan Mining Company and its promoters is likely to be laid before the House. Perhaps, considering the intense preoccupation of its Chairman's mind during the libel trial of last week, some little further delay may be excused. Then, too, we believe Mr. Slagg had to proceed to Paris immediately after the last open sitting of the Committee in order to attend as director at the Suez Canal Board. Still, making due allowance for these hindrances, any further delay will cause some surprise amongst those who regard the essential points in the case as having been clear from the first. Observers who stand in this position cannot but suppose either that there is some strong conflict of opinion amongst the seven members of the Committee, or that there is a desire to let some persons down gently. And in this direction rumour already points towards two eminent brothers, one of whom, while not a member of the Indian Council, gave his weighty influence to the launching, if not also the promotion, of both the railway scheme and mining speculation. The other made himself conspicuous before the Committee by ostentatious disavowal of responsibility on the part of the India Office in respect of that impartial and fiduciary guardianship of the material interests of the Native States, which had hitherto been one of the fixed principles of the British Indian Government. But if the Committee's report shirks dealing with this branch of the disgraceful business, we may venture to opine that there will be a very strong minority report by three of the members.

There is another and more substantial reason for further deliberation in completing the Committee's report which may be suggested. That is the need of dealing fully and finally with Abdul Huq's memorandum, of thirty-five paragraphs, in which he endeavours to exculpate himself, and elaborately states his version of the whole series of transactions. The ingenuity and skill—to say nothing of its sublime audacity—with which this document is compiled might well tax the best forensic talent of Sir Henry James, the acumen of Mr. Labouchere, and the official experience of Sir Richard Temple.

It cannot be supposed that the Committee will pass this document aside on the excuse that it was presented to the Nizam's Government, and not formally laid before them. It must have been included in the documentary evidence on which they are bound to give a decision. This reminds us that several of the essential points embodied in it, as well as others which came or should have come before them in the hearing, are such as could only have been appreciated by aid of the direct personal knowledge of two (European) gentlemen—in very different positions—neither of whom were called, though both, we believe, were ready to give their assistance.

DIFFICULTIES.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR.—The last mail from India brought us some information regarding the difficulties we experience in accommodating English ideas of humdrum government to our responsibilities in ruling a vast Asiatic Empire.

The Government of India by Parliament has hitherto been a failure, because the honourable members have not learnt by the experience of the Jamaica rebellion that martial law without knowledge is iniquitous.

Our military officers in Civil employment are probably the best servants of government in the world: no one during this century has equalled Sir Henry Lawrence for genius in governing foreign races; but a martinet, ignorant of the customs and languages of Hindoos and Mohammedans, and unable to discriminate the loyal from rebels, is unfit for the exercise of magisterial duties in India. A great many innocent Natives were barbarously put to death in 1857.

Parliament inherited from the old East India Company the excellent system of appointing Chief Magistrates of districts armed with power, but controlled by heavy responsibilities. An Englishman rejoices in responsibility if he be given the power of doing good.

Now, what is the present state of India? The Allahabad Pioneer Mail of the 24th of last month, p. 781, explains, "And so that 'weary Titan,' the solitary District Officer, has now and again perforce to find time, somehow or other, to do work of this kind, which would fall more, appropriately on younger and less heavily-burdened shoulders."

Not only has the Chief Magistrate no time for performing properly many of the duties blindly thrust upon him, but he has been deprived of all power of doing good. The powers of Government have been frittered away among a multitude of Departments, all of which would smile at the idea that they were to be held responsible for upholding the honour and performing the duties of Her Britannic Majesty's Government.—Your obedient servant,

July 18.

INDIA OFFICIAL CASH-BALANCES.

The following letter, which appeared in the St. James's Gazette, July 13, signed "X," is evidently from the pen of an Anglo-Indian who understands this subject:—

"SIR.—Amidst the chronic complaints we hear on all hands of impecuniosity in Indian affairs, it is satisfactory to know of one Indian treasury that is not only full, but overflowing; that is the home treasury of the Secretary of State, who, having so much money that he does not know what to do with it, is ever and again forcing his cash balances on the already gorged money market here at a beggarly interest of 1 per cent. per annum, and sometimes less. Thus last Monday City articles comprised the remark, 'Some ease is anticipated, as the India Council is offering large sums until Aug. 18 at 1 per cent.' And a week or two before the money market felt some temporary stringency because of the India Office withdrawing a million or two which had been lent to the discount brokers at only seven-eighths per cent. But, as the above intimation shows, the City men can confidently count on their 'uncle,' Viscount Cross—i.e., the Financial Secretary at the India Office—placing millions at their disposal for a trifling consideration. Seeing that the India Office cash balances are scarcely ever below two millions, and are more generally three or four (at the close of last financial year the amount was over five millions) it is obvious this is a substantial resource for the money markets to play against.

But what is the other side of this great fact? At whose expense is this loose cash dispensed with such prodigality? Why, it is at the expense of the Government of India and its unfortunate taxpayers, including the now irate "uncovenanted," who cannot get even a poor twenty pence in the rupee guaranteed to them. The loss that I speak of comes in this way. The India Office goes on week after week drawing a fixed and ostentatiously advertised sum in Council bills, just as if this were done by a blind machine, and as if the Secretary of State were hand-to-mouth for cash to go on with; whereas we have seen that he has millions on balance which would, on occasion, keep him going for a whole month. The object of these unduly large cash balances should be to make him master instead of humble follower of the silver market, as is the position under the present stolid policy of the financial managers at the India Office. The Secretary of State is by far the largest seller of silver in the world. Why, then, should he not choose his own occasions for putting less or more of that specie on the market? Every now and then City articles make the dismal announcement that because of large amounts of Council bills offering the price of silver, or of the unlucky rupee, has gone down by some large percentage. This week the thirty lakhs of bills have only fetched 1s. 4½d.; and, lest there should be any recovery, the buyers are gratuitously assured that 30 lakhs more shall be provided for them next week. The course of an ordinary mercantile or banking house would be the reverse of this. Instead of throwing away the power of control conferred by the possession of a million or two of spare cash, now thrown on the cheapest state of the money market, if that sum had been used for the office's own current purposes and, say, 10 lakhs less of rupee bills offered to remitters, the price of the Council drafts might at this moment have been nearer 1s. 6d. than 1s. 4d. If the enhanced price on the 20, instead of 30, lakhs had only been 1d. in the rupee, that would have saved over £8,000 to the Indian Government, besides raising the rate for all other recipients from India. No doubt I shall be reminded that the India Office is under compulsion to sell its £14,000,000 worth of bills in the whole year. That must be admitted; though, as it is, the whole amount cannot always be realised in twelve months, and a balance has to be carried over. But that does not affect my argument; which is, that seeing these very large balances are held—and lent at a beggarly rate of interest—they might be used so as, within certain varying limits, to make the Secretary of State the dominant instead of a helpless seller of silver."

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Four Europeans who had been out after tiger in the Maimensing district were, says a Calcutta paper, returning at the close of a very long day and had almost reached the factory where they were to dine and pass the night, when the Captain ordered a halt. The "line" at once pulled up, and he said: "I hate seeing loaded guns taken into a house (it was the old muzzle-loading days), more especially where there are children. I propose that we fire ours off." "All right," said another, "but we haven't had a shot all day; what do you say to a pool?" "There is nothing to fire at," observed a third. "There's that ghurrah," said the Captain, pointing to an earthen vessel which some rayats, who were working at a little distance, had as usual brought their day's supply of drinking water in. "Very good," said the fourth, "but what with bad light, and the distance, it's by no means an easy shot. I propose we each put a chick on."

"How shall we decide as to the order of firing?" said one. "Oh," replied the Captain generously, "commence at your end of the line."

I have observed that the mark was by no means an easy one to hit, for the distance was well-nigh a hundred yards, the guns smooth-bores, and the light, that deceptive kind which one gets just between daylight and dark. But, on the other hand, the hunters were exceptionally good men, all excellent shots, either of whom could hit a running deer, from the back of an elephant, twice out of three times.

"Fire away," said the Captain. No. 1 grazed the right side of the vessel, and it was thought must have hit it. No. 2 went just over it. No. 3 went a little to the left. "Thank you gentlemen," said the Captain, "I'll trouble you for those 12 rupees." He raised his gun as he spoke, and the next moment the jar was covered with earth, the bullet had cut the ground beneath it. Presently the vessel was seen to wriggle, and then to kick, while a feeble cry proclaimed it to be a baby. Consternation was depicted on every face. The elephants bited: the sahibs jumped down and rushed to the spot, the parents running from the opposite direction. The little mite hadn't been touched, and was carried off by the father and mother with great rejoicing. They also took the "pool" along with them, and right glad the sahibs were, under the circumstances, to part with it.

A most gratifying message to the troops at Gnatong from the Viceroy was published in orders there on the 11th June, expressing to the troops his appreciation of their services, and sympathy with them under their many hardships.

KOUSANIE TEA COMPANY, LIMITED.—The outturn for 1887 was 87,094 lbs. Considerable damage was done by hail in May, and the rainfall for the season was the lowest registered for several years past. But for this the estimate would probably have been exceeded. The average price realised was 12-1 annas per lb. Every effort has been made to keep down expenditure, and the result is a profit for the season of Rs. 23,342, out of which the Managing Agents recommend that a dividend of 2½ per cent. be declared. The estimate for the coming season is 88,000 lbs. of tea for an outlay of Rs. 46,316.

NATIVE PRESS.

HE LATE EMPEROR OF GERMANY.

The Rast Gofar says:—The life and career of the late Emperor Frederick of Germany reads more like a romance than anything else. The deceased Emperor was not only a bright ornament in the group of the several mighty States in the world, but a true counsellor and an honest guide. The German Empire has lost in the deceased the flower of the mighty race; indeed, they have lost one of whom they were all so justly proud. The whole civilized world mourns the loss of the Emperor, who, we need hardly say, was a close relation of the monarchs of England, Austria, and Russia.

The Kaiser-i-Hind says:—Germany is once more steeped into mourning during the brief space of three months. The hand of death has struck a heavy blow on the Royal families of Germany and England. This sad event has gathered a dark cloud over the whole of Europe. We offer our most sincere and heartfelt condolence to Her Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress for the irreparable loss she has sustained by the death of her good and great son-in-law. It is quite possible that the political affairs of Europe may now assume a grave aspect by the fact of the great "buffer" between war and peace being removed from Germany.

The Bombay Samachar says:—The deceased was a kind-hearted and peace-loving Emperor. Every one of the inhabitants of the vast continent of India will be particularly sorry for the death of the Emperor, because he was the eldest and most beloved son-in-law of our Most Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress. It is quite possible that the death of the Emperor might be the precursor of some unexpected change in the political horizon of Europe.

The Jam-e-Jamshed says:—The struggle between life and death has at last come to an end. Within the brief space of three months Germany has lost two of its mighty Emperors. The whole of Europe, as well as India, mourns the loss of the deceased Emperor. We offer our most sincere condolence to Her Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress for the irreparable loss she has sustained by the death of her son-in-law.

The Gujrati says:—The deceased Emperor was not only a brave warrior, but was a most courteous and merciful member of the Royal family of Germany. He was an important factor, together with his late lamented father, in the consolidation of the German Empire. He was a gallant and dutiful son, a kind father, and a sympathetic ruler of the State.

The Akbari-Soudagar says:—Germany has lost during a short time two of its most distinguished Emperors. The entire subjects of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress were as much anxious as the Germans for the recovery of the Emperor Frederick, but their best hopes were frustrated by the hand of death.

The Kossid-e-Mumbai says:—There can be no doubt that the intelligence of the death of the Emperor Frederick will be received in the whole of the civilized world with genuine sorrow. We feel the loss the greater because the deceased was always for peace. The Crown Prince will do well to follow the example of his noble father.

WILL ENGLAND RETAIN INDIA?

The Kaiser-i-Hind says:—An avowed enemy is always better than a timid friend. Mr. Meredith Townsend has not in his article, appearing in the Contemporary Review, done any service to the British Government or the Natives of this country. His writing evidently savours of gross exaggeration, and is calculated to instil panic into the minds of the Indians. Mr. Townsend is utterly in the wrong when he says that the Natives of India do not look upon the English with a friendly eye. By making such unfounded and exaggerated statements Mr. Townsend has unnecessarily wounded the feelings of the Native community.

The Gujrati says:—Mr. Townsend has been misrepresenting the freedom of thought and action on the part of Natives, which is the happy result of English education, when he suspects their loyalty and friendly feeling for the British. Mr. Townsend seems to be in happy ignorance of the manners, customs and education of the Natives of India.

DISSEMINATION OF PURE LITERATURE IN INDIA.

The following is a translation of an article published in the Oudh Akbar:—

There are few things which so forcibly strike the intelligent observer in India as the rapid spread of education during the last twenty years, and the almost universal desire evinced by men of all classes to learn, and to have their children taught. Wherever we go we find schools and colleges; in the public gardens of our great cities we see boys and young men studying their daily tasks, and even those engaged in domestic service employ their spare time in learning to read and write, if not in English at least in the Vernacular. With these facts before our eyes, it is impossible to resist the conclusion that before long a large majority of the population of India will be able to read, and that an immense demand for books will soon arise. As to how this demand is to be met is the point we now propose to deal with, and first as to the Vernacular. It will, we think, be admitted by all thoughtful persons, that the generally low and impure tone of the great mass of the indigenous literature of India forms a serious barrier to the moral and intellectual progress of the Native community, and that the spread of education cannot be regarded with much satisfaction, unless we are able to place in the hands of our young men books of a more reasonable, more useful, and more refined tone than those that are now within their reach. With regard to English books, although the same general charge of emptiness and immorality cannot be brought against them, although there is no literature in the world which is, as a whole, so pure in tone and so varied in interest, we yet observe with regret that the books most eagerly read by our educated classes, more especially by the young among them, are not those which we should wish to see most widely circulated. There exists in English an inexhaustible store of excellent books on history, biography, philosophy, science, and travel, as well as many works of imagination and fiction, both in prose and verse, of which the tendency is not only harmless, but positively good and useful; unfortunately cheap editions of these works are not easily to be procured in India. On the other hand, novels and stories, some of them originally written in English, but the great majority of them American translations from the French, and of which the tone and tendency is coarse, foolish, and immoral, are imported into India by thousands, and are being sold at a very cheap rate, and are widely circulated throughout the country. The influence of such books can only be harmful, and their circulation among our young people must, in our opinion, be a hindrance to their moral and intellectual advancement, and to their progress in knowledge and virtue. It seems, therefore, needful that measures should be promptly taken to check the spread of such books throughout India, and to supply their place by others of a wholesome and useful kind. In England there are now published a great number of books by the best authors in a cheap and handy form which are sold at such a price as to place them within the reach of even the poorest readers. These books, cheap as they are, are printed in clear type, on good paper, and compare very favourably with books published in India at a much higher price. But (owing probably to the fact that being so cheap they would hardly bear the cost of transport) these books do not find their way out here, and the cheapest editions obtainable of good books are the volumes of Messrs. Cassell's Red Library, or Messrs. Macmillan's Colonial Library, which consists almost entirely of works of fiction. We would, therefore, suggest that the following measures should be taken in order to secure a sufficient supply of useful and entertaining books at the lowest possible price.

I. Arrangements should be made with some of the great English publishing firms, such as Messrs. Cassell, Routledge, Chambers, &c., for a supply of their cheap and popular publications, on such special terms as would allow of their being sold at a low price in India; also for the preparation of a new series of books specially adapted to the needs and tastes of the English-speaking natives of India. II. Endeavours should be made to establish in India itself a large publishing business, which should undertake the publication of cheap books both in English and the Vernacular, and should pay special attention to improving the methods of producing books. Such a business would offer good opportunities for employment to University students, and other educated men. III. Arrangements should be made for spreading the circulation of good books throughout the country. These measures, to be successful, must be carried out in a philanthropic spirit, and on sound business principles, without assistance or interference from Government. Having called the attention of our readers to this subject, we leave it with them, and invite expressions of opinion on the matter, and suggestions as to the means by which the object we have in view may be best secured. At a future time we may, perhaps, return to this subject.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of Colonel W. F. B. Laurie's second series of Distinguished Anglo-Indians.

THE sale of the jewellery belonging to the estate of the late King of Oudh, held by Messrs. Hamilton and Company at Calcutta, realised about a lakh of rupees.

LIEUTENANT FOWLER with eighty men of his regiment, the 1st Beloochees, attacked the Red Karennees, who had invaded Shan territory on the 12th inst. near Kodeejah. The enemy, who held a strong stockade, which was carried at the point of the bayonet, fled, leaving sixty killed. Only one Beloochee was wounded.

ADVENTURE WITH A TIGER.

The following experience of a sportsman in the Deccan is from the Secunderabad paper of the 14th June :—

Mr. Cuthbert Fraser had a most miraculous escape from a tiger the other day at Amraoti. The lucky hero of this adventure is a District Superintendent of Police in Berar. He is well remembered in Secunderabad as Superintendent of the Cantonment Police before Mr. Crawford. A son of Colonel Hastings Fraser, one of the Frasers of Lovatt, he has proved his possession of that nerve and courage which rises to the emergency of danger—on which qualities more than all else the British Empire in India has been built, and on which, after all is said, in the last resort, it must be still held to rest. To quote the graphic account of a correspondent, the escape was about as narrow as man ever had. Mr. Fraser was told by his orderly that a wounded tiger was lying dead, with his head on the root of a tree. The orderly having called him up, he went to the spot. Mr. Fraser then sent the orderly and another man with his second gun back, and knelt down to look. Just then the tiger roared and came at him from about eighteen feet off : he waited till the tiger was within five feet of him and fired. As the tiger did not drop, he fired his second shot hurriedly. The first shot had hit exactly in the centre of the face, but just an inch too low. It knocked the tiger's right eye out, and smashed all the teeth of that side of the jaw. The second shot struck the tiger in the chest, but too low. What happened then Mr. Fraser does not exactly know, but he next found himself lying in front of the tiger, one claw of the beast's right foot being hooked into his left leg, in this way trying to draw Mr. Fraser towards him ; the other paw was on his right leg. Mr. Fraser's chin and coat were covered with foam from the beast's mouth. He tried hard to draw himself out of the tiger's clutches. Fortunately the beast was not able to see him, as Mr. Fraser was a little to one side—on the animal's blind side—and the tiger's head was up. Suddenly, seeing Mr. Fraser's orderly bolting, he jumped up and went for the man, and catching him he killed him on the spot. Mr. Fraser had lost his hat, rifle and all his cartridges, which had tumbled out of his pocket. He jumped up, however, and ran to the man, who had his second gun, and to do so had to go within eight paces of the spot where the tiger was crouching over his orderly. He heard, in fact, the crunching of the man's bones, and saw the tiger biting the back of the head. He now took the gun from his man. The latter said that he had fired both barrels into the tiger, one when he was crouching over Mr. Fraser, and the other when he was over the prostrate body of the orderly. The man had fired well and true, but just too far back, in his anxiety not to hit the man he would save, instead of the tiger. When afterwards asked if he was not afraid to hit the Sahib, "I was very much afraid indeed," he replied, "but dil mazbut karke lagaya : I nerved myself for the occasion." "A good man and true!" a high officer writes, "who after firing never moved an inch till Mr. Fraser came to him, although close to the tiger all the while. He is one of the Gawilghur Rajputs—a brave race, Ranjit Sing, a good name." The man said he had no more cartridges left, and so they both got a little further from the tiger, as the orderly was evidently done for. Afterwards they found one more cartridge for the gun and tried to recover the body, but it was no use. The tiger was lying close, most of the buffaloes had bolted, and the Kurkoos would not help. Mr. Fraser then sent six miles off for an elephant. But the animal did not arrive till dark, so Mr. Fraser went home in great grief about the poor orderly, and at having to leave the body. His own wound was bleeding a great deal, it being a deep claw gash. Next day they got the body and the tiger dead lying close to each other. Perhaps no narrower escape than Mr. Fraser's has ever been heard of. To the excellent shot which knocked the beast's eye out he undoubtedly owes his life. He says that he felt that he had the tiger dead when he fired, but the express bullet unfortunately broke up. Probably, he thinks, a 12-bore would have reached the brain.

Cinnamon, Nutmegs, Fibrous plants, and other Products suited for Cultivation in the Tropics.*[Published at Observer Office, Colombo, Ceylon, on or about the 1st of each month.
Commenced in June, 1881.]

"THE TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST" has now an assured position in its large circulation in Ceylon, Southern and even Central and Northern India, the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Northern Australia, Queensland, Central America, Natal, Mauritius, and the West Indies. From all sub-tropical planting settlements we have had a general approval of the publication and an encouraging measure of support. The English, Indian, and Colonial Press have spoken in commendatory terms of the T. A., as also Directors of Public Gardens, from Sir Joseph Hooker, F.R.S., downwards, and so have all planters.

* * No planter should be without it

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies (Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repository of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

* * For the sale of plants, seeds, machinery, implements, &c., used in tropical (tea, sugar, fibres, &c.) agriculture, no better advertising medium exists.

THE
AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

PUBLISHED BY

W. H. ALLEN & CO.

In 3 volumes. 8vo. 20s. each. Cloth.

HISTORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY, 1857-58, commencing from the close of the second volume of Sir John Kaye's "History of the Sepoy War."

"The second volume of Colonel Malleison's 'History of the Indian Mutiny' is quite equal to the first in every respect. The style is as eloquent, the grasp of the subject as firm, the arrangement as clear, and, above all, there is the same evidence of industry, the same evident desire to be impartial."—TIMES.

Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d., with a Portrait of the Author. Map and Plans.

THE DECISIVE BATTLES OF INDIA from 1746 to 1849 Inclusive.

"We know of no book so well calculated as is the one we are noticing for giving the student a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the successive steps taken in conquering for ourselves the Empire of Hindostan."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

AND ON THE INDIAN SEAS, including an Account of the Capture of the Isles of France and Bourbon; and a Diary of the March of the Anglo-Indian Army from Kossair to Cairo in 1801.

"Colonel Malleison is always painstaking and generally accurate; his style is transparent, and he never loses sight of the purpose with which he commenced to write."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. With Map. 18s.

A HISTORY OF AFGHANISTAN, from the Earliest Period to the Outbreak of the War of 1878.

"The charm, vivacity, and dramatic force of Colonel Malleison's narrative style are not less conspicuous in this book than in his continuation of Kaye's 'History of the Indian Mutiny.' With rare skill and literary judgment he has disentangled the facts of Afghan history from the various chronicles and records, and he has put them in the form of a clear continuous narrative."—SCOTSMAN.

8vo. With Maps and Plan. 16s.

THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF GERMANY.

From the Outbreak of the Thirty Years War to the Battle of Blenheim.

"The book will be particularly welcome to military men, but it may be perused with interest by the general reader, for Colonel Malleison's stirring narrative may be followed intelligently even by those who have no military training."—STANDARD.

8vo. With Portrait of General Lord Mark Kerr, K.C.B. 18s.

AMBUSHES AND SURPRISES: Being a

Description of some of the most Famous Instances of the leading into Ambush and Surprise of Armies, from the time of Hannibal to the period of the Indian Mutiny.

"Colonel Malleison has dealt with his subjects in an interesting and skillful manner, putting living flesh on the dry bones of history, and bringing scenes dimmed by the lapse of centuries almost as vividly before our eyes as if the incidents described had happened yesterday."—ATHENÆUM.

8vo. Price 8s.

HERAT, THE GRANARY AND GARDEN OF CENTRAL ASIA.

"Colonel Malleison is an acknowledged master of Indian history, and in this volume, as in his previous works, he has shown that he is a writer of great skill. His style is admirable, his itinerary useful, and his reading in all that concerns India profound."—ACADEMY.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

BECHUANALAND METHUEN SETTLEMENT.

PATRONS:

COLONEL the HON. PAUL METHUEN, C.B.C.M.; the Right Hon. LORD ELIBANK, R.N.

Gentlemen proceeding to this colony as settlers can for a sum of £200 purchase 3,000 acres of freehold land, to be selected on arrival. Through Bechuanaland lies the great trade route to Central Africa, and the extension of the railway from Kimberley to Vryburg, the centre of British Bechuanaland, is only a question of time. Gold has been discovered near the settlement. A settler writes: "I am delighted with my two farms; have plenty of water and trees. Shall be able to find a market for my produce. The Kaffir cattle, sheep, and goats on the veldt were in splendid condition. I consider the settlement should be a gigantic success."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 30, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 10th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 8th July; and from Calcutta to the 7th July.

THERE is no news of any official nature from Simla, where the Viceroy and Government of India at present are, unless the announcement that "the Viceroy will occupy the new Viceregal Lodge there early next month" comes under the head of "Official Intelligence."

THE Supreme Legislative Council was to meet on the 11th inst.

THE memorial portrait of Sir Charles Macgregor was unveiled by the Commander-in-Chief in the Simla Town Hall on July 3rd. Sir Frederick Roberts spoke in terms of the warmest praise of his old companion-in-arms, while the Viceroy was equally appreciative in his references to the fine soldier who had sacrificed his health and life to the service of his country. Lord Dufferin's allusion to General Macgregor as a typical Lord Warden of the Marches was one which was peculiarly effective, as his last command in India was that of the Punjab Frontier Force, which guards the border from Kashmir to Biluchistan.

A RAILWAY CONFERENCE is to be held at Simla shortly.

THE Khedive's star for the Nile Expedition was presented to the Durham Light Infantry by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught on July 4th.

COLONEL SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN, now Resident at Baroda, succeeds Sir Charles Bernard as Resident at Mysore.

THE MAHARAJA OF KASHMIR has given orders for the collection of all available mule transport in his territory for the Gilgit Expedition.

COLONEL CHISHOLM, 9th Lancers, has been appointed Lord Connamara's Military Secretary.

THE Rukhmabai conjugal rights case came to an end on July 6 in the Bombay Appellate Court, when the decree of the Lower Court directing Rukhmabai to join her husband was affirmed, conditionally that the decree should not be executed now or at any other time, and Rukhmabai to pay Rs. 2,000 costs.

THE Government of Bombay have been making inquiries into the question of the employment of women and children in the Bombay mills, especially with regard to the hours of work and the age at which children are admitted, with a view to legislation.

THE students of the Deccan Agricultural College have petitioned Government for the institution of an agricultural degree.

THE Bombay Port Trustees have decided to construct a graving dock of 536 feet in length, communicating with the Prince's Dock.

COLONEL W. H. WILSON has taken over the Commission of Police in Bombay, in succession to the late Sir Frank Souter.

MR. HINDLE, General Manager of the Mahboob Shahi Mills, was stabbed and seriously wounded at Gulburga, on June 29, by a fakir.

THE returns of the rail-borne traffic of Bombay Presidency show an increase of 3,864,727 maunds over that of the previous quarter, but a decrease of 257,287 when compared with the corresponding period of last year.

THE weather report for the past week shows that the rainfall is much more favourable, but as the change to normal conditions did not commence till the middle of the week there is still a deficiency over large tracts.

A PUBLIC subscription has been started for the purpose of establishing a "Zoo" in Bombay, and there is every prospect of the scheme being successfully carried out.

NEARLY Rs.15,000 have already been subscribed for the purpose.

A PROPOSAL is under consideration to leave certain departments of the Supreme Government, such as the Telegraph Department, permanently at Simla.

It is rumoured that there are now about seven thousand Tibetans in the neighbourhood of the Jalep Pass.

THE Agror Border is now quiet, and the Oghi outpost has been consequently reduced to a hundred men.

A RESOLUTION in the Financial Department, dealing with the accounts of the year 1886-87, shows that the net result of the year agreed very closely with the Budget.

THE financial returns of the Government of India are, so far, worse by nearly eight lakhs than had been estimated.

A LARGE Railway Conference is to be held shortly at Simla, to consider and discuss various questions relating to the traffic and working of Indian Railways.

It has been decided to construct a pipe for the conveyance of petroleum from Khatun to Sibi. The distance is about forty miles. The cost is estimated at two-and-a-half lakhs of rupees.

MR. NOBEL has submitted a proposal to the Government for constructing a broad gauge railway from Umballa to Kalka, and a two-feet gauge mountain railway from the latter place to Simla.

MAJOR SELBY has been elected a member of the Bombay Town Council, in the place of the late Sir Frank Souter.

A MEETING of the inhabitants of Vizagapatam has been held in advocacy of a coast line of railway from Madras to Calcutta.

SIR E. C. BUCK has gone to Madras and Bombay to confer with the local Governments on questions affecting the working and future organisation of the Agricultural and Survey Departments of those Presidencies.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR GEORGE WHITE has proceeded to Simla, preparatory to resuming his command in Upper Burma.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL W. GALBRAITH, commanding the Sind District, will take over charge from Brigadier-General East on the 30th inst.

THE entire cost of the reliefs of British and Native troops during 1888-89 has been budgetted at Rs. 77,211, of which Rs. 24,000 is on account of the Burma reliefs.

MR. W. J. CUNNINGHAM, Under-Secretary in the Foreign Office, will probably succeed Mr. Plowden as Resident in Cashmere.

GUNNER KELLY, of R-3 R.A., has murdered Sergeant-Major Burton, of the same battery, at Dinapore.

COLONEL SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN, now Resident at Baroda, succeeds Sir Charles Bernard, whose resignation of the Indian Civil Service has at last been formally notified, as Resident at Mysore. Colonel St. John will, however, remain at Baroda until about October next, when the Gaekwar returns from Europe; and meantime General Prendergast retains the officiating appointment at Mysore.

COLONEL SZCZEPANSKI, senior Deputy Commissioner at Berar, will continue to officiate as Commissioner until Mr.

Trevor Plowden joins in October or November next; and Colonel Mackenzie retains the Judicial Commissionership, of which he relieved the first-named officer on the death of Mr. Leslie Saunders, until the same date.

DURING the temporary absence of Mr. D. W. Campbell, Agent of the East Indian Railway Company, Mr. R. C. S. Mackenzie, the Chief Auditor, will act for him.

MR. J. T. FOWLER, Mr. L. L. Garthwaite, B.A., and Mr. G. Bickle, inspectors of schools at Madras, third, second, and sixth divisions, respectively, will retire from the service on the 1st of August, and will be succeeded by Dr. John Bradshaw, Mr. T. T. Logan, and Mr. G. Nagoji Rau, inspectors of fourth, first, and eighth divisions, respectively.

GENERAL GHOLAM HYDER, the Commander-in-Chief of the Ameer's army, has massed a considerable body of troops at Deh-Sarakh, with a view of operating in the Shinwari country, west of the Khyber. The Shinwari rising has put an end for the moment to the expedition into the Kuner Valley and Bajour.

NOTES.

THE Overland Mail from India this week brings us little news of importance. From the seat of Government at Simla that news has been summarised by the Pioneer's correspondent as follows:—

All is barren. You have been told how all Simla laughed at the beautiful black legs of Bluebeard, and cruelly insisted upon encoring the most difficult dances in that delightful burlesque. Having thoroughly understood this important fact you know all that is to be known of the past week. When we would be serious we have talked about the weather.

This is "news in a nutshell." It is a refutation of the calumny which comes from the plains that there is more play than work on the mountain. The dwellers in the plains have, however, the sympathy of those on the mountain, as the following extract from the same correspondent's letter will show:—

Next week is dotted with one or two functions, and so wholly does our anxiety for the Empire swallow up personal considerations that fair women go abroad, saying openly that they hope it will rain and "cool the poor dears down below."

The "poor dears" ought to appreciate this consideration, and send their wives to the mountain to swell the chorus of sympathy.

THE only news of real interest comes from Burma through a telegram from the Times' correspondent, stating that Boh Shwayan, the notorious dacoit chief, was killed on the 25th inst., with nine of his gang, by a body of mounted infantry belonging to the Royal Munster Fusiliers, and commanded by Lieut. Minogue. The Times' correspondent adds:—"The local Government consider this event a very important one, as Shwayan ever since the British occupation had kept the district constantly disturbed, and been the most active and relentless foe of all who were friendly to the British Government. It was his gang who killed Lieut. Williamson and Mr. O'Dowda. Boh Shwayan met his death near the spot where Mr. Williamson fell. A considerable quantity of arms and ammunition was captured, including Mr. Williamson's sword. The only man injured on our side was Sergeant Farrell, of the Royal Munster Fusiliers, who was severely wounded."

THE same correspondent states that the Chief Commissioner, when proceeding to Mandalay, held a durbar at Myinmu, and addressed an assemblage of Burmans. He described Myinmu as being the place in all Burma most noted for the misconduct of its inhabitants, and reproached the people with their cowardice in preferring to serve robbers and murderers who had killed and tortured their women and children, burnt their houses, and murdered their village elders and headmen, instead of submitting to the just government of the Queen. He promised to provide for the families of loyal Burmans who had been slain by dacoits. The Chief Commissioner concluded by threatening severe consequences to all who persisted in disloyal and disorderly courses, saying—"You will be hung or sent to prison across the seas, your lands and property will be seized and given to others, and your wives and children will have to beg their bread. This is your last opportunity of saving yourselves. Turn now, and give assistance to the Government."

THIS threat is "drastic" enough, in all conscience, but it is not quite "up to the mark" recommended by the inspector of jails in Assam for the purpose of preventing the escape of prisoners who are employed on works outside of the prison walls. Several prisoners have taken advantage of the opportunity thus afforded to them of running away, and have either escaped altogether or have been recaptured with great difficulty and trouble. The Inspector-General being much troubled in mind at such breaches of jail discipline, suggests a simple remedy, viz., to shoot the fugitives.

HE writes:—"As long as the police are not permitted to fire on prisoners escaping there is nothing to prevent an unfettered prisoner attempting to escape when employed extramurally. The number of guards over the prisoners is, in the opinion of the Inspector-General, too small, and he sees no other remedy to prevent escapes than the one he recommends, namely, the shooting down of the fugitives. This course will hardly recommend itself to English public opinion. It may, however, recommend itself to the notice of the Parnellites, as showing how the detested British Government is coercing India as it does Ireland."

THE Indian papers to hand continue to be filled with articles and letters concerning the Hyderabad (Deccan) scandal, comments on the evidence given before the Commissioners here being plentiful and somewhat strong. In noticing the statement made by Mr. Watson that he had made Mr. Furnival a present of 500 of the shares held by the concessionaires of the Nizam's Mining rights, the Pioneer reminds its readers that Mr. Furnival is agent and chief engineer of both the Railway and Mining Companies, and that Mr. Hughes is an officer of the Geological Survey, whose services were lent to the Hyderabad State for the purpose of Mining explorations.

THE Statesman continues to be excessively bitter about this business. It says:—"We have unexpected but full confirmation of the fact that the true character of Huq was as well known by the men about Lord Ripon as by ourselves, while our correspondent shows clearly and opportunely the characteristic cynicism with which the official body repelled all attempt to enlighten them as to the true character of the scheme which the Residency was pressing with such vehemence upon the Government. It is impossible that these disclosures should rest at the point we have now reached. Another parliamentary inquiry will have to follow next session upon the whole Residency system, when its abuses will be laid bare, we hope, to the bottom. It is the first step that tells, and the inquiry just closed will prepare the public mind for others of a more comprehensive order."

ANGLO-INDIANS, who have had experiences of the presence of the mosquito, may have some difficulty in understanding that that little insect is a public benefactor in the East. According to a Mr. Sullivan Thomas, who has been lecturing on its virtues, it appears that the mosquito performs the duties of Sanitary Commissioner much better than the highly-paid officials who are supposed to do something for their salaries in the three Presidencies. "The mosquito," says Mr. Thomas, "engages in sanitary work with ardour and thoroughness. Wherever there is dirty water, wherever there is a filthy drain, there the mosquito larvæ are to be found voraciously devouring the contaminating matter." This is more than can be said on behalf of the Sanitary Commissioners. And again. Mr. Thomas has discovered that it is only the female mosquito which bites mankind. This is going back to first truths. It was Eve who first bit the apple which has caused all the subsequent evils of the human race, including mosquitos.

THE death is announced at the ripe age of eighty years of Captain John Ralph Engledue. The deceased was formerly a commander in the Peninsular and Oriental Company's service, was afterwards appointed superintendent at Southampton, an office which he held for many years, and probably no man ever lived in the town whose favour was more eagerly sought, for the custom of the P. and O. was in those days well worth the having. When Captain Engledue left Southampton, and was succeeded by Captain Black, since deceased, Captain Engledue, as the Conservative colleague of the Right Hon. Russell Gurney, wooed the suffrages of the Southampton Parliamentary electors in February, 1874, the Conservative candidates were opposed by Sir Frederick Perkins and Mr. George Moffatt, Sir Frederick and Mr. Gurney being returned, and Captain Engledue being fourth on the poll. He rarely if ever visited Southampton after this, though at one time his fine figure was as familiar as any that was to be seen there. His residence was at Shirley, and he was one of the prime movers in a scheme which led to the establishment of an improved omnibus service between that place and Southampton. He was a man of somewhat rough exterior, and had the reputation of being a stern disciplinarian, but still in some quarters he made many warm friendships. His brother, Dr. Engledue, of Southsea, died nearly thirty years ago.

BY TELEGRAPH.)

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JULY 29.

At the last meeting of the Legislative Council Sir Charles Elliott introduced a Bill to make an addition to the Indian Telegraph Act by conferring the same powers with regard to telegraph cases on the Commissioner of Police and the Small Cause Court Judge at Presidency towns as are now held by District Magistrates and Judges. Mr. Westland introduced a Bill to regulate the payment of duty in respect of salt. When the increase of the salt duty was announced the immediate effect was to send up prices. Under the Sea Customs Act the Government was obliged to levy the smaller rate on all salt at sea at the time of the enhancement, and the holders of such salt got the benefit of the enhanced prices without having to pay the additional duty.

Sir Charles Aitchison introduced a Bill to repeal certain enactments relating to the Contagious Diseases Act. The Act had always had a restricted application, and last year it was in operation only in Madras and Bombay and two other places. Its operation is now entirely suspended, and the object of the Bill was to remove it from the Statute-book, with all Acts subsidiary to it. This retrograde measure is strongly opposed by the medical profession, and it is believed that the consequences of it will be very disastrous to both the European and the Native troops.

The last Simla Gazette contains an important exposition of sanitation policy, of which the following is a summary. The main obstacles which have hitherto impeded sanitary improvement in India were the ignorance of the masses, their dislike to a change of customs, the want of efficient executive agencies, and the want of funds. Some years ago it was held by the Local Governments and Administrations that to press with the weight of authority the subject of sanitary improvement, especially in the villages, was of little avail, and that persuasion, not coercion, was the right plan to follow. It is felt to-day that a more forward, though still cautious and tentative, policy is called for. Attention, it is said, should, in the first place, be directed to the question of executive agencies, and, secondly, to that of funds. Taking the question of executive agency, it is to be regarded in relation to urban and to rural areas. In relation to urban areas the question presents far less difficulty. The Municipal Acts, formerly adapted to the early stage of civic development, are now cast in an ampler mould, and the municipal boards can provide the requisite agency and raise the necessary funds. In the rural areas great improvements have been effected by the District and Local Boards Act, conferring the power of taxing. No policy of sanitary reform can be successful in India unless ample facilities are granted to all local bodies to raise funds on less onerous terms than at present exist.

It is added that, with a view to assist municipalities and local boards, it is desirable that there should be established in each province a Sanitary Board, through which the local Government can operate, and to which may be intrusted the control and supervision of all sanitary works, whether undertaken in urban or rural areas. These Sanitary Boards should be composed of an officer of approved administrative experience, the Sanitary Commissioner for the province, and an officer of the Public Works Department, skilled in sanitary engineering. With these three officers should be associated one or more non-official members, appointed by the local Government. Every Commissioner of a division in Northern India and Bombay, and possibly the District Collectors in Madras, should also be ex officio members of the Board when it is dealing with questions connected with their divisions or districts respectively. The Government thoroughly approves the principle of grants in aid, and in certain exceptional cases of contributions from the provincial and Imperial funds.

Recently the Chief Presidency Magistrate gave judgment in the child-wife torture case, in which the injured girl's husband, his brother, and mother were accused. He said it would be difficult to find a more brutal or inhuman case. A girl of only eleven years of age seemed to have been not only made a household drudge, but treated with systematic cruelty. He should not be doing his duty did he not inflict a severe penalty. He considered all equally guilty, and sentenced them to two years' rigorous imprisonment.

The Rukhmabai Defence Committee has resolved to devote its energies henceforth to the removal of the anomaly involved in punishing disobedience to a decree under Hindoo matrimonial law by the penalty of imprisonment. The co-operation of the English Committee is sought.

Early last Monday morning some criminal threw off the line, near Nasik, the Calcutta train carrying mails and passengers to Bombay for Europe. A rail was removed near the bridge over the Godavery. The engine crossed the gap, but the tender and coaches were thrown off the line. The rail had been carried away for some sixty yards, and the bolts and fishplates were found under the bridge. Fortunately no one was injured.

The Nizam of Hyderabad has commenced legal proceedings in the Bombay High Court against Abdul Huk.

A meeting has been held at Allahabad in support of the National Congress. A crowded meeting at Benares, composed of Hindoos and Mahomedans, and presided over by the Maharajah of Benares, has passed resolutions condemning the policy of the Congress. Another meeting, at which some 800 Hindoos and Mahomedans attended, has been held at Jaunpore, and resolutions were passed condemning the Congress and expressing confidence in the justice of British rule.

A Yarkandi pilgrim returning from Mecca ran amok on the night of the 23rd inst. in a third-class compartment at Moha, a small station on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway, between Delhi and Bandikui. He had a quarrel with a porter in the train, and, holding him down, he drove a small clasp knife into his throat. The wounded man contrived to escape, but died within a quarter of an hour. The Yarkandi next stabbed two other Hindoo passengers, one of whom is not expected to live. The station-master, who interfered, was stabbed in the hand. The man was eventually secured by the driver of the train and a Eurasian passenger.

A Gazette extraordinary announces that all notes or stock certificates of the Four-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Loan of 1870 will be discharged on October 27th next, on which date interest on such notes will cease. The holders will have the option, which must be exercised before the 1st of September, of transferring the amount of their notes or stock certificates into the Four per Cent. Loan of the 1st of May, 1865, bearing interest from the 1st of November next. The notes are receivable at the Bank of England up to the same date. Two annas in India and twopence per Rs. 100 in England are payable as brokerage or commission to the proprietor or agent presenting the note for transfer.

From a statement showing the number of existing companies working in Bengal for the year ending with March, 1888, as published in the last Calcutta Gazette, it appears there are 228 banking and trading companies, with a nominal capital of Rs. 11,37,19,575, and with an actual paid-up capital of Rs. 9,85,97,905. The whole of this is practically English capital.

The Advocate-General, Sir Charles Paul, was entertained yesterday at a public dinner given in his honour by the Bar to celebrate his recent appointment as a Knight Commander of the Indian Empire.

SIKKIM AND THE TIBETANS.

CALCUTTA, JULY 29.

The Tibetans, emboldened no doubt by our passive attitude, are showing signs of an intention to recommence offensive operations. Some 8,000 men have been massed in rear of the Jalapla and Pemberingo Passes. A wing of the Sherwood Foresters (Derbyshire Regiment), recently withdrawn to Darjeeling, has been ordered to return at once to Padong, and the mountain battery at Darjeeling is kept prepared for a forward movement. Reports have come in from the Nimla Ridge that several tents have been brought down into the Kapup Valley, among which is one of very large size, evidently belonging to a person of high rank, who was received on his arrival in the valley with a salute. Recently a large number of men were seen coming down the Pemberingo Pass. It was estimated that between 1,000 and 2,000 had crossed, when a mist came on and prevented further observation. These men are supposed to be at the bottom of the Pemberingo Pass, about two miles from Nimla. The fortifications in the Jalapla and Pemberingo Passes have been strengthened. About 200 men were seen lately in the Kapup Valley, the majority being dressed in red. Numbers of animals were seen coming over the pass with loads, and from the care taken of some of the animals in descending a steep part of the road it was presumed that these were carrying guns.

On the 21st a reconnoitring party of the Sherwood Foresters came on a number of the enemy in the Kapup Valley, within 800 yards of Nimla Ridge. On a volley being fired the Tibetans retreated up the Jalapla Pass, with a loss of four men, either killed or severely wounded. About 200 Tibetans appeared after the volley, but made no attempt to approach. A new wall has been built within the last few days at the bottom of the Pemberingo Pass, and several more tents have appeared in the Jalapla Pass. Our fortified camp has been greatly strengthened by the erection of a block-house on a spur to the north-east of the camp, which will hold a garrison of twenty-five men. A second block-house has been constructed 300 yards to the south of the camp, commanding a portion of the Shalambi road. This will effectually secure the camp against any attack in the rear.

This protracted and purely passive campaign is very costly, and is harassing and dispiriting to the troops, while at the same time it has the sinister effect in India of lowering our military prestige. Frontier experts are sceptical as to the effects of Chinese intervention, the only apparent result of which among the Tibetans is a still more determined policy of active aggression.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JULY 28.

The Chin chiefs have released the captives taken at Kundo and Shwedaungwin, but decline to give up the Shwegyobin Prince and other rebels demanded from them. The chiefs of the Tashon tribe have demanded the restitution of cattle belonging to the Chingaing rebels, which were seized and confiscated by the Kale Tsawbwa. They threaten if the cattle are not returned in fifteen days to attack the villages west of the Myotha river. The Tsawbwa has been instructed to refuse this demand, and a body of military police has been moved forward to the foot of the Tashon hills. A further complication with the Chins is now inevitable.

The embankment protecting Mandalay from the river is reported to be in a dangerous condition. The Mandalay Herald of July 24 states that the Deputy Commissioner has sent round notices to the people living in the localities likely to be submerged if the embankment should burst. It is to be trusted that prompt steps will be taken to prevent such a calamity. It would be discreditable to our rule if Mandalay were a second time inundated during the first three years of our occupation.

The Rangoon Gazette states that Brigadier-General Stedman, commanding the military police in Upper Burma, recently officially applied to the Government of India for an increase of 15,000 men, and adds that by a curious coincidence his application crossed a letter from the Government of India inquiring when a substantial reduction could be made in the military police.

The Rangoon Times announces that the Tounghoo-Mandalay Railway has been cut between Kyouksai and Pynmana, and that ten days will be required to repair the damage.

Notwithstanding their recent defeat by Lieutenant Fowler and his Beloochees, some Red Karens are still menacing Mankme.

The condition of the Tharrawaddy and Tavoy districts continues to attract attention. The Rangoon Times of the 26th inst. says:—

"The recent disturbances in Tavoy and Tharrawaddy may be clearly traced to the unpopular system of taxation, and in part to the corruption, want of discipline, and high handed conduct of the police. From the complaints made to us of the way in which the punitive police tax is levied by our officers, at a time when the food reserves of the people are exhausted and the price of paddy is high, we are afraid that many villagers turn dacoits simply to change the miseries of life for either death or food twice daily in gaol. Although the local Government refuses information as to the punitive taxes imposed on the people of Tharrawaddy, we can state, on good authority, that they amount to Rs. 1,60,000. The poverty of the district makes this a terrible penalty, and it is practically impossible for the peasantry to pay."

THE ASSASSINATION OF ANDREW DALGLEISH IN TURKESTAN.

From Leh in Ladak, on the Upper Indus, the news reaches us that the British trader and traveller, Andrew Dalglish, was murdered by an Afghan, between the Karakorum and Yengi passes, on the evening of April 9.

Dalglish two years ago accomplished, in company with Mr. A. D. Carey, a long journey through Chinese Turkestan, and before that he had already been several times to Yarkand, and sometimes stayed there for months. He was, therefore, well acquainted with Turkestan and its inhabitants, and knew well how to deal with the Natives, and how best to arrange things in travelling in those regions. Carey, in his report on the aforesaid journey (published in the Proceedings of the London Geographical Society, December, 1887, and January, 1888), repeatedly mentions the valuable assistance rendered by his travelling-companion, to whose great experience in travelling, knowledge of the Persian and Turkish languages, and excellent way of managing everything, Natives included, the happy result of the expedition was largely due.

During last winter Dalglish lived in Leh, and made preparations for a fresh journey to Yarkand, on business. He hired pack-horses with the necessary men, got ready his goods, and having had them properly packed, started with his caravan as early as March 20. Besides his own men, some Yarkand traders, to whom he had given permission to join his caravan, went with him; and, unhappily, also an Afghan, with whom he had had some intercourse during his stay in Leh. This Afghan, formerly a trader in good circumstances, but now very much reduced, had been loafing about at Leh for some time, and had become acquainted with Dalglish, who was always very friendly to the Natives, and often trusted them more than they deserved.

The first part of the journey was accomplished almost without any obstacle or difficulty. The Ladak mountain-range, between the river Shayok and the Indus, was easily crossed, and having gained the valley of the Shayok, the caravan had a comparatively easy road as far as the Karakorum-pass (18,500 feet), the southern slope of which, owing to the great quantity of snow still lying there, offered some difficulties. But they were happily overcome, and an easier road was now in prospect; for the caravan, in order to reach Yarkand, had only to follow the course of the Sarafshan river, and to cross the western part of the Kuenlen by the Yengi-pass (15,000 feet).

The caravan had probably reached the 36 degrees north latitude, and had just encamped on the evening of April 9th, when a terrible catastrophe occurred; for it was then that the dastardly Afghan, before alluded to, suddenly, and without any provocation, attacked Dalglish with gun and sword, and inflicting on him several mortal wounds with his weapons killed him before the eyes of his men. This murderous attack probably was perpetrated so instantaneously that neither Dalglish's men nor the Yarkand traders could have prevented it, even had they been resolute and armed; but they evidently were neither. At any rate, they were not armed, apparently in consequence of Dalglish's want of precaution. After having travelled so much in Turkestan without encountering any serious danger, he at last had come to trust every Native, and to live and to travel amidst them unarmed and with unarmed companions. But Dalglish's people showed also great want of courage and resolution, for instead of attacking and overpowering the villainous Afghan with tent-poles or other objects at hand, they did not even prevent the assassin from escaping with Dalglish's pack-horses and goods; and this escape, no doubt, implies the departure of some of the convoy men at least with the Afghan, although their doing so may be explained and excused by their defenceless state, and by the violence of the armed ruffian.

The remainder, however, of the caravan acted very faithfully towards their unhappy master, for they carried the dead body the long journey back to Leh—that is to say, a march of rather more than twenty days. They most likely performed that task with the help of pack-horses, but still it was an act of unusual self-devotion and faithfulness, and plainly shows their attachment to the deceased traveller, who universally was esteemed by all the Natives he had to deal with.

The arrival of the dead body in Leh, fearfully disfigured as it was by numerous deep wounds, caused a general and painful emotion, and Dalgleish's friends soon came together to bury him in the small cemetery set apart for Europeans. A missionary of the Moravian Church, who had been stationed there for some years, and who had been on very friendly terms with the deceased traveller, performed the funeral service according to the rites of the English Church.

Since the assassination of Adolf Schlagintweit, at Yarkand, on Aug. 26, 1857, no European traveller has suffered a violent death in those regions, nor would Dalgleish have lost his life on this journey if he had not allowed the Afghan to join his party.

In Leh, which has of late been a gathering-place of suspicious-looking characters from the surrounding tribes, the Afghans are always considered the worst and most treacherous of all, and even Kashmir people are preferred to them. This must have been known to Dalgleish, who was so well acquainted with Leh and its inhabitants, and there is no other explanation of his kindness towards the Afghan, except his good-nature and his entire and indiscriminate confidence in the Natives. He often said one must win the heart of the Natives, and by confiding in them gain their entire confidence. He had acted according to this noble and Christian principle, and had by doing so, during his long sojourn in Kashmir and Turkestan, always succeeded in getting manageable and faithful servants. But for once his principle failed to secure the usual results, and his noble intentions were frustrated. The heart of this vicious and greedy Afghan was not to be won by love and confidence, and Mr. Dalgleish became the victim of his otherwise noble and praiseworthy sentiments, in the application of which he unhappily went too far.

Warned by his misfortune, other travellers will probably not lightly trust any Afghan, and will not start for Turkestan unarmed and with unarmed men.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

A COMMERCIAL VICEROY.

(Madras Mail.)

In one of his recent letters to The Times Sir William Hunter expressed his conviction that a "Commercial Viceroy" is India's crying want. His meaning is not very apparent. As a rule, Indian Viceroys have done all that lay in their power to encourage industry and commerce, though, of course, without neglecting those political and military questions on the wise solution of which depend the stability of British rule in this country. Lord Ripon, indeed, was too much preoccupied in loosening the foundations of the politico-social system to be able to direct his mind to the consideration of more practical points; while Lord Dufferin's attention has been absorbed by the conquest of Burma, and the urgent necessity of pushing forward the defences of the north-western frontier. But even under these two Viceroys the construction of railways has been diligently prosecuted, and a stimulus has been applied to the increased exportation, and consequently increased cultivation of wheat. It does not, however, rest with any Viceroy to control the European demand for Indian produce. Cultivators and dealers must alike take their chance, and few materials are obtainable for a sagacious forecast of the future, so that it might almost be said of every shipment that it is a leap in the dark. The most experienced authority on commercial questions would fail to increase imports or exports by the smallest fraction. Englishmen—and Indian trade is mainly influenced by Englishmen,—are averse from official tutelage. They may still entertain a lurking faith in the collective good sense of Parliament, but there is just now no politician, with the exception of Mr. Goschen, in whom they are disposed to place confidence as a sure guide regarding the principles which underlie the success of all commercial and industrial enterprise. Even Mr. Goschen's knowledge is to a great extent speculative. He is rather a master of finance than of commerce, though banking operations, of course, are more or less connected with trade and the Stock Exchange. Of purely industrial pursuits he has had no personal experience. As Chancellor of the Exchequer he is, no doubt, in a position to obtain the most trustworthy information from all quarters, but in India a Viceroy enjoys no such advantage. The latter is, so to speak, at the mercy of the half-dozen or so of prosperous firms with whom he is distantly acquainted, and whom his official advisers still regard with something of the distrust and hauteur with which their predecessors were wont to favour indigo planters and other European "interlopers." With native agriculture Sir William Hunter, we presume, would not desire official interference of any kind. All that is wanted by the cultivator are abundant rains at the proper seasons; reasonable protection against usurers and rack-renters; and fairly good roads to the nearest markets.

Envious Nature may possibly have broken the moulds from which issued a Wellesley and a Dalhousie, and in any case it would be hard to find such masterful men on British soil in these days. In default of such exceptional rulers India is justified in insisting that the best qualified native of the British Isles, noble or commoner, should be sent out to govern 200 millions of human beings, and to exercise a salutary influence over the 50 millions who are outside the British pale. A genuine statesman is India's present and permanent want. For choice, we would rather that he had never been in the diplomatic service, and was still too stiff-necked to bow the head in the temple of any false god. How long would it have taken a Wellesley, or a Dalhousie, to have reduced Burma to tranquillity? Great, then, is the need of a vigorous strong-willed ruler, who shall impose order upon the Burmans and at the same time oppose such a bold front to the Russians as shall make them pause ere entering on the war path. Commerce is good for a nation, and commerce is built upon industry, but it is not written that men shall not live by bread alone? Let it never be said of the Natives of India that they are born only to consume the fruits of the earth. The great problems that are now presenting themselves for solution call imperatively for the master mind of a statesman who thoroughly understands human nature and can sympathise with its vagaries as well as its solid excellences, and who is soundly versed in the histories of many nations, from their uprising to their zenith, their decline and their fall.

Lord Lansdowne is entitled to expect a cordial and respectful welcome. He will be unable to establish any claim to be regarded as a commercial Viceroy; but he is preceded from Canada by the prestige of having made himself universally popular in the Dominion, and of having proved a worthy successor of Lord Dufferin. Lady Lansdowne, too, made herself as widely acceptable in Canada as it was Lady Dufferin's good fortune to do. He has accepted at a momentous epoch in the history of the world one of the most exalted and most difficult spheres of human activity. He is comparatively young, and his characteristics are all in his favour. He is not yet regarded in England as a conspicuously strong man; but circumstances develop character, and often bring to light brilliant qualities that were previously unsuspected. He is a consistent Liberal, and is no faddist. Standing well with both political parties he should be conceded by the India Office a good deal of independence of action; and he will doubtless continue to act up to his family motto of "Virtute non verbis."

A STRANGE HYDERABAD STORY.

(Statesman.)

We have feared from the first that it would be hopeless to expect that the Select Committee which was appointed to inquire into the history of the Deccan Mining Company would extend the scope of its researches by an inquiry into the character of Mr. Cordery's rule generally as Resident at the Nizam's capital. At the same time we submit earnestly to Lord Dufferin that more than enough has been elicited by the Committee to make it the positive duty of the Supreme Government to do what it was impossible for the Committee to attempt. The state of matters at Hyderabad under Mr. Cordery has been such, that it would be the merest affectation to profess that he was not himself the great fountain from which the demoralisation of the place flowed. Abdul Huq was simply his creature. Our readers will remember the charges made by us against his first assistant, Major Trevor, in these columns in December, 1883. Major Trevor had succeeded in getting the Nizam's Government to create a sinecure appointment for his brother with a salary of Rs. 2,500 a month attached thereto. The young man had no claim upon the Nizam of any kind, and it was as gross an abuse of the influence of the Residency as could possibly have been made. Mr. Trevor, after drawing his salary for some years, got tired of doing nothing. He wanted to get back to England, and the late Sir Salar Jung was induced just before his death, by the solicitations of the Residency, to agree to compensate him for relinquishing his office, by a payment of Rs. 48,000. The Minister died, when the old Peshkar who succeeded him was at once cajoled into doubling the sum that had been promised by the deceased Minister. The increased sum was duly paid, when Mr. Cordery again sanctioned an application to the Peshkar for further claims, amongst which was one for Rs. 36,000, upon the pretext of "fees" being due to Mr. Trevor, as counsel in London in connection with the Railway scheme.

What the aggregate amount of these demands came to we do not know, but no grosser abuse of its influence could have been committed by the Residency. The money, moreover, was paid to abolish the sinecure, but the appointment was merely passed on to another Residency nominee. Now Mr. Cordery, with the Nizam and the Peshkar, was present in this city in December, 1883, when we preferred these charges against himself and his assistant. Everyone believed that we should be prosecuted for statements so incredible; and as a fact, steps, we believe, were taken to commence proceedings against us, only to be abandoned, however, when Lord Ripon was informed that no case would lie against us, unless the charge was a false one. The admission had then to be made by the Residency that the statement was true, when Lord Ripon was weak enough to deem it wiser to say nothing more about the matter, but permit it to be hushed up. Exposure would do harm. The charge would fade from the public mind, and in the course of a few months be forgotten. That it was a scandalous transaction no one doubted; but it was simply one of a series of proceedings of the same order, the worst of which, perhaps, was that laid bare by us concerning Major Nevill.

Let us briefly, then, recall what that story was. Major Nevill has long been a very prominent character at Hyderabad as Commander of the Nizam's Cavalry. What his antecedents were as an officer in the Royal Army, what the cause of his retirement therefrom, or the special circumstances which induced him to come to India, we do not know; but in common, we suppose, with some of our contemporaries, we have received communications concerning these matters in years past, that were unfavourable to Major Nevill, but that we thought it right to suppress. Suffice it to say that Major Nevill's services were imposed upon the Nizam by Lord Lytton, or we believe, to speak more accurately, by Lady Lytton, who, we have been told, was a personal friend of Mrs. Nevill. Whether this is true or not is of little moment, as the Nizam's service for the last seventy years has been the great preserve to which influential men in the Government of India have looked for providing for their sons and nephews, or for their private friends. What is very certain is that Major Nevill has grown into a most important personage at Hyderabad under the Residents'hip of Mr. Cordery.

A few years ago, then, the widow of a deceased khansamah or butler in Major Nevill's employ, ventured to sue this gentleman for a sum of Rs. 5,000, which she declared was due by Major Nevill to her husband, on account, we believe, of bazaar purchases. The suit had to be prosecuted in one of the Nizam's Courts, and in answer thereto both Major and Mrs. Nevill declared on oath that the claim was a false one, and that they owed the deceased nothing whatever. Now in the judgment of the largest charity, and after making allowance for the most lax or reckless manner of conducting household expenses—it must seem incredible that any man should have relations with his khansamah or butler of such an order, that he positively did not know that he owed the man one rupee, when his widow was suing him for Rs. 5,000. The claim was repudiated both by Major Nevill and his wife, when they suddenly remembered that the money was really owing to the widow as representative of her deceased husband, and paid the sum into Court, with the costs of the plaintiff. The widow affirmed that her husband had held the Major's promissory notes for the amount, but that she had been unable to find them. The case was adjourned, and in the search for these notes which followed, the poor woman succeeded in finding them, when Major Nevill abandoned the defence, and paid the money into Court before the adjourned hearing came on. No more unpleasant incident could be recorded of any man; but the charity which thinketh no evil, but believeth all things, and hopeth all things, requires everyone to assume that it was either simple failure of memory, or very careless and even reckless housekeeping that brought it about. Wanting this charity, one of the local papers at Hyderabad seems to have commented upon the incident in terms that were so uncompromising that Major Nevill felt obliged to prosecute both the editor and publisher of the paper, and as they were British subjects, they were required to appear before the High Court at Bombay. Major Nevill has now as full and desirable an opportunity as he could have wished for, to explain as prosecutor in the witness-box how it was that he had been led to contest a claim which he saw and admitted to be true when confronted with his own written acknowledgment of the debt, and his "notes" promising to pay the money. We should naturally have supposed that the sole purpose of the prosecution he had instituted was the opportunity it would give him of going into the witness-box and explaining, in a straightforward and manly way, how both he and Mrs. Nevill had come to be misled. To the astonishment of everyone, the charge against the writer of the libellous article was abandoned by the prosecution, giving no evidence against him whatever, while the second defendant again and in the most extraordinary manner pleaded guilty, when the High Court could, of course, do nothing but give sentence against him. As Major Nevill practically withdrew his prosecution of the writer of the article, by producing no evidence against him, but as the other accused acknowledged that he had published the article, the position remained just as it was before. But armed with this technical victory, achieved no one knows how, Major Nevill returned to Hyderabad to make the Nizam—of all parties in the world—pay dearly for no one knew what, until the was told in our issue of June 17th. What the Nizam was required to pay Major Nevill before that gentleman's honour was satisfied, and Mr. Cordery thought further exactions needless, we shall summarise in another article, that the Government of India may be left without excuse, if it permits the matter to be passed by without the most searching examination into the facts, and adequate action thereon.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE AGITATION.

TWO SECTIONS OF THE SERVICE.

(Madras Mail.)

It seems to me that those officers of the so-called Uncovenanted Service who were appointed in Europe are seriously jeopardising their chance of obtaining their pensions at par by making common cause with that large body of officers who have been recruited in India under entirely different conditions, and whose claims to consideration must necessarily, therefore, rest on an altogether different and less firm basis. Moreover, the former class do not labour under the various disadvantages in regard to leave, service counting for pension, &c., that constitute so large a portion of the grounds of complaint of the latter; and they are, therefore, in a false position when they mix themselves up in an agitation which dwells largely—principally, I might almost say—on such matters. The great difference that exists in the cases of the two classes in asking for pensions at par may be seen at a glance. Officers recruited in England have, as a very general rule, succeeding in obtaining their appointments by severe competition, and a course of special, and, in many cases, expensive training; and they were led to suppose, from the prospectuses furnished them by the India Office, that Rs. 10 and £1 were one and the same thing. Many of these men, moreover, entered into covenants with the Secretary of State in which their salaries were expressed in sterling money; in which pensions were promised on retirement, according to the rules that should then be in force; it was stated that in all payments made under such covenants, the pound sterling should be considered equal to and calculated at the rate of Rs. 10.

Whether the above facts constitute a legal claim to the payment of pensions to these men at par seems a little uncertain; but, in any case, there can be no doubt that they establish the very strongest moral claim, and one which, I believe, if fairly represented, and temperately and persistently urged, cannot fail in the end to be recognised. On the other hand, the services of officers taken on in India have, for the most part, been secured in a much easier fashion. In numerous instances such men have failed to qualify for the Departments recruited in England, and have come out to this country on spec, glad to get anything they could; and in, I believe, every instance, since the year 1863, there has been no misunderstanding whatever as to the terms of their appointment, or the payment of their salaries and pensions, all of which have been distinctly fixed and stated in rupees. Consequently, however just and reasonable the request of these men (in common with the others) may be to be protected from the serious and unforeseen loss by fall in exchange, when they retire, and however harsh and unjust and impolitic it would be of Government to turn a deaf ear to their cry, it cannot be pretended that they have a claim, strictly so called, to such protection. The view expressed by Mr. Buckley, at the recent Simla meeting, that it matters little how men are imported, and that so long as they are bona fide Europeans, their claims to sterling pensions are the same, however pretty in theory, will not hold water. As the Civil and Military Gazette has pointed out, it is the market in which he is engaged, and not his nationality, that must be the great factor in determining the rules to be granted to an Indian official, at all events with regard to the question I am considering. It cannot be very difficult, then, to see that to mix the two classes up as if they had identical interests and equal claims, is to very materially weaken the position of the one class without any advantage whatever to the other; and Government have not been slow to see this, and, apparently, to make the most of it during the recent debate on Mr. King's motion in Parliament. From what I have written it follows that whereas men appointed in India would do well to consider and adopt the advice given in your editorial of June 13th, and accept thankfully whatever terms Government may be graciously disposed to give them, it would be folly in the extreme for men appointed in Europe, in the manner I have described, to too readily abandon the good case they have and to cease agitating for what is unquestionably and literally, in their case, an equitable right and no largesse at all.

COVENANTED UNCOVENANTED.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN FRONTIER.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Agror valley, the chief village of which is Ughi, is situated on the west of the Hazara District, and the "Black Mountain" is a mountain situated at the north-western extremity of the Hazara District, whence it runs northward into independent territory. Its total length is about twenty-five to thirty miles, and its average height about 8,000 miles above the sea. The mountain ascends from the Indian basin at its southern end, near the village of Kiara. The highest ascertained height of any peak of the Black Mountain is Machai, of which the height is 9,803 feet; and there are ten chief peaks, none of which can be less than 9,000 feet elevation. On its eastern face it has Agror. The Black Mountain may be described as a long, narrow ridge, with higher peaks at intervals, and occasional deep passes; the general outline of the crest is more rounded than sharp. Numerous large spurs project from the sides, which are often precipitous and rocky, with deep narrow glens or gorges lying between them, in which lie the villages of the tribes. The soil of the hill sides is for the most part rocky and stony. When uncultivated the lower slopes are covered with thorny bushes and grass; further up forest replaces this, and the whole of the upper portion of the spurs and crest is thickly wooded. The routes by which troops can ascend the mountain necessarily lie along one or more of its spurs.

The Indus runs under the western foot of the mountain, and is deep and rapid, with rocky bed. Its width is from 70 to 150 yards, and it is said to be 300 in some places; but this is probably an exaggeration. During its course under the Black Mountain the Indus is crossed at numerous points by ferries. The Natives of the country also cross the river at nearly every point on inflated skins (pushtu "shinas"). In Abbott's Report of the Expedition of 1852 the rapidity with which the enemy who had collected Trans-Indus swam across the river on skins when our troops commenced their retirement, is noticed.

Counting from south to north, the tribes of the mountain consist of—on the west face, 1, Hasanzai; 2, Akazai; 3, Chagarzai; north of Agror on the east face, 4, Syads of Pariari; 5, Swatis of Deshi. Of the above the first three belong to the Yusufzai clan, the Hasanzais and Akazais to the Isazai branch, and the Chagarzais to the Malizai branch. The Syads of Pariari are simply the original owners of the land of that name, which lie in two deep narrow glens immediately north of Mana-ka-Dana. The villages are chiefly held by the Basikhel Chagarzais, who have got most of the land into their hands either by mortgage or purchase. The Deshis, who are by descent Swatis, of the branch Moniali, hold the glens of the mountain and the sub-adjacent lands lying along the Nandihar stream and north of Pariari and trund as far as Takot. None of the tribes have a reputation for warlike qualities. The Chagarzais are the most numerous, and the Akazais the weakest in numbers, though they have the best name as fighting men, and are the most troublesome race of all to our Government. The Deshis are very united among themselves, as far as outsiders are concerned, and are respected by their neighbours accordingly. The Hasanzais are a section of the Isazai Yusufzais, who reside on both sides of the Indus, those Cis-Indus living on the Black Mountain, and those Trans-Indus immediately opposite to it. Eastward the Hasanzai are bounded by the Akazais, whose territory, running along the crest of the mountain, meets the Hasanzai, Agror, and Tanawal, borders at Kahi Gali. The Trans-Indus portion of the tribe is bounded on the south and west by the territory of the Mada Khels, and on the north by the Chagarzais, from whom they are divided by the Nadira Khwar.

The Akazai are a division of the Isazai clan of Yusufzais, who inhabit the western slopes of the Black Mountain on the Hazara border. On the east the mountain as far as Chita Batr forms their boundary with Agror.

THRASHING NIGGERS.

(Englishman.)

Will the old hackneyed calumnies concerning the treatment of Natives by Europeans ever die out? The stale, weary old libel is repeated once more by the correspondent of an English journal who has recently spent a couple of months in India. It is customary for Englishmen dwelling in the East to calmly ignore the charges of brutality in their dealings with the Natives which is so recklessly brought against them by writers of the class represented by this correspondent, and if Anglo-Indian society alone had to be considered such a course would best meet the requirements of the case. There are, however, reasons why judgment should not always be allowed to go by default, for astounding credulity in these matters is frequently displayed by many of our countrymen at home. Of course, those possessing more than a casual knowledge of Anglo-Indian life will at once suspect that the "resident of many years," who, speaking of the Natives, enjoined his hearers to "Thrash them! thrash them! Every blow that misses is a blow wasted!" and the young officers who "chimed in heartily," were together subjecting the credulity of the stranger to a very severe strain, but the seriousness with which their victim relates the story shows that they were not mistaken in their man. If, however, we should admit that such a state of things as is described by the correspondent does really exist in India, and that British officers and gentlemen generally express sentiments worthy of the "Legrees" of the old Slave States, what would the admission prove?

Only that such brutality is innate in the British character, and that critics of the stamp of the correspondent must seek a remedy for it elsewhere than in the place where they assume it originates.

Each year the European community in India is recruited by large drafts from British barracks, colleges, and counting-houses, and it is plain that, unless the average Briton be a creature of chameleon-like temperament, changing his individuality with his climate, he must be much the same man here as at home. If he, then, be convicted of brutality in his daily intercourse with a weaker race, the British public, who are his judges, must be concealing the like defect beneath the mask of a pseudo-philanthropy. It would serve as an apt illustration of such an argument to add that the only case of systematic ill-usage of a Native servant by his European master which has come under our immediate observation was one in which the wrong-doer was a disciple of Lord Ripon, an advocate of the Ilbert Bill, and a follower of Mr. Gladstone. We need not enter further upon this phase of the question. Deliberate ill-treatment of Native dependents is as widely disapproved of here as at home, while to speak of them as "niggers," as the acquaintance of this correspondent is said to have done, is sufficient to raise a serious doubt as to the reputation of the speaker. Neither is it the fact that the longer Europeans live among Natives the more they dislike them, the general experience pointing quite the other way. The relations between master and servant are rarely more cordial than those which exist between an old Arglo-Indian and his faithful "bearer," while, as for thrashing servants, it would be equally true to say that it was a common practice to thrash servants in England. If the retailer of the artless "Joe Millers" of Indian gossip had only ventured upon the experience of thrashing a Calcutta servant, he would have promptly discovered that the thrashee was fully alive to the redress which is secured to him by law. Of course, the faded, witless yarns which are now revived by an English traveller, in an English journal, are nothing but the common fare doled out to the wide-eyed Griffin and the gaping globe-trotter; the India revealed by the correspondent has as little connection with anything in real life as the Restoration drama, according to Charles Lamb's well-known theory.

HEAT IN THE HIGH COURT.

Babu Annoda Persaud Bannerjee addressed the Court as follows:—"I have to make application, my Lord, on behalf of the vakeels of this Court, and that is that, as the weather is excessively hot, we have to ask you to be good enough to close the Court for at least a week."

Their Lordships decided not to sit before Monday next, but Mr. Justice Norris said that "his Court would not sit till the commencement of the rains."—Englishman, Thursday, 21st June, 1888.

The sun of June, with more than summer heat,
Upon the Halls of Indian Justice beat,
And the grave Judges of the great High Court
When the gun sounded from Calcutta's Fort,
Met, all unrobed, to tap the whisky keg
And taste the harmless necessary peg.
Then one with gentle voice and pleasant tongue
Spoke as the dewdrops from his brow he wrung;
"Oh! that the moisture of the tardy rains
Would cool the burning horror of the plains!
Or that the busy black litigious swarm
Would go—where e'en this heat would not seem warm.
Though here the woolly wig we need not wear,
But boast the beauty of our native hair,
We grunt and sweat beneath a weary load,
Of coat and gown. Oh! for that ancient woad
Which made the early Briton's bluestained skin Seem clothed without, but kept him cool within.
Oh! that we all could fly these Courts of woe
And to the sweet Elysian mountains go!
There on our backs to lie and cool all day,
With nought on earth to do but draw our pay.
Where'er we walk cool gales should fan the glade,
And not one glass show eighty in the shade.
Alas! we cannot tear ourselves away,
What would that precious fussing public say?
They would remind us there are other men
Who in this city ply the busy pen,
Who day by day, for longer hours than we,
Work hard to gain the fleeting, coy rupee.
And others, too, whose daily labour's done
Beneath the sky—unsheltered from the sun.
Have we, indeed, a harder lot than these?
On whom no punkah sheds its fresh'ning breeze?
They work as hard as we do—they will say—
And talk with scorn about 'the Law's delay,'
Does the sun shine on us with hotter fire?

Do judges more than other men perspire?
Do they?" He's silenced by a burst of grief,
"You're speaking from the other fellow's brief."
"Not so," he answers. "I attempt to show
That for us to shut up the shop's no go.
But I propose to try this little plan,
Put up some known Bengali gentleman,
For all the Native pleaders let him seek
The boon of an adjournment for a week.
Then will the public say, "The Natives, too,
Cannot their ordinary tasks pursue;
The heat which Native lawyers cannot face
Must be peculiar to the Devil's own place!
Such reason will their jealous fears allay,
And we shall get a spell of holiday."
He spoke. But one uprose. "A week won't do;
I will not come back to this place to stew;
This precious punkah isn't worth a hang;
It's wind's not tempered to the shorn lamb."
"Well," replies one, "beneath my coat I smother:
The shorn lamb's deal better off than t'other."
Resumes the former, "Whether shorn or not,
Tempered or otherwise, it's far too hot.
May all my smartest jokes in Court fall flat!
May I be forced to eat my sola hat!
May all my clearest judgments be reversed,
May all my life be one perpetual thirst
If I within these walls will sit again
Until the land is laved with cooling rain."
He fled perspiring—but the rest remain,
To take unwilling seats in Court again.
Next day, as was arranged—the plan proceeds,
The Babu rises, and of course succeeds.
The Judges are consulted, and the Chief
Says that he thinks four days will give relief.
So, just to give the weather one more chance,
In hope that weather charts are not romance,
Lest by their curses Redder may be vex't,
The Courts will stand adjourned till Monday next.
And out they trip like happy lads from school
To seek elsewhere for any place that's cool;
But passing by one dark deserted Court
They all with one accord to read stop short,
For on the door a bold device explains,
"THIS COURT WILL NOT REOPEN TILL THE RAINS."

BENGAL.

ACCORDING to the latest reports the hot weather has seriously affected the indigo prospects in both Behar and Bengal, and has made manufacture impossible except in a few factories, the consequence being that the season will be later than usual. Towards the end of the fortnight some showers had fallen in Champaran, Chupra, and Tirhoot, and also in Bhaugulpur and Purneah districts. In the few places where manufacture has begun the yield from the plant is said to have been fairly satisfactory, but it will be nearly a week before most factories are in full swing. In Benares and the North-West Provinces the heat has also been excessive, and rain is much wanted, but the plant is still holding out well.

DESPITE the efforts of the Agricultural Department the ryots in Bengal continue slow to adopt improved implements. Of eight new ones tested and proved useful during the past year only one has found any favour with the people: and of twelve reported on in former years only one can be said to be making any considerable headway. That the reluctance of the ryots to depart from the ways of their fathers is not insuperable is shown by the fact that on the Durbhunga estate they have been induced to try a new plough and have taken to it; but generally the progress made is almost desperately slow.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal have declared a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, carrying to Reserve Fund one lakh, to Pension Fund Rs. 42,000, and forward to the current half-year Rs. 3,21,000.

MADRAS.

GENERAL GIBB returned to Secunderabad from Ooty on the 2nd inst., and resumed command of the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force.

A MEETING of the Madras Bank has been held at Madras, the directors declaring a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, placing half a lakh to the reserve fund, and carrying forward Rs. 57,000.

BOMBAY.

MR. O. J. SHEDLOCK, Executive Engineer, Bellary-Kistna State Railway, has been granted fifteen months' furlough.

THE services of Surgeon C. G. W. Lowdell, Indian Medical Department, have been placed at the disposal of the Government of India.

THE appointment of Colonel Wilson to the Commissioner-ship of Police, Bombay, in succession to the late Sir Frank Souter, is gazetted.

THE last issue of the Gazette of India announces the appointment of Mr. Hormusjee Eduljee Bode as Vice-Consul for the United States at Bombay.

THE quantity of cotton shipped from the port of Bombay during the month of May was 177,042 bales, weighing 69,375,214 lbs., and valued at Rs. 1,76,98,236.

DURING the absence of Major C. W. H. Sealy, Mr. L. P. Walsh acts as Second Assistant Political Resident, Aden, without leaving the Somali Coast. Captain M. T. Lyde and Mr. Muncherjee Rustomjee Dholoo act as Third and Fourth Assistant Political Residents, Aden.

COLONEL W. H. WILSON, the newly-appointed Commissioner of Police, has arrived in Bombay and taken over charge from Mr. G. H. Gell, the Deputy Commissioner of Police, who has been discharging the duties of the office of Commissioner.

At the meeting of the council of the Bombay Presidency Association held on the 2nd inst. it was resolved to forward a representation to the local Government with reference to some of the provisions of the new Salt Bill which are considered to be objectionable, especially the sections relating to salt earth and erection of salt platforms and other matters which are an interference with the legitimate business of salt dealers.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH AND PUNJAP.

THE following are the candidates at the forthcoming Simla Municipal Elections:—Captain E. Barrow, Lieutenant Williams, R.E., Rev. W. Smith, Mr. E. Corstorphan, Mr. J. Craddock, and Mr. J. Chambers.

SAYS the Lahore paper, writing on the 27th ult.:—"It appeared at one time likely that the Punjab would be visited this year with a cholera epidemic; but the returns are now somewhat reassuring. The disease, so far, has confined itself to the Umballa, Guzerat, Rawal Pindi, and Shahpore districts. There have been 1,421 seizures, with 650 deaths only; so that the disease is not of a very virulent character. The Shahpore district has suffered most, the number of cases having been 1,219 with 527 deaths. It is not unlikely that the disease has come down the river from Cashmere."

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

ARMY RIFLE CLUBS IN INDIA.

THE Commander-in-Chief having noticed that musketry efficiency has a tendency towards improvement or deterioration which is in direct proportion to the popularity or otherwise of regimental or company rifle clubs, has directed that commanding officers of British and Native regiments to do all in their power to organise clubs in their regiments, and to maintain them on a good footing. His Excellency is most anxious to encourage these institutions, and he has therefore caused a set of rules to be prepared which, while they may contain suggestions valuable even to regiments whose clubs are in a flourishing condition, will certainly afford assistance to corps who are about to establish them for the first time. The Commander-in-Chief authorises commanding officers to make such grants of money as can be made available for this purpose from the lead and cartridge case fund, and commanding officers of British corps may also make similar grants from surplus balances of canteen funds. His Excellency wishes it, however, to be distinctly understood that this standard set of rules is not in any way intended to supersede those which corps may have found to work well in practice. The principle of these rules is generally applicable to cavalry or infantry and to regimental or company rifle clubs:—

The club to be under the general superintendence of the officer commanding.

Its principal object is to provide its members with a plentiful supply of free or cheap ammunition. It will further endeavour to promote match shooting.

Assistance will, when practicable, be afforded to members wishing to enter for the B.P.R.A., or other extra regimental matches.

The club shall be maintained, 1st, by such donations from the surplus of the canteen fund, lead and cartridge case fund, or any other available fund, as the officer commanding may think fit; 2nd, by the subscriptions of members.

The affairs of the club shall be managed by a committee consisting of the officer second-in-command, the adjutant, and another officer. This committee shall be assisted by an executive committee consisting of the colour-sergeants of companies (hավildars), or by a representative from each company to be appointed by the captain (wing officer).

Members shall be divided into three classes as follows:—

Class A.—Marksmen and first-class shots.

Class B.—Second-class shots.

Class C.—Third-class shots.

The several classes shall, as a rule, shoot separately, and each class shall receive an equal proportion of prizes. Should it be necessary for two classes to fire together those in the lower grade will receive a handicap of points.

Winners of prizes may be promoted into a higher class, or be handicapped, at the discretion of the Committee.

The following scale of handicaps will be in force:—

A winner of a first prize in the first class 3 points for one month, a winner of a second prize in the first class 2 points for two months, other winners in the first class 3 points for one month.

Ties will be decided by the rules of the B.P.R.A.

The rules regarding range practice will be in accordance with those laid down in the Musketry Regulations.

Each member of the shooting club to be allowed to fire, if possible, one hundred rounds of ammunition free yearly. Should any member choose to fire more he will be charged at a reduced rate.

A roll will be kept of members of the club by companies.

An account book will be similarly kept showing the subscriptions, donations, and grants received, the sums expended in the purchase of ammunition, and issues of the same.

Each company will during the hot weather have leave off parade twice a month for shooting.

A man wishing to fire on any evening when match shooting is taking place may be excused from attending afternoon parade.

Thursday will, as a rule, be set apart for pool shooting.

Prizes will be competed for as the state of the funds may from time to time admit, the object being to give many small instead of a few large prizes.

It must be borne in mind that all classes of shots should have a good chance of winning something.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE STANDARD OF VALUE.*

It is so difficult to understand, so impossible to become fond of the subtle arguments which beset the study of the deep financial mysteries surrounding the monetary systems of the world, that we are in fear and trembling when we endeavour to understand Mr. Jordan's plans and proposals. So far as would appear to a non-expert reader, this bimetallist objects to the action of Lord Liverpool, who, in 1816, demonetised silver and made gold the sole standard of the realm. This, says our author, was unjust to the debtors (the nation), who previously had the option of redeeming their obligations as regards the National Debt either in gold or silver. Now, as the former metal is appreciated, while its rival is less valuable than was the case when the money was borrowed by Government, it is clear that the action of the authorities in thus curtailing the privilege of choice was unjust and improper.

Mr. Jordan further proceeds to argue that the law of 1816 has a tendency to enrich the wealthy (the lenders) and impoverish the poor (the borrowers—i.e., the taxpayers), and to such an extent is this the case, that he predicts that, should the double standard not be restored, repudiation will be the sole remaining remedy for a state of affairs which is every day becoming more and more intolerable. We do not presume to enter upon any discussion as to the merits of the case. It is clear that the depreciation of silver is one of the most serious economic questions of the day—the more so if Mr. Jordan's arguments be sound, in so far as he contends that the fall of prices, the diminished value of land, and the ruin of agriculture are each and all the result of the legislation of 1816. Merely as concerns India, to say nothing of Great Britain, the matter is pregnant with significance, and any attempt to solve the problem merits careful consideration and earnest reflection. Mr. Jordan's pamphlet is, therefore, a welcome addition to the discussion of the monetary problem of the day. All will not, of course, agree with its arguments, but all will, perhaps, admit its ability and moderation.

ST. MUNGO'S BELLS.†

It is the custom to regard Glasgow merely in the light of a great commercial emporium, oblivious of the fact that it has "a long pedigree," and that there is an immense amount of antiquarian interest attaching to the town of "St. Mungo's Bells." So Mr. Callant has conceived the praiseworthy idea of casting "a few seeds here and there even among the hard paving-stones of the City," not in the way of "ancient lines and fossil remains," but rather in the direction of historical facts. And assuredly the result is an olla podrida of an extremely interesting nature, not alone to the good folks of the busy city itself, but also to the wider circle of those who read to gain information, and who are glad to revel amidst quaint anecdotes of the olden time and curious customs of past days. Such persons will assuredly find no lack of entertainment. "St. Mungo's Bells" ring blithely and merrily. There are biographical sketches of Glasgow worthies; James Watt, David Livingston, Ralph Wardlaw, Edward Irving of apostolic fame, Whitefield, Chalmers, Colin Campbell, better known as Lord Clyde, Thomas Muir, and a host of others, live once again amidst the scenes of their triumphs. The streets and buildings, too, have many of them tales to tell and histories to proclaim. These also are enlisted into Mr. Callant's service, and add greatly to the charm of a very charming compilation, which may be read alike with profit and pleasure.

THE GREVILLE MEMOIRS.*

The seventh volume of the "Greville Memoirs" is chiefly remarkable for its exemplification of the dangers of political prophecy. "The moral of the whole is" (such is the journalist's language) "that, let what will happen, it will be very difficult to bring Lord Derby and Disraeli together again." "A singularly unfortunate prediction," is the comment of the Editor, and the observation is founded on truth. Again, "it does not look as if the connection between Disraeli and the party could go on long. Their dread and mistrust of him, and his contempt of them, render it difficult, if not impossible. Pakington is already talked of as their leader." Oh, ye gods and little fishes! Fancy poor Sir Joseph head of the Conservative party. The idea is too laughable, judged by the standard of later years.

The most valuable portion of the diary, however, relates to the Russian War, and the popular notion gains confirmation that Aberdeen's weakness and infirmity of purpose materially militated against the chances of peace. There are, too, some curious revelations. Stratford Canning, at the time the British Representative at the Turkish Court, is charged with having been the principal cause of the Crimean War, and why did he plunge the two countries into a costly and blood-stained contest? "The Emperor of Russia" says he himself—the quotation is from Mr. Greville—"chose to make it a personal quarrel with me, and now I am revenged." This is absolutely incredible, for it places the Queen's Minister at Constantinople, one of the highest functionaries of the Empire, about on a par, as regards morality and decency, with a Nationalist Irish member in the Year of Grace 1888. There are also some interesting disclosures in regard to the attitude alike of France and Austria during this momentous struggle; and the events and under-currents of policy, which are disclosed in this volume, go far to explain many of the actions in later years of the Colossus of the North. The war was still languishing when the volume closes, a circumstance which will, perhaps, make the appearance of the concluding chapters of the diary more welcome. But, be this as it may, what has been published on this occasion is enough to interest and amuse, and sufficient unto the day is the good thereof.

We have received from Messrs. Longmans and Green a series of volumes entitled, "English Worthies," edited by Andrew Lang. It is difficult to speak too highly of this admirable effort to popularise the lives of the illustrious worthies who have built up the fabric of England's greatness. The volumes have been prepared with evident care, the authors are men of note, the language is concise, picturesque, and unbiassed, the paper is good, the printing clear, and the appearance of the wrapper attractive; in a word, for it summarises all praise, the publishers are Messrs. Longmans and Green.

Messrs. Layton and Co. report on Indian and Ceylon Tea:—The auctions this week have again been moderate, the total amounting only to 16,778 packages, of which 4,841 were Ceylon Tea. The bidings are more animated generally, and where real quality was apparent, especially in invoices of the latter, prices showed a distinct advance, some estates realising very satisfactory averages. The quantity advertised for next week is at present only 10,951 packages.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 30, 1888.

THE ABOLITION OF "COOPER'S HILL."

THE Indian Press, exasperated naturally at the continued fall in the value of the rupee in the matter of exchange with Europe, is calling attention to several items of expenditure at home which have been a burden to India, and the abolition of which is loudly called for. One of these items is the cost incurred on account of the Royal Engineering College at Cooper's Hill. The abolition of this institution has been over and over again urged by the whole Press of India, but without any effect upon the Secretary of State in Council. The Civil and Military Gazette is determined, however, that the matter shall not be allowed to pass into the limbo of forgotten recommendations of financial reforms. In one of its latest issues it calls attention to the fact that the Finance Committee advised the speedy abolition of the College upon the apparently incontrovertible grounds that there is no reason why the Government of India alone in the whole world among the employés on a large scale of professional knowledge and labour of the Civil Engineering class, should be charged with the education and training of the gentlemen whom it intends to take into its service. It gives the following history of the College as a specimen of "the disregard so frequently paid to the real interests of economical administration by the authority which never ceases to glorify itself as the careful guardian of the public purse":—

The idea of setting up in England an Institution for training Civil Engineers for Service in the Department of Public Works in India originated about the year 1869, with the official who now occupies the office of Military Member of the Viceroy's Council, and who, at that time, stood at the head of the Account Branch of the Public Works Department. The idea did not find much favour among the deities at Simla, who obviously were not all so keenly interested in the project as the promoter, and who, in reference to the public, as separated from the personal aspect of the idea, deprecated as unnecessary and impolitic the establishment of a College in England for training candidates for one branch of the Public Service so soon after the impolicy of maintaining similar Colleges for training candidates for other more important branches of the same Service had been manifested by the abolition of Haileybury and Addiscombe, and when similar Colleges, upon a very expensive scale, payable from the public revenues, were being maintained in India for precisely the same purposes. The promoter, however, as we well remember, went home on furlough, and succeeded in impressing the utility of his ideas upon the then Secretary of State, the Duke of Argyll, who, above all his predecessors, was wont to pride himself upon the firmness with which he adhered to the policy of spending the revenues of India solely for the benefit of the residents and Natives of India. This delusion under which the Duke of Argyll laboured did not prevent the foundation of a College under the presidency of the promoter, which has cost more than a quarter of a million sterling out of the Indian revenues, and from which the Indian taxpayer has never derived the smallest return, or the most indirect advantage.

Against these objections, however, it is as well to remember the advantages urged for the retention of the Institution by Sir Richard Temple. He has declared that the situation of Cooper's Hill is "beautiful and interesting," and he has dilated upon the "historic and literary associations" of the site upon which in part fulfilment of Pope's vision was erected a College which according to Sir Richard Temple "affords the best example yet seen in the United Kingdom of a comprehensive effort in the course of technical education in Civil Engineering."

In spite of these recommendations the Indian Press considers that the Indian taxpayer has been paying too much for the classic site and the classic institution built upon it. It reverences the historic associations of the site which overhangs the plain of Runnymede, where King John and the Barons arranged their little difficulties concerning the Magna Charta; but it argues that, as the whole institution has been a loss to the Indian taxpayer, and almost a "fraud" against his innocence, the sooner it is done away with the better. It suggests that the religio loci, as well as the views of Windsor Castle obtained from the College windows, will enhance the sale of the property, and so recoup the amount expended upon its purchase, with interest, during the period of its occupation by the Indian Government. But be this as it may, the following remarks should have weight:—"The Finance Committee declare that no adequate return has been, will be, or now can be, obtained from the heavy expenditure incurred in the maintenance of this College. And a high authority in the engineering profession has recently declared that the collegiate system pursued there is not suitable to the requirements of the profession at large; that the instruction at the College is not of a first-rate kind; and that equal, if not greater, advantages can be obtained elsewhere at a less cost. It is obviously most desirable to foster a knowledge of engineering in India, and if the Government of India desire to convince the general public of their sincerity in the cause of technical education they will insist upon the immediate abolition of the Cooper's Hill institution and the expenditure of the money spared from this absurdity upon the advancement of engineering knowledge in India."

These arguments seem to us unanswerable.

ECONOMY AT SIMLA.

THE usual outcry against the "Simla Exodus" has been raised this year by the Presidency Press, but the voice of complaint is growing feebler year by year. In spite of all the denunciations which have found their way into print the Government migrates to the abused mountain at the beginning of each hot weather, and continues to spend public money in order to make itself comfortable. Vast sums have already been voted for the erection of public offices, heavy loans have been granted to the Municipality, which body is of course heavily in debt, and last, but not least, of all a palatial residence has been built for the Viceroy at the public expense. The following, from the Simla correspondent of a Calcutta paper, gives an insight into the manner in which economy is being practiced on the "delectable" mountain:—

Instructions have been received from the Secretary of State to restrict expenditure on the Simla exodus, by either reducing the Simla allowances or by making Calcutta the headquarters of Government, and taking up to Simla only a small flying camp. The Viceroy has, I believe, ordered the case to hang up till the Greek Kalends or some such date, as neither of the suggestions can have been pleasing to a just man like our Viceroy, who knows what misery any reduction in the Simla allowances will entail on subordinate officials, and who knows well what sums of money have been lavished on the new Viceregal palace. The Superintendent of Works recently notified in the several newspapers that no application to inspect the palace could be granted, as the furnishing and decoration work had commenced. He has good reason for keeping inquisitive people away; a view of the interior is calculated to make most persons speak disrespectfully of the nature of things. While we groan under the burden of an income-tax, with exchange at 1s. 4d., and the country on the verge of insolvency, a stately palace has been raised on these heights, in comparison to which Government House at Calcutta is as a railway waiting-room. Thirteen lakhs of money gone on an official residence! Listen while I faintly attempt to describe the place. The walls are built of stone, every slab of which was hewn and dressed a hundred miles away; the wood work is of the finest teak brought from the forests of Burma and Southern India, the labour has been obtained from all parts of the country, and the money comes from us all. In the interior the walls of the entrance hall are elaborately chiselled and decorated, the fireplaces are built of ornamental marble or Minton tiles surmounted by an elaborately carved over-mantel of wood. The woodwork goes entirely round each fireplace. In the corridor and ball-room the walls rise to over forty feet in height, and are covered with the stuff called Lincrusta, costing about ten rupees a square yard. The floors are carpeted with a thick velvet pile, and enormous doors and windows of plate glass let in a flood of light everywhere. The walls of the drawing-boudoir and bed rooms are richly draped from top to bottom by brocade satin thick enough to stand by itself, and electric lights, in the shape of bunches of flowers, with the luminous points enclosed in opal globes, literally bristle along the walls and from the ceiling. The effect is simply gorgeous; everywhere gold and silks and plushes, and mirrors and glass of all sorts. The Viceroy moves in on the 1st proximo, if he can get the electric machinery to work. The other night there was a sort of dress rehearsal—the place was furnished throughout and the engines were set to work, but only a feeble glow could be got from the lamps. The London makers of the engines have been telegraphed to for working instructions, and this when we have a great department of trained electricians at hand.

THE Financial returns of the Government of India are so far worse by nearly eight lakhs than had been estimated. Two lakhs of this sum are due to the expenditure in Burmah. The Patent Office has been transferred from the Home to the Revenue and Agricultural Department.

THE WILLOUGHBY MEMORIAL.—It is gratifying to learn, remarks an upcountry paper, that at last the Willoughby Memorial at Delhi is completed, for thereby a reproach is removed from the British name. Well may the nation be proud of the splendid act of self-sacrifice by which Lieut. Willoughby and his brave comrades prevented the supplies in the Delhi Magazine from falling into the hands of the mutineers. The memorial, which has been placed over the gateway of the old Magazine, bears the following inscription:—"On the 11th May, 1857, nine resolute Englishmen, Lieutenant George Dobson Willoughby, Bengal Artillery, in command, Lieutenant William Raynor, Lieutenant George William Shaw, Conductor John Scully, Sergeant Benjamin Edwards, Lieutenant George Forrest, Conductor John Buckley, Sub-Conductor William Crow, and Sergeant Peter Stewart, defended the magazine of Delhi for more than four hours against large numbers of the rebels and mutineers, till the walls being scaled and all hope of succour gone, these brave men fired the magazine. Five of the gallant band perished in the explosion, which at the same time destroyed many of the enemy. This Tablet, marking the former entrance of the magazine, is placed here by the Government of India." Like the inscription, the memorial itself is simple and appropriate. A photograph shows the gateway surmounted by the new memorial; and placed where it is, the memorial is most effective, the gateway forming a pediment and being in reality a grand monument in itself.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 19.

EDUCATION IN INDIA.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the recent resolution of the Government of India on State-aided education had been received at the India Office; and whether he would lay its text upon the table of the House.

Sir J. GORST: The resolution of the Government of India on State-aided education will be laid on the table if the hon. member will move for it.

THE SIMLA ALLOWANCES.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India how many members of the Finance Committee signed the report on the cost of the Simla allowances and the other financial aspects of the migration of the various Governments every summer to the hills; how many members recorded dissents; and whether the dissents, as well as the report of the Committee, would be laid upon the table of the House before the debate on the Indian Budget.

Sir J. GORST: The report of the Finance Committee was signed by all the eight members. From certain passages in chapter 13, relating to allowances granted at hill stations, four members recorded dissents. The report can be laid on the table if moved for. It will be very costly to print, consisting of 1,625 pages; but the Secretary of State expects copies from India, and will be happy to furnish them to any members who are interested in the subject.

JULY 24.

EXAMINATION OF A HINDOO PLAINTIFF.

Mr. S. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the report of a case before Mr. T. M. Kirkwood, Judge of Patna, who in a case of alleged theft, on the 11th of May, 1888, was stated to have subjected the plaintiff, a young Hindoo girl of twelve, to a most degrading examination at the hands of a Mahomedan doctor, ostensibly for the sole purpose of testing her veracity; and whether he would cause inquiries to be made, and, if the reports were confirmed, would take such measures as would effectually prevent the recurrence of such a case.

Sir J. GORST: Mr. Kirkwood appears to have ordered a girl of 12, who had accused a man of stealing, to be examined. He has been severely censured for this by the High Court of Judicature in Bengal, and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has determined to remove him from the judicial service. It is stated that Mr. Kirkwood intends to appeal.

THE INDIAN CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT.

Mr. J. STUART asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he had received any communication from the Government of India respecting the resolution of June 5 last, by which this House expressed unanimously its opinion that the Indian Contagious Diseases Act, and all other legislation in that country which enjoined, authorised, or permitted similar measures ought to be repealed.

Sir J. GORST: No reply has yet been received to the despatch of the Secretary of State in Council on this subject.

JULY 26.

INDIAN COUNCILS ACT, 1861, AMENDMENT BILL.

Viscount CROSS moved the second reading of this Bill, the object of which, he explained, was simply to rectify a mistake in the drafting of the Act of 1861.

The Bill was read a second time.

INDIAN ARMY MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS.

Dr. TANNER asked the Under-Secretary for India whether it was the case that the course of special instruction and ultimate examination hitherto required and passed by officers of the Indian Army Medical Service was to be abolished; whether the statement of the officer at the head of the Medical service concerning the proposed change in the Bengal Presidency, quoted by the British Medical Journal, July 21st, 1888, was correct—viz., that it was no longer necessary; what reasons were given for such change by the Indian Government; and whether it was intended to substitute any other course for that it was proposed to abolish.

Sir J. GORST: With regard to the first and second paragraphs of the hon. member's question, I have to state that no such decision has been arrived at. The matter is still under the consideration of the Secretary of State and the Government of India. In answer to the third paragraph, I have to state that the reason given in favour of change is that the special instruction can be given better and at less expense in India. In answer to the fourth paragraph, I have to state that if the present course were abolished a course of special instruction would be given in India—(hear, hear).

* If necessary, the Serapis on this voyage will proceed to Bombay, via the Cape of Good Hope, to embark the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade.
† The dates of this voyage are subject to alteration if the Serapis proceeds out via the Cape.

THE Viceroy and family will probably move into the new Viceregal palace at Simla at the end of the current month. The opening dance at the new residence is likely to be given about August 8.

In connection with Mr. Larpent's case, it should be known that the Court of Inquiry which tried him was open to the public, and that reports of its proceedings were published at the time. It is also incorrect to say that Mr. Larpent had been refused a copy of the judgment. Orders were issued to give Mr. Larpent a copy immediately his letter asking for it was received by the Government. The judgment was not published with the resolution dismissing him from the service solely because it is a very bulky document.

BECHUANALAND METHUEN SETTLEMENT.

PATRONS:

COLONEL the HON. PAUL METHUEN, C.B.C.M.; the Right Hon. LORD ELIBANK, R.N.

Gentlemen proceeding to this colony as settlers can for a sum of £200 purchase 3,000 acres of freehold land, to be selected on arrival. Through Bechuanaland lies the great trade route to Central Africa, and the extension of the railway from Kimberley to Vryburg, the centre of British Bechuanaland, is only a question of time. Gold has been discovered near the settlement. A settler writes: "I am delighted with my two farms; have plenty of water and trees. Shall be able to find a market for my produce. The Kafir cattle, sheep, and goats on the veldt were in splendid condition. I consider the settlement should be a gigantic success."

For further particulars apply to the London Agent, 2, Waterloo-place, S.W.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1933

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION
TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF
INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is especially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT
FOR

COUGHS, COLD,
ASTHMA,
BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C.
BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff)
DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORO-DYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE IN-VENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr.
Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.
This fact is necessary, as many persons have purchased by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he expressed his regret that he had been sworn to.
See The Times, July 15th, 1884.

DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,
London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient.
Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETE-LY CURED ME OF DIARRHOEA."
From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evening. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharmac. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is the TRUE
PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUB-STANTIAL IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists.

for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 17th July; from Allahabad the 15th July; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 14th July.

THE Imperial Legislative Council met at Simla on July 11, when the Bill to prevent private persons from issuing pieces of metal for use as money, and the Standard Yard Measure Bill were referred to Select Committees. The Hon. Mr. Elsmie obtained leave to introduce a Bill to remove doubts as to the legality of the levy of certain tolls. He said the advisability of passing a brief measure had been suggested by the Government Advocate of the Punjab, as a difference of opinion existed as to whether Acts VIII. of 1851 and XV. of 1864 were in force in that Province. The opinion of the Advocate-General had been adopted both by the Local Government and the Government of India, and the object of the Bill was to validate past and future levy of tolls under the old Acts.

AMONGST other names in the supplementary list of Birthday Honours issued at Simla are those of the Maharaja of Bettiah and Maharaja Narendra Krishna, who each receive the K.C.I.E. The explanation of this supplementary list is that the recommendations of the Bengal Government were received by the Viceroy too late for notice in the previous list.

THE Railway Conference at Simla is likely to be deferred until some time in September, several of the expected delegates having represented the date already proposed to be inconvenient.

THE Public Service Commission Report has emerged from the region of Departments, and is now occupying the individual attention of the members of the Viceroy's Council.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS inspected the Simla Volunteers, and subsequently the ambulance class, on Saturday, the 14th of July.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal leaves Calcutta on tour in Lower Bengal on the 27th July, returning about the middle of August. He will afterwards pay a visit to Eastern Bengal.

MR. WARE EDGAR, Chief Secretary to the Bengal Government, has been indisposed; but he is progressing favourably after a somewhat severe operation he underwent at Dr. Raye's hands at Darjeeling. Meanwhile Mr. Colman Macaulay is discharging the duties of Chief Secretary in addition to his own work.

SIR EDWARD BUCK, accompanied by the Surveyor-General and the Inspector-General of Forests, has left Simla to attend a conference at Poona. Sir Edward and Mr. Ribbentrop will go on from thence to Madras, the latter crossing over to Burma after the conclusion of his business with the Madras officials.

WHEN Sir Oliver St. John goes to Mysore, General Sir Harry Prendergast becomes Resident at Baroda. There is, in fact, an exchange of appointments between them.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL SIR ROBERT LOW, who commanded the Upper Burma Force during the past two months, will return to India on General White's arrival at Mandalay.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR GEORGE WHITE has left Simla for Mandalay, to resume his command in Burma.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL CHISHOLM, 9th Lancers, goes to Madras as Military Secretary to Lord Connemara.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL IAN HAMILTON will continue to officiate as Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry, vice Colonel Hutchison, for the present, and may be considered as in the running for the substantive appointment.

MAJOR MELLISS, of the Bombay Army, who is on special duty in connection with the proposals of the various Native Princes for utilising their troops for purposes of Imperial defence, in case of need, will shortly make a tour in Kashmir with a view to estimating the military resources of that State.

MR. G. A. D. ANLEY, Superintending Engineer, Western Circle, Bengal, proceeds on four months' leave immediately, prior to retirement from the service. Mr. W. H. Nightingale, District Engineer, Bhaugulpore, will be brought back to the Department as Superintending Engineer, Western Circle, vice Mr. Anley.

LIEUTENANT BRAISER-CREAGH, of the 9th Bengal Cavalry, has succeeded Captain Johnston, R.A., as Aide-de-Camp to his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

SIR ASMAN JAH, the Nizam's Minister, was to leave Hyderabad for Simla on July 21st. He intends breaking his journey at Aligarh in order to inspect the Mahomedan Anglo-Oriental College.

CAPTAIN GRIESBACH, whose services have been lent to Kabul as geological explorer, seems at last to be making way with the Amir. According to the latest advices he was to have started on July 3rd to examine the Logar, Zarnat and Shutargardan districts, and after that the Hazara country and Bamiza, going by way of Ghazni. Subsequently Captain Griesbach visits Badakshan. He has discovered some gold and also turquoise, but neither in very satisfying quantities.

GENERAL GHOLAM HYDER, Commander-in-Chief of the Amir's Army, has massed a considerable body of troops at Deh-Sarak, with a view to operating in the Shinwari country west of the Khyber. The Shinwari rising has put an end for the moment to the expedition into the Kuner Valley and Bajour.

WHATEVER may be written against the low value of the rupee, as expressed in pence sterling, it can hardly be blamed for violent fluctuations. During the whole month of June it varied from 1s. 4 5-32d. to 1s. 4 1-16d., and rested exactly three days at each price. Our local Banks have sold a fair amount during the past week, and their rates varied from 1s. 4 3-32d., Demand, for the mail, to 1s. 4 1-16d., Telegraphic, for January. Council Bills fetched on Wednesday 1s. 4 1-16d. or 16 1-2d. per rupee. Silver keeps at or near 42 1-2d. per ounce, the shipments for the week being £80,000. Money is too cheap, and Export business too dull to alone influence rates of Exchange upwards, and, on the other hand, Banks seem able and willing to sell when prices fall. The market closes quiet with remarkably little doing, even for the season of the year.

THE P. and O. s.s. Arcadia, the last of the four new P. and O. Jubilee boats, arrived in Ceylon harbour on the 23rd ult., the journey from London having occupied between twenty-three and twenty-four days. She brought the mail from Brindisi in fifteen days, thus claiming to have beaten all records. Captain W. B. Andrews, an old P. and O. officer, is in command, and nearly all the officers are R.N.R. men. The Arcadia left London at four o'clock on the 1st of June, and touched at Plymouth to land the directors and their friends. The whole passage has been a pleasant as well as a particularly quick one, especially when it is considered that she stopped at Gibraltar, Malta, Brindisi, Port Said, Suez, and Aden. She was delayed in the Bay of Biscay with fogs, and had to wait a whole day at Brindisi for the mails. This, of course, is her maiden trip, and she is on her mettle. On her trial trip she did 18 knots per hour. The passage from Aden has only occupied 5 days, 6 hours, and 43 minutes, which gives a capital average of 16 6 knots fair steaming, with the monsoon against her.

NOTES.

THE most important news comes from Burma—at least the most unsatisfactory, for it gives little encouragement to the hope that that country will soon settle down to quietude and contentment under British rule. Upper Burma still revels in dacoity, and Tharawaddy still bears the palm for being the most disturbed district in Lower Burma. We have commented elsewhere on the inefficiency of the Burman police force, especially concerning the scarcity of English officers with it. When the mail left Mandalay that city had been left without a European Inspector of Police at all. This is not likely to improve matters.

If our little affair on the Sikkim frontier grows, and we have to put down the turbulent tribes on our North-Western frontier too, we shall have our hands full of that miserable kind of fighting which has been for so many years the unfortunate experience of successive Indian Governments. These wretched petty wars cost time, valuable lives, and what the taxpayer grumbles at more—large sums of money. And the most unpleasant reflection is that most of them might have been avoided had we had some more definite and wiser policy in dealing with savage tribes on our frontiers than we have hitherto shown.

THE Hyderabad (Deccan) scandals are creating considerable bad blood amongst the newspaper editors in India just now. A Calcutta journal, called the Evening News, but not much known to circulation or to fame, “contains,” says the Times of India, “one of the gravest charges that can be advanced against a public journal”—being no less than a charge of having accepted bribes on one side or the other of the scandal case. This has called forth stormy articles on all sides, except that the Pioneer considers that the charge against itself should be treated with contempt, which, we imagine, ought to have been the opinion of all its respectable contemporaries also. But no; the Englishman, Times of India, the Bombay Gazette, and Morning Post have all gone into the fray, and there is much pretty mud-throwing all round.

HERE is what the Evening News says of the Morning Post :—

“It is ‘a slavish paper,’ ‘a contemptible rag,’ and cannot understand the meaning of honest opinion.’ It has ‘audacity unbounded,’ and, regarding the mining affair, ‘an amount of ignorance inexcusable.’ ‘We will let the Morning Post off this time, but if it attacks us again we shall give it cause for repentance.’ There is a mysterious allusion to the Morning Post adding to its depleted coffers by assistance from the Bombay Gazette, the opinion is expressed that something it says regarding the Gazette will ‘rile us,’ and our ‘wheeze’ is declared to be written without knowledge. As to the Bombay Gazette, defiance is flung in its face, so there can be but one course open.”

And here is what the Morning Post says of the Evening News :—

“If the proprietor of the Bombay Gazette comes over to Calcutta he can find out the author of the article,” and much good it may do him, &c., &c. There is an unsavoury Scotch proverb which says that to go to law with a beggar is to catch—something verminous.

BUT we think that the Bombay Gazette takes the cake in the polite literature contest. The man Gough referred to is the editor of the Evening News :—

Here we get an instructive view of the methods and morals and the sordid rascality of the newspaper hired to traduce the Press of India in the interest of the Huq swindle. It was actually to this lying scamp, Gough, and to scoundrels behind him, we were asked to answer in a leading article, lest judgment might go against us by default! And it was to those very rascals that the contemporary which so advised us had the simplicity to offer an exculpatory explanation as to why it had preserved an inexplicable neutrality in the presence of a revelation of fraud without parallel in India in these later years. We have here a measure of the discretion and the sense of self-respect of the mentor who deemed it becoming to offer us disinterested advice.

THE above recalls to mind some ancient days of the Calcutta Press, when the editor of one journal referred to the editor of a contemporary as being an “apoplectic porpoise,” and the other editor replied by calling his neighbour “a filthy lying skunk.” Ah! those were days of Indian journalism indeed, but then language was sometimes followed by a “meeting” on the maidan, so one required to have the “courage of his convictions.” But times have changed; but if the extracts we have quoted from papers received to-day, the question may be asked, Have they improved?

COLONEL LAURIE’S book on “Distinguished Anglo-Indians” is gaining a wide circulation. Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of it; so, we understand, has the Viceroy of India, in which country the work is much appreciated.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 5.

The Government has not yet decided whether an expedition shall be sent against the Black Mountain to punish the local tribes for their recent attack on British troops. It is a matter of comment, in face of the causeless character of the attack, and of the fact that two British officers were wantonly killed, that a hesitating policy should be possible. The Government would appear to be divided in counsel, however, not so much as to the necessity of despatching a punitive expedition, as regarding the character of the punishment which should be inflicted. It has been suggested that a mere rapid military promenade and the burning of a few villages would only involve fruitless expenditure. In order that the expedition may be productive of lasting results, we must either permanently annex the tract of country lying between the Agror Valley and the Indus, and thus make the river our frontier line, or else keep the troops stationed in the valley for a considerable time, sending out movable columns constantly to harass the tribes in all directions, till we force them to sue for terms, and to give satisfactory guarantees for their future good conduct.

The Government prosecution of the distinguished Bombay official whose case I have previously mentioned came on for hearing before the magistrate of Poonah last Wednesday. The proceedings were adjourned for fifteen days at the instance of the prosecution, on the ground that the preparation of evidence was not yet completed. The information upon which the warrant of arrest was issued has now been published. It fails to disclose any legal or valid justification for the almost unprecedented course adopted by the Government. The statement of the inspector-general of police amounts shortly to this :—It can be shown that a Native received money in order to induce the accused to favour certain persons. It can be moreover shown that this Native introduced one of these persons to the accused. There is merely a general averment that there are other instances in which a connection between this Native and the accused can be shown, and in which the Native has accepted rewards for using his good offices with the accused. If this is to be regarded as a fair sample of the evidence which has induced the Bombay Government to adopt the terribly severe course of a prosecution of one of its principal and most distinguished public officers, it is not surprising that public opinion in Bombay has been startled and dismayed. Mr. Wilson’s case is still fresh in the public memory, while the severe censure passed by the Secretary of State on the Bombay Government on that occasion ought to induce very great caution in matters of the like nature. Until the charges are fully formulated in the present case it would be unfair to condemn the conduct of the Government. There may be evidence behind which has been purposely withheld from the knowledge of the accused and the public until it shall be presented in court on the occasion of the trial. Unless, however, this should turn out to be the case, the course adopted by the Government will be the subject of severe animadversion.

Lord Lansdowne will arrive in Bombay by the mail steamer due on December 2nd or 3rd. Lord Dufferin will hand over the charge of government at Calcutta, where he is to spend a few days prior to Lord Lansdowne's arrival. Lord Lansdowne will probably be sworn in on Saturday, December 8, and Lord Dufferin will take his departure on the following Monday. The date on which the Viceroy will leave Simla has not yet been fixed, but it will probably be early in November, and he will make a short tour en route to Calcutta.

The agitation against cow-killing still causes much religious excitement among the Hindoos. Although in Bengal this feeling may be promoted for political reasons, in the North-West Provinces and Central India the movement is undoubtedly supported by very strong religious enthusiasm. I may mention, as bearing on one aspect of this question, two important legal rulings recently published, which may lead to legislation dealing with the entire subject. The Punjab Chief Court has given a decision on the sacred bull question in direct conflict with the views recently expressed by the Allahabad High Court in a similar case. Three persons were recently convicted at Umritsur, under section 429 of the Penal Code, for having committed mischief by killing a sacred bull. In consideration of the decision of the Allahabad High Court, the Chief Court of the Punjab admitted the case to revision. On the strength of the Allahabad ruling it was contended that the bull was not property within the meaning of the Code, but Sir Meredyth Plowden, after going into the case at considerable length, ruled otherwise, and the sentence on the accused was confirmed. The Judge held that it did not necessarily follow because a bull liberated by a Hindoo, in accordance with usage, ceased to be his property, by reason of his renouncing his ownership and possession, that therefore it ceased to be property and became incapable of being the subject of the offence of mischief. Although not in the possession of any person, the bull was still capable of being criminally misappropriated, because it was movable property, belonging to the liberator of it, or, by fiction of law, to the juristical person.

A railway conference will assemble at Simla in September. The Government of Bombay has recommended that Sir Dinshaw Maneckjee Petit's munificent gift of a lakh and a quarter of rupees should be devoted to the building of a hospital for women and children, in connection with the Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Obstetric Hospital. Sir Dinshaw Petit has assented to the plan.

The Prime Minister of Hyderabad is at Simla. He has had a long interview with the Viceroy. Colonel Marshall is also at Simla, and it is believed that he will not return to Hyderabad. The Nizam intends to proceed with his litigation in Bombay against Abdul Huq.

SIKKIM AND THE TIBETANS.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 5.

The Tibetan leaders, having collected some 8,000 men, are now actively engaged in threatening our communications. A considerable number of the enemy have collected at Yeuconten, halfway between Sebula and Nathula, close to Lagyapala, at the junction of the roads to Gantok and Pakyong. Their number is estimated at 1,000, and they have a large number of tents. They are therefore in a position to threaten our post at Pakyong and to command the road to Gantok.

The troops belonging to the expeditionary force have been ordered out from Darjeeling. Four guns, with a half company of the Sherwood Foresters (Derbyshire Regiment), have been sent to Gnatong, and two guns and one company remain at Pedong. Five hundred Goorkhas are under orders to reinforce the troops with Colonel Graham, and will reach him about the 12th instant.

It is believed that the Tibetans intend to make an attempt to occupy Enchi, the present residence of the Sikkim Rajah. The Tibetans on the hither side of the Jalapa Pass are exhibiting increased activity. Their tents are being pushed forward, and fortifications are being erected within two and a half miles of Gnatong, the enemy's intention apparently being to attack the two places simultaneously. They have constructed in the Kupup Valley, at the entrance to the Pembringo Gorge, a square fort in imitation of our recently erected block houses. In all probability a vigorous attempt will be made by a night attack to rush our positions before the arrival of reinforcements.

It is thought that unless Chinese intervention makes itself felt forthwith our passive attitude will have to be abandoned and active hostilities will have to be commenced. This change of policy would doubtless be adopted by the Government with great reluctance, but unless peace be concluded at once the proceedings of the Tibetan authorities will, it is thought, leave no alternative. A purely defensive policy protracted beyond a certain point might, it is feared, seriously imperil the safety of our garrison in Sikkim, and would be likely to result sooner or later in a grave military disaster.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 4.

The latest official bulletin regarding Upper Burma is more favourable. Several murders and petty skirmishes with dacoits are reported, but a diminution in the disturbed area and in the number of crimes is shown. It is difficult to judge whether this improvement will be a permanent one or a temporary one, due to the rains, which make it difficult for the dacoits to move. The Rangoon Times to-day states that Ottama is causing trouble in the Myinmu district, where the durbar was recently held, and that the Chief Commissioner left Mandalay yesterday for Myinmu.

At a dinner given by the Mandalay Volunteers on July 31st the Chief Commissioner made a speech complimenting the Volunteers on the progress made by them, and intimated his opinion that a renewed outbreak of disturbances was possible. He added that in Burma the Executive was overworked and undermanned.

Mr. Brind, Assistant-Commissioner, was drowned last week while attempting to cross a flooded stream in the Shwebo district. He had ridden alone into the jungle ahead of his escort.

A portion of the Toungoo-Mandalay Railway has been damaged by floods, and the bridge between Pyinmana and Yemethen has been carried away.

After innumerable complaints and remonstrances the local Government has tardily decided that the police force of Lower Burma must be reformed. It has been urged in the Press that it was hopeless to expect the province to become or remain pacified while the police force continued in its present discreditable condition. In his minute on the police administration report for 1887 the Chief Commissioner refers to the deterioration which has been going on for some years past among the Burmese police, and which is now becoming more rapid. He declares that the force consists largely of men of an inferior stamp. Strong dissent is expressed by the Chief Commissioner from the view advanced by the Inspector-General that Burmans will not fight dacoits. The Chief Commissioner expresses an opinion that the inefficiency of the police force is due to the want of proper organisation, administration, and discipline. He adds:—

"A radical reorganisation of the force is necessary, and as a preliminary step to any reform the Inspector-General and his officers must cease to regard the Burman portion of the force as lost beyond redemption."

The appointment of a committee of experienced officers to make recommendations for establishing the police force on a satisfactory basis is announced. This long-delayed inquiry was urgently needed. Had some step in this direction been taken earlier, the disturbances in the Lower Provinces would have been to a large extent avoided. The delay on the part of the Local Government has been incomprehensible. When the Viceroy visited Burma, nearly three years ago, the Rangoon Chamber of Commerce, on behalf of the mercantile community, presented a memorial strongly commenting on the deplorable condition of the police, and asking for its reorganisation. While commanding in Burma, Sir Frederick Roberts recorded his opinion that Burmans properly organised and disciplined and well commanded were capable of forming a very efficient police force. It is essential that the proposed inquiry should be presided over by some Indian officer of high standing, unconnected with the province, who will not hesitate to recommend the necessary reductions and supersessions. Little good will result from any departmental inquiry controlled locally.

THE HARBOUR AT ADEN.—It is satisfactory to learn, says the Engineer, that the work of deepening the harbour at this important port, upon the delay in undertaking which we have on several occasions commented, is soon to be put in hand. Official announcement has been made that the difficulties raised by the military authorities, which have hitherto prevented the sanction of the Government being given to the work, have been overcome, and we may now expect that within a comparatively short time vessels resorting to the port, instead of having, as at present, to anchor fully half a mile from the shore, will be able to discharge their cargoes alongside jetties in connection with the wharves. The most important advantage, however, which may be expected to result from the improvement now decided upon will certainly be the conveniences that will be afforded for coaling steamers. At the present time all the coal has to be shipped in lighters and carried thence to the bunkers by Natives. The dust arising from the friable coal—a condition of it due to the arid climate of Aden—constitutes an intolerable nuisance, which we may hope will soon now be removed. The difficulties which the military authorities have to encounter are by no means light, as it is probable that entirely new batteries will have to be hewn out of the rock for the special purpose of providing protection to this new anchorage. The soil of the harbour consists mainly of soft mud, so that the dredging operations are not likely to be costly.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE NEW VICEROY OF INDIA.

(Times of India.)

The Marquis of Lansdowne, our future Viceroy, has delivered his first public utterance after his return to England from administering the Government of Canada. The occasion was a private one—the return of himself and the Marchioness to Bowood, their seat in Wiltshire, where they were enthusiastically welcomed, and presented with a congratulatory address. His lordship's reply was short, but very much to the point; for in the few words which he uttered he managed to pay a very high compliment to those the government of whose country he had just relinquished, and to afford good grounds for those over whom he is soon to rule to anticipate the best results from his acceptance of the high office that Her Majesty has conferred upon him. As to the past he said:—"After five years' intimate association with the people of Canada, and participation in the affairs of the Dominion, I have come back with the deepest feeling of respect and regard for its people, with a feeling of the greatest admiration for the liberal institutions which had been conceded to that great dependency of the Empire, and with a profound belief of the importance of the part it is destined to play in the history of the British race; and last, but not least, with a feeling of deep pride in the great Empire which was the heritage of the people of Wiltshire as well as the people of Canada." These are sentiments creditable alike to governor and governed, and may we hope that on resigning the Viceroyalty of India, five years hence, if it should be our good fortune to retain his lordship amongst us so long, he will find himself in a position to speak as favourably and at the same time as warmly in praise of the people of whom he will then have taken leave. It is unnecessary to allude to the present political situation in Europe, and the fear, now that the Emperor Frederick III. has passed away, that peace may not be long maintained. We have done so repeatedly of late, and have pointed out, not the possibility, but the probability of India being involved in any struggle for Empire that may arise in the West; and we have little doubt that much that we have written was passing through Lord Lansdowne's mind when he made the remarks we have quoted. The times are unquestionably critical in the highest degree, and for this reason we have all along deplored the necessity for the departure of the present Viceroy before the expiration of the full period of his tenure of office. To Lord Dufferin, however, India and her people have much to be grateful, and certainly no Viceroy has ever departed from our shores who will leave behind him a brighter record of good work efficiently performed, and a deeper sense of respect and admiration on the part of all classes, than he whose loss India and her people will soon have to regret.

BURMA CHEROOTS.

(Rangoon Times.)

A correspondent has sent us a long letter, growling over the bad qualities of the Burma cheroots of the period. They are very bad, and the samples sent us as specimen of what he says he paid Rs. 1-8 and Rs. 2 per hundred for, leave little to choose between them, as regards bad flavour, non-drawing proclivities, and general unsmokable qualities. The price of these articles many years ago in Rangoon, but of really fair quality, used to be Rs. 8 to Rs. 10 per 1,000. They are now Rs. 15 to Rs. 20 per 1,000, and have steadily deteriorated in quality, as they have advanced in price. Carelessness in making has no doubt a good deal to say to the bad smoking qualities of the "Burman cheroot" of the present day, but there is no doubt the tobacco of which they are composed, extensively imported from the Madras Coast, is also badly cured and very inferior to what used to be sent here twelve or fifteen years ago. The demand for Burma cheroots has led to a steady decrease in the quality of the tobacco shipped here from the Madras Coast, employed in making them, and we have taken no steps here to try and make ourselves independent of importations of an article which can be easily grown in Burma, and which there is no great difficulty in curing and manufacturing. Many people here now get their supplies of cheroots from Madras, and have given up Burma cheroots altogether. Until the manufacture considerably improves we would advise our correspondent to follow suit, as a saving of money and temper. It is wiser to pay a slightly higher price for a cheroot that will smoke, rather than purchase at Rs. 2 per 100 the trash so often sold in Rangoon at the present day. At the same time it is not creditable to local enterprise that our cheroots should have so steadily deteriorated. In a country of smokers, and where tobacco grows easily, it seems incredible we cannot get our wants supplied except by sea. But so it is, and the smokers of Burma cheroots should try and set about encouraging improved production of an article which is in such good demand, and which would pay people well to produce of good quality, instead of the present miserable specimens which our correspondent sends us.

THE SIMLA EXODUS.

(Statesman.)

We wish it were possible for us to view the Simla exodus in the light in which it is generally denounced by our contemporaries. The view they take of it, as a whole, was correctly summarised, we believe, by one of our local contemporaries recently, in noticing the description given by the Statesman's special correspondent at Simla, of the new Viceregal palace there. Our correspondent wrote as follows:—

"Will it occur to those who admire and revel in the splendour and magnificence of this new palace to which Calcutta Government House is but a shed—though it has sufficed to accommodate as great men as are likely again to occupy it—we ask, does it occur to these self-indulgent beings to consider that it is all paid for by poor men who often have to live on a meal a day, and to pinch the taxed salt that should make even that poor meal palatable? Where, I ask, is the conscientiousness that can revel in these things; and what are the Secretary of State, his Council, and Parliament doing that these things are possible? Again, look at the occupations of our able, intellectual, and highly-paid men. They must be of a high order when they can sit and are amused, while they pretend to wind each other up, and comfort themselves into bad imitations of Mrs. Jarley's mechanical waxwork."

Now we have full sympathy with the spirit in which these remarks are conceived, but they seem to us to miss the chief ground of objection to this annual journey to the Hills, and to base the agitation against it on grounds that will never prove sufficient to remedy the evil. The cost of the new palace and its furnishing is said to be Rs. 13,00,000, thirteen lakhs of rupees. That the finances of the country are not in a condition to justify an expenditure of this order is perfectly true, but it is hopeless to imagine that the English people—who are accustomed under Royal institutions to regard an expenditure of this order as trifling—will ever be persuaded to regard it as excessive in India. A multitude of our Peers and Commoners, with a very large number even of our merchants and bankers, think little of expending upon their own country seats sums vastly in excess of £130,000. Such a sum is a really small expenditure for a wealthy peer like Lord Ripon, or for a wealthy commoner, whether a county squire or rich merchant. Amongst wealthy Americans, again, the expenditure of £130,000, say upon a mansion in New York, would certainly be thought moderate and by no means excessive, and this, too, under the simplicity, as it is called, of Republican institutions. What the White House at Washington cost we do not remember, but its expense must have been many times this amount. So far from an outlay of £130,000 upon the Viceregal palace at Simla shocking the English mind, it is more likely to lead to favourable remark on the ground of its moderation. Gunesh Khind, moreover, at Poona, cost, we believe, £185,000, under Sir Bartle Frere's rule twenty years ago. And, remembering that the Viceroy represents the Queen-Empress of India, we are reasonably sure that no movement against the exodus on this ground will ever avail us in the least.

Our contemporaries, we presume, want to win in this matter. They are not riding for a "fall," but with earnest purpose to put an end to what all classes feel to be an abuse. But if we would win, we must attack the evil on other grounds altogether. The palace is to cost India £130,000. The amount is excessive, we allow, but it is not excessive when compared with the cost of such palaces as Gwalior, or to come nearer home, the Maharaja of Dhurbungha's. The outlay becomes nothing when we recall the fact that the mere proximity of Simla to the frontier, and the insane and warlike counsels that are generated in its atmosphere, have cost us forty millions sterling in the last ten years only, in the shape of military aggression upon the territory just beyond it. Lord Lytton's wanton and unprovoked war, cost India according to the official estimates £25,000,000 sterling. That it cost vastly more is certain, and we have now to add thereto, the £15,000,000 sterling spent in the crisis of the fever that was produced by Lord Dufferin's being hurried up to Rawul Pindee three years ago. On the top of that expenditure, we have now £8,500,000 to add for the new frontier railways and their defences. The mere fact of the proximity of Simla to Afghan territory and the Oxus has cost us £50,000,000 sterling in the last ten years. The Government once there, loses all "touch" with the sobriety of the plains. It is there, wrote the late Foreign Secretary to the India Office (Kaye)—"It is there, at Simla, that more political insanity has been hatched during its brief existence, than at any other place in the world." And it is not war only that the atmosphere of the place evokes. The whole tone of society at the place, and the whole outlook of the heads of departments there, become diseased and morbid, and fatal to wise and high-minded rule. The men are there for a holiday, and if the place could be shut up altogether, or reduced to a mere Hill sanitarium, such as Mussoorie, Naini-Tal, or Darjeeling, it would be an enormous gain to the country. We do not wish to be misunderstood. We approve heartily what our contemporaries say of the wasteful expenditure the exodus entails upon us, but this is the smallest of the evils it brings upon us, and it is because our sense of the latter is so great, that we seldom refer to the actual money cost of the abuse, indefensible as the greater part of it is.

PARLIAMENT AND THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.

(Madras Mail.)

That law and equity are not one and the same thing was clearly shown in the result of Mr. H. S. King's motion on behalf of the Indian Uncovenanted Service. No doubt the Government is legally entitled to stand upon the strict enforcement of the bargain made with a particular body of public servants at the time that the Service was first instituted. It is one of those cases, however, in which "the letter killeth." On moral grounds the claims represented by Mr. King are indisputable. The promise originally made by the Indian Government in 1822 may be fulfilled to the ear, but it has become a mere verbal jugglery. Oddly enough, the furlough question, forcibly mooted by Mr. King, was lost sight of by subsequent speakers, even by Sir Roper Lethbridge, himself a retired member of the Service, and naturally by Sir John Gorst. The furlough grievance is, to a certain extent, a partial one, and applies more closely to Europeans than to Natives, though many of the latter would be glad to have an opportunity of seeing more of their own country, even should it be inconvenient for them to proceed to Europe, and study upon the spot the working of Western ideas, institutions, and social phenomena. Then, and then only, would they suffer from the depreciation of the rupee. Otherwise, living in India in the midst of their families and among their own people, the fall in the value of silver would not affect them injuriously, and in some respects might be even advantageous. Sir John Gorst, therefore, like the cuttle-fish which darkens the water to cover its escape, misled the House of Commons when he asserted that any concession made to pensioners in England must be extended to those residing in India, and that the alteration suggested by Mr. King would add £100,000 per annum at least to the amount already disbursed on retiring pensions. The statement was absurd, because pensioners living in India receive their Rs. 5,000 in tact, and are able to get their money's value for what they expend in this country. We suspect, indeed, that Mr. King understated his case when he insisted that no more than £20,000 a-year would be needed to remedy the injustice now inflicted upon the European portion of the Uncovenanted Service. A sympathetic "Hear, hear!" was heard when he denounced the Council of India as an anachronism, and proposed to obtain the addition he demanded by abolishing that harbour of refuge for individuals who had interest enough to get £1,200 a-year for doing worse than nothing.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer could not have been true to the traditions of his office had he not posed as the champion of taxpayers throughout the British Empire, and as the vigilant custodian of the privy purse. He admitted, as he could not help doing, that the Uncovenanted Civilians reasonably complained of a hardship which they had done nothing to deserve, but he raised the irrelevant argument that if their wrongs were redressed similar pretensions could be put forth from other quarters. That is nothing to the point. Let every question be considered on its own merits, without reference to possible issues which may never present themselves. Mr. Goschen should have been more definite; he should have mentioned the cases of complaint foreshadowed on his mind. Assuming, however, that he is a true prophet, and that other acts of injustice may be brought home to the Government, that can be no valid reason for slighting the sufferings of the hardworked and diligent public servants which have now been laid before Parliament. The Uncovenanted Service was shown by Colonel Hill to include the Civil Engineers sent out from Cooper's Hill; while Sir Roper Lethbridge dwelt upon the valuable and unique labours of the Educational Department to which he once belonged. It was all to no purpose. "What business," exclaimed the virtuous Sir John Gorst, "had a Government which represented the poor people of India to make a present?" Moved by the same impulse of cheap philanthropic economy, the Under-Secretary of State concluded by reminding the House that "they were dealing not with their own money but as trustees of money, contributed by the poor people of India, and, however much they might sympathise with a deserving and estimable class of men, Parliament ought not to cast upon the people of India burdens which they could not justly be called upon to pay." We should like to know how Sir John Gorst reconciles his sudden emotion of pity for the Indian taxpayer with his approval to the maintenance, at the cost of that poor person, of two such extravagant establishments as the Council of India and the Engineering College at Cooper's Hill. We should rejoice still more to hear him denounce the home charges, and foreshadow the introduction of a more economical system.

We do not grudge the pensions of the Covenanted Civilians, because one-half is derived from a fund formed from their own compulsory contributions; nor should we object to their pensions being paid without reference to the depreciation of the rupee, provided the Uncovenanted Civilians were treated in the same way. Mr. Courtney declared that the latter received £400 a-year instead of £500, and that the deficiency was made good by the greater purchasing power of the sovereign, so that they were not really losers. Considering that the rupee is worth less than 1s. 4½d. ordinary arithmeticians would estimate the value of Rs. 5,000 at about £338 a year. We might also ask if Mr. Courtney would think himself recouped for the shrinkage of one-third of his income by the consideration that house-rent and some of the necessities of life are somewhat cheaper than they used to be. Be that as it may, we demur to Sir John Gorst's definition of a Public Service Commission as "a body consisting not only of Covenanted Servants, but of Uncovenanted Servants, independent persons, and Natives, so that it was a thoroughly representative body in whom the Natives of India and the people of this country had every confidence." As regards the Natives of India that statement is decidedly imaginative, while "the people" of England never heard of the Commission, and if they had done so would have been quite incompetent to judge of its composition and character. Sir Roper Lethbridge was much nearer the mark when he affirmed that "great dissatisfaction prevailed at the meagre results which had followed from the inquiries of the last Commission, which was felt to be due to the fact that there was a large preponderance of high officials in the Covenanted Service upon that Commission." Whenever the Government spontaneously appoints a Royal Commission it may be taken for granted that it will be so constituted, and its scope of inquiry so restricted, that the Report will strengthen the hands of that Government, and enable it to carry out the policy it had previously designed. The matter of the Uncovenanted Civil Service should not be allowed to rest where it now stands. The question should be brought forward again and again until Parliament really understands the point at issue, and refuses to be misled by palpable sophistry.

THE DRINK TRAFFIC IN BURMA.

(Pioneer.)

Those who denounce the Government for encouraging and developing the drink traffic in India have lately turned their attention to Upper Burma, of course with the good intention of saving the people of that country from being demoralised by alcoholic stimulants. A few questions put in Parliament stirred the Secretary of State to ask the Government of India for their views on the subject; and these, as we have said, have now been sent home. Careful inquiry on the spot has proved beyond a doubt that there is a large trade in spirits and opium in Burma. Those who reached Mandalay with General Prendergast will perhaps remember the baneful effects of shamshu on our troops, and officers who have travelled about the country are well aware that the liquor traffic is a reality. To say, therefore, that the Government of India are creating this traffic is idle in the extreme; they are merely taxing it as it now exists, and this we hold they are bound to do. It is a peculiarity of the Exeter Hall people that they always know, or profess to know, more about these matters than the Government; the only difficulty of the latter is that they have to deal with things as they are, and not as Exeter Hall says that they are. The criticism to which they are subjected must under these circumstances be occasionally very irritating, and such is certainly the case in this matter of excise in Upper Burma. What, for instance, can be more preposterous than the demand of Mr. Bryce and his supporters that our officials should be prepared with full information and a settled excise policy, while they were still engaged in conquering the country? Do they think Upper Burma is no larger than an English county, and that it is easy to walk through and examine as Yorkshire, or Northumberland? Our officers in Burma have had their time fully occupied for the last two years in dealing with dacoity and lawlessness generally; they cannot be expected to produce a cut-and-dried ex-policy for the benefit of Exeter Hall at a week's notice. One thing is certain, prohibition would be quite out of place in Burma, and the Government must therefore frame their regulations in the matter of intoxicating drugs and liquors on lines somewhat similar to those worked upon in India. Such modifications as local circumstances seem to require will, of course, be made, for there is no intention of needlessly harassing John Burma so long as he chooses to pay for such luxuries as opium and alcohol.

BENGAL.

HIS Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, accompanied by his Private Secretary, Captain Rawlinson, arrived in Calcutta on July 7 by mail train from Darjeeling.

It is somewhat disheartening to read in the report of the Calcutta Botanic Gardens that the ravages of potato disease in Sikkim and the Khasia hills have been very severe during the year, and have given a shock to the introduction of English seed. No one knows whence the disease derives its origin; but there is no doubt of the fact that English seed is most liable to attack, and the superintendent of the gardens advises that in future imports of seed should be made from Malta, Australia, or elsewhere where the conditions of growth differ less widely from that of the Indian hills. Better a good plum than a bad apricot.

It was proposed by the Finance Committee that the gazetted police officers in Bengal should be re-graded on the principle in force in the North-West Provinces. This proposal involved the reduction of one appointment in the number of District Superintendents borne on the Bengal list, and also the reduction of the average monthly pay of a District Superintendent from Rs. 692 to Rs. 645. The Finance Committee's scheme has been accepted in principle by both the Local Government and the Government of India. The Lieutenant-Governor having, however, represented that the change, if carried out at once, would cause very great hardship to the senior officers of the Police Department, and produce a feeling of dissatisfaction which would be likely to have a bad effect on the efficiency of the force, the Supreme Government have consented to the postponement of the proposed re-grading of District Superintendents until all the officers who have now served in the police for twenty-five years and upwards shall have reached the third grade on Rs. 700 a month.

MR. E. T. ATKINSON, Accountant-General, Bengal, had his leave cancelled, because Mr. E. Gay, Comptroller-General, shortly takes furlough; besides owing to paucity of men in the department, an Uncovenanted officer would officiate for Mr. Atkinson, which would detract the dignity of the office.

MR. P. NOLAN, Secretary to the Government of Bengal, takes two months' leave.

At the Marine Court of Inquiry into the cause of the catastrophe on board the Clan Macintosh, the evidence of Dr. Gibbard, surgeon on board, and Mr. Alexander Peller, Professor of Chemistry at the Presidency College, went to prove that the five men died from asphyxia caused by the generation of carbonic acid gas. They stated that if hay, rice or grain were kept in a confined space with a high temperature and the presence of water, gas would generate and kill any persons exposed to it.

MADRAS.

THE Local Government has ruled that the re-election of a Municipal Commissioner of one division, while still holding his seat in another division, which he vacates on the re-election, is valid. The Government solicitor, it is believed, opposed this view.

DR. MILLER has addressed a long letter, which was read to the students of the Christian College on the re-opening of the College department after the summer vacation. Dr. Miller deplores the fact of the rebellion during his absence. He is convinced that it was brought about by the new students with whom he was unacquainted, and whom he is not sorry to lose. He would return to India immediately if his old students expressed their conviction that it is convenient for him to do so.

DR. CURRIE is suing the Bank of Madras for a thousand rupees, being dividends and interest thereon on fourteen shares of the bank, of which he is the possessor. The case was adjourned till the 4th August.

THE College Department of the Christian College was reopened July 12. The fines imposed on the students of the F. A. Class who failed to write and sign the required declaration have been remitted by the Senatus. The fines imposed on the ringleaders have been enforced, and almost all have paid.

THE Madras High Court buildings which are for sale will probably be vacated in July 1891, when it is hoped the new buildings will be completed.

It has been resolved by the Madras Government to reduce the pay of the Sanitary Commissioner, Madras, from Rs. 2,000 to Rs. 1,200, rising by annual increments of Rs. 100 per mensem to Rs. 1,800. It has also been suggested that the term of office shall be limited to seven years, subject to an extension of not more than three years at the recommendation of Government.

DURING the half-year ended June 30th the Commercial Land Mortgage Bank made a net profit of Rs. 88,000, or at the rate of nearly 28 per cent. per annum on the capital.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL CHISHOLM, 9th Lancers, goes Madras as Military Secretary to Lord Connemara.

THE well-meant proposal of the Government of Madras to create a bench of honorary magistrates in that city has, the Madras Mail learns, not been rewarded with marked success. Several good men have been asked if they would take office, but they have declined on the score of being too much occupied by their own affairs. The busy men are often the best men in a community, and the Government would like to enlist men who have a character for energy of character, intelligence, and business habits. "But it's not good enough," has been the response in several places.

It has been finally decided to hold the Madras races under the new Calcutta rules, and not the old, as the new rules cannot in any way affect the Madras prospectus issued before the 30th of June.

THE Government of Madras have permitted Dewan Bahadur Ragoonath Row, late Dewan of Indore, to retire from the Uncovenanted Service.

At the half-yearly meeting of the District Lodge of Freemasons at Madras, confirmation of Lord Connemara's election as District Grand Master was announced. The installation will take place in October.

BOMBAY.

LIEUTENANT R. G. BROOKE, 7th Hussars, is to be an Aide-de-Camp to H.E. the Governor of Bombay.

SURGEON-MAJOR E. COLSON, Civil Surgeon, Aden, has been granted twelve months' furlough to Europe.

THE REV. A. BRUDER, S.J., Church of Rome, has been appointed Hon. Chaplain to the Sind Volunteer Rifle Corps.

LIEUTENANT H. S. WILDEBLOOD has been permitted to resign his commission in the 2nd Battalion B. B. and C. I. Railway Corps.

MR. W. J. BAGNELL, C.S., has been appointed Assistant Collector, Belgaum; and Mr. G. Carmichael to a similar post at Rutnagherry.

SURGEON-MAJOR J. H. NEWMAN, M.D., has been appointed Hon. Surgeon of the 2nd Battalion B. B. and C. I. Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps.

LIEUT. A. L. PILLEAU, 2nd Battalion the Buffs (East Kent Regiment), Officiating Squadron Officer 2nd Bombay Lancers, has been admitted to the Bombay Staff Corps.

MAJOR C. E. PARKER-JERVIS, 2nd Battalion Durham Light Infantry, has been provisionally appointed Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry, vice Major H. E. P. Thomas, whose tenure of the appointment has expired.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—River still low in Sind, and preparations for early crops consequently delayed in Shikarpur. Rainfall generally sufficient in Konkan, Khandesh, and parts of the Deccan, but much wanted in Gujarat, Kattywar, and Baroda; also more wanted in parts of Nasik, Ahmednuggar, Sholapur, Belgaum, Bijapur, and Dharwar. Sowing early crops progressing in parts of Ahmedabad, Surat, Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Ahmednuggar, Sholapur, Satara, Bijapur, Belgaum, Dharwar, Kattywar, and Baroda, but retarded in parts where rainfall is insufficient. Rice transplantation progressing in Konkan, Surat, Nasik, and Poona. Fodder scarce in parts of Broach, Surat, Panch Mahals, Nasik, Poona, Belgaum, Kattywar, and Baroda. Locusts have appeared in four talukas of Hyderabad, slightly damaging indigo in one taluka.

"MADRAS," asserts the local Times, "has reason to envy Bombay for many of the special blessings which have been conferred on that ever-progressing city, and for few more than the presence of that learned and energetic lover of nature, Mr. H. M. Phipson. To him, Bombay already owes the possession of one of the most interesting, best kept, and best arranged museums, to be seen anywhere out of London; to him it is also indebted for the existence of the local Natural History Society, and we believe also the Anthropological Society. Again, he has, by the conception of forming a Zoological Garden, proved his peculiar fitness for gauging the public spirit of his fellow-townsmen, and finding his way to their purse-strings. In six days no less than Rs. 20,000 have been subscribed towards the scheme, and as our correspondent telegraphs, the name of Lord Reay has been added to the list of life members."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB

It is proposed to hold an Old Cheltonian Dinner at Simla about September the 15th.

THE Dowager Maharani of Dholpur is now pronounced out of danger, and is progressing satisfactorily under Sir John Tyler's treatment.

THE land for the extension of the Rawalpindi Cantonment has been acquired at an expenditure of Rs. 87,000 compensation due on the land and crops.

THE amount sanctioned from the Mooltan Cantonment Fund for repairs to the graves of soldiers who fell at the siege of Mooltan is Rs. 100. Seldom will a hundred rupees have been better spent.

THE following are the candidates at the forthcoming municipal elections at Simla :—Captain E. Barrow, Lieutenant Williams, R.E., Rev. W. Smith, Mr. E. Corstorphane, Mr. J. Craddock, and Mr. J. Chambers.

SUICIDE IN ALLAHABAD.—Mr. Rhys Davids, residing in Elgin-road, committed suicide on the night of the 7th July by shooting himself with a carbine, the bullet shattering his face and skull, and causing instant death. The unfortunate man, who was Head Assistant to the Chief Commissioner of Stamps in these Provinces, was in monetary difficulties, and his mind seems to have given way owing to his inability to meet his obligations. He leaves a wife and family wholly unprovided for. Mr. Rhys Davids was, we believe, a relative of the eminent Buddhist scholar of the same name.

CAPTAIN URMSTON.—Writing of Captain Urmston's death in the Agor affair, a correspondent says :—"I do not know him, and he may have been indiscreet during his life, but he could not have better atoned for it than by the way he died. From the account I heard he stood over Battye with his stick, and though asked by Kishenbir when Battye was dead to save himself said, 'No, I stop where I am.' If he did wave his handkerchief and try to bring the enemy to reason it was through a mistaken idea that he could do his party some good."

KASHMIR.—Dr. Surajbal has been appointed Governor of Kashmir, and the selection is considered a good one, as his acquaintance with European methods of despatching business is very thorough. He will have much to do in remedying the evils which took root and grew during his predecessor's term of office. There is no official information regarding the rumoured visit of the Viceroy in October. Cholera, which for two days entirely disappeared, has broken out again.

THE PUNJAB UNIVERSITY.—An important meeting of the Senate of the Punjab University was to be held on July 23rd. The matters for discussion will be the acceptance and management of the Wakefield memorial scholarship; the abolition of the additional examination in office work, Landi and Sarrafi writing and book-keeping, hitherto prescribed for diplomas for honours in Persian; revised conditions for the management of the Aitchison-Ram Rattan endowment; revision of the constitution of the Syndicate; measures for facilitating the medical studies of ladies desiring to take the M.D. degree in India; transference of the engineering class to the Mayo School of Art; and several less important matters.

THE SIMLA COOLIES.—Simla is said to stand in need of a Porters' Act, such as works well in Darjeeling, and the Legal Member of Council has been consulted on the subject of its introduction. With the supersession of the jampan by the jinrickshaw and the increased competition for his services, the coolie has waxed fat, freely asserting his right to strike work at his own sweet will. The disciplinary influence of a baker's dozen is no longer suffered at Simla, and Municipal law, to take the place of lex talionis, there is none. Thus the local authorities seek power to impose a license on all and sundry who apply for hire within parochial limits, the possession of which will be a necessary passport to private employment.

DEATH OF A MEDICAL OFFICER.—A gloom has been cast over Murree by the death, from enteric fever, of Surgeon Herman Thiele, Medical Staff, which occurred on July 7 at Lady Roberts' Hospital. This promising young officer only arrived in India in the spring of 1887; and since then has held the appointment of Staff Surgeon at Peshawar. He contracted his fatal illness on his way back from Thundiana, where he had been on short leave of absence. He was buried with full military honours the next afternoon—the firing party being composed of troops from the Murree Depot, and the band being furnished by the Northumberland Fusiliers from Kuldunnah. The attendance at the funeral was large.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These Shares on Saturday were firm Mysore rose $\frac{1}{2}$, Nundydroog 1-16, and Mysore Reefs 1s. Mysore Shares were last quoted $3\frac{1}{2}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$, Nundydroog $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $1\frac{1}{2}$, Indian Consolidated 7s. to 8s., Balaghat-Mysore (15s. paid) 12s. to 13s., ditto fully paid (£1) 17s. to 18s., Ooregum 21s. to 22s., ditto Preference 21s. to 23s., Devala-Moyar 5s. to 6s., Nine Reefs 11s. 6d. to 12s. 6d., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 7s. 6d. to 8s. 6d., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 3s. 3d. to 3s. 9d., Indian Glenrock 3s. to 4s., Gold Fields of Mysore 1 to $1\frac{1}{2}$, New South-East Wynaad 2s. to 3s., Wentworth (17s. paid) 2s. to 4s., Wynaad Perseverance 3s. to 3s. 6d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 4s. 9d. to 5s. 3d.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

It is currently reported in military circles that Major-General B. L. Gordon, C.B., at present commanding the Lower Burma Division, will succeed Major-General W. A. Gib, C.B., in the command of the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force. The change is likely to take effect in September next.

It has been recently decided that an officer transferred from one station to another in the ordinary course of military duty, who then succeeds, by virtue of his seniority alone, to the command of the station and thus benefits pecuniarily, must pay his own travelling expenses according to the general rule of the service.

MAJOR R. I. WALLER, [Second in Command of Rattray's Sikhs, now on six months' leave in England, is retiring from the service. Deputy Surgeon-General J. Henderson, M.D., Indian Medical Service, has been allowed to retire from the 1st July on an ordinary pension of £700 per annum and an additional pension of £100.

It has now appeared in print that the reason that Captain H. B. Urmston was unarmed in the affair in which he lost his life was that he was awaiting the assembly of a court-martial. The cause of his being placed under arrest was the writing of an indignant letter to a certain commanding officer, couched in admittedly intemperate terms. As a soldier he had committed an offence against discipline. The cruelly long delay of seventy days under arrest, however, brought on mental depression, which caused the authorities to release him from arrest. Hence his freedom to accompany Major Battye on his fatal march. However great an offence, from a military point of view, may be intemperate language addressed to a superior officer, no one will venture to deny that Captain H. B. Urmston was a gallant soldier and true Christian, in his death as in his life.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, having had under consideration the circumstances connected with recent accidents on rifle ranges, observes that these unfortunate occurrences are, in the majority of cases, clearly attributable to a disregard of the regulations for the conduct of target practice. His Excellency, therefore, desires to impress upon commanding officers the necessity, not only of insisting that all under their command are acquainted with the regulations, but of ascertaining that the chain of responsibility in connection with range duties is fully maintained throughout. Ignorance of published orders cannot be accepted as an excuse for their non-observance, and the Commander-in-Chief will hold commanding officers immediately responsible that the regulations for the conduct of target practice are strictly adhered to in the corps under their command.

COLONEL W. BAX has been appointed an Adjutant-General on the establishment provisionally.

LIEUT.-COL. H. COURT has been permitted to retire.

MAJOR-GEN. SIR W. HAMILTON, Deputy-Surgeon General J. H. Thornton, and Major-General T. P. Smith have been admitted to Government service pension.

LIEUTENANT A. ROUCH, R.E., has been appointed to the Public Works Department as Assistant Engineer in the Punjab.

WITHOUT the special order of the Government of India no officer who is in receipt of furlough on leave allowance may take service under any other employer in India; and no officer whose services have been lent to any other employer in India can take leave, or obtain leave allowance from the Government of India unless he actually quits his employment for the period of such leave.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. M. MEACHAM, of the 16th (Lucknow) Regiment, whose sudden death was recently announced, was only forty-five years of age. The deceased officer was a well-known athlete, and had the reputation of being one of the most powerful men in the army. A strange fatality seems to be steadily at work against the officers of the 16th, for since its formation not one of them had risen to command it. During the last eight years three Seconds in Command have died.

INSTANCES having occurred during the last troop-season of drafts from India arriving in England without sufficient clothing, the Commander-in-Chief has enjoined in General Orders on all officers concerned the necessity for taking every precaution against men proceeding to England, as invalids or otherwise, leaving the port of embarkation without being in possession of complete kits. Steps are also directed to be taken to prevent soldiers from disposing of any articles of clothing en route to the port of embarkation before they have been replaced by the issue of similar articles; and officers in charge of drafts are to be held responsible for the completeness of soldiers' kits, and are required to bring to notice any deficiencies which may occur during the journey to the port of embarkation.

DESTITUTE WIDOWS AND DAUGHTERS OF ARMY OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—Will you kindly permit us to make known through your columns that it is purposed, as soon as £2,000 shall have been specially contributed, to open a Home in connection with the Royal Military Benevolent Fund.

As is doubtless known to the majority of your readers, this Fund—instituted in 1875—grants annuities, up to £40 each, to distressed ladies, being (exclusively) Widows or Daughters of Officers of the Army, inclusive of the Royal Marines. To show the need that exists for its operations, it may be mentioned that for every two pensions awarded there are between sixty and seventy applicants.

These ladies are all the relatives of officers whose services had been long and meritorious, and in many instances of a highly distinguished nature; they are all in circumstances of great need, and many are absolutely destitute.

This statement may surprise those who share in a very general impression to the effect that every officer's widow is entitled to a Government pension: this opinion is, however, utterly erroneous, as there are several circumstances which preclude any pension being granted even although the deceased officer may have died on service; while in no case (except in extreme youth and under certain conditions) has the daughter any claim whatever upon the Government.

It should be at the same time remembered that an officer's pay is far too small to allow of his making adequate provision either for widow or children.

Owing to these circumstances the applications received by us are pitiable in the extreme, and it has therefore been decided to institute a Branch, to take the form of a Home for such of the applicants as (by reason either of advanced age, friendless condition, or other causes) are even more to be compassionated than others on the list; it is intended to provide these ladies with every necessary requirement, and it is hoped that the Home will be all that the word implies in its truest and best sense.

Contributions either for the Home or for the Fund (kindly specified accordingly) are received by Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Ransom, Bouverie and Co., bankers, 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.; by Messrs. Cox and Co., army agents, 17, Charing Cross, S.W., and by the Hon. Treasurer, Mrs. Ellis-Williams, 40, Bedford-square, W.C.

Trusting that this appeal may elicit the sympathy and help of your readers,

We are, sir, yours faithfully,
 NAPIER OF MAGDALA,

ATTACK ON AN ENGLISH OFFICIAL.—The following particulars of a murderous attack on Mr. Sweeting of the Salt Department, Bhakkar district, Dera Ismail Khan, are reported:—"Mr. Sweeting was out in Camp at Kanjan, some twenty-six miles from Bhakkar, on the 19th ult. At about one A.M. on the morning of the 20th, whilst asleep outside the rest-house at Kanjan, he was violently struck on his head over the right temple, but, as it providentially happened, he had his hands over his head protecting his face from the moonbeams, and the force of the blow, which is supposed to have been from a 'lathi,' or heavy stick, was broken. The wounds he received were two on the head within half an inch of the temple, two on the back of his left hand, and one on his right thumb, the nail of which was almost knocked off. On being struck he jumped up, crying out in pain, called to his orderly peon, and fell back again, not having seen anything of his assailant; in fact, he was unaware that an attempt had been made on his life, but supposed he had either been struck by lightning, or that a stone had accidentally hit him, having been thrown by some mischievous persons. There were four persons sleeping some 36 feet distant, they being his orderly peon, riding camel man, and two villagers, one of whom was chaukidar of the rest-house. All but the camel man came to his assistance when they heard him call, and did all they could to help staunch the flow of blood from wounds on the head. Search was also made to see if anyone was lurking about, but without success. The suspicion of the perpetrator of this dastardly deed has fallen upon one of Mr. Sweeting's servant's, who has been with him on and off for nearly six years, and was looked upon, as far as Native servants go, as a faithful and trustworthy man. He has been arrested."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.*

The woes of the agriculturists, cynically set aside, so far as remedial measures are concerned, by the very men who, at general elections, are the most profuse of promises to the wretched farm-labourer, are the subject of a well-reasoned paper by Mr. H. R. Farquharson, the Conservative member for Dorset, which occupies, and deservedly occupies, a considerable space in the present issue of the National. Mr. Farquharson shows his entire mastery of the matter which he has undertaken to treat; and wisely reminds us of the losses to the Conservative Party in the elections of 1885, which were directly traceable to the fact that the starving farm-labourer clutched, with the energy of despair, at the phantom of "cheap bread" held out to him by the (so-called) Free-traders. Forgetful of the fact that bread cannot really be cheapened to him by a policy which, while making it nominally cheap, deprives him of the means of purchasing it, the peasant was easily deceived by promises which cost their utterers nothing, but which were destined to bring in a magnificent harvest at the county polling-booths. Mr. Farquharson rightly points out that the present Government cannot, at the risk of political ruin, court a second defeat by allowing "agricultural depression to proceed unchecked." At the same time he is not unmindful (p. 771) of the tremendous opposition which any proposal to "extend State aid to agriculture, and artificially raise the price of agricultural products in order to save the farm-labourers from extinction," would inevitably encounter. The paper well merits a more careful perusal than that which too often, falls to the lot of an article inevitably dealing with "facts and figures."

Scarcely less lamentation is heard about the diminution of our trade from want of "technical education" than about the depression of agriculture from want of reasonable Protection. The latter complaint is well founded; but Sir J. Crichton Browne's article on "Handcraft" (p. 837) seems in a great measure to dispose of the former. The writer points out that our workmen can well hold their own, and that we have, in part, to thank the wide diffusion of machinery made by ourselves for the active rivalry of foreign manufacturers.

It is impossible to take up any Review without finding in it some article relating to Irish matters; but it is not a daily occurrence to peruse one so sensible as Mr. St. Loe Strachey's Paper on the Irish Viceroyalty. That Viceroyalty is, so long as it be maintained, a tacit recognition of the existence of a (purely fictitious) separate nationality; and we thoroughly agree in opinion with the writer that its abolition is most desirable. Nor should it escape notice that the Separatists, however they may abuse "Dublin Castle," have invariably voted against the abolition of the Lord-Lieutenancy, notwithstanding the fact that the second reading of a Bill abolishing it was carried in the Commons in 1850 by a majority of 225. Well was it remarked by no less acute an observer than Archbishop Whately, "No friend of the Union . . . can wish to retain this office. The abolition of this phantom of independence is the first step towards the consolidation of the two countries."

Whatever Professor Goldwin Smith writes deserves attention; and he has, in an article which few but himself could have penned, justified the non-acceptance, by the British Government, of the "Invitation to Celebrate the French Revolution" of 1789 by a masterly comparison of the state of France at the latter end of the eighteenth century with that actually existing among us at the present time. That the scum of humanity should rise to the top in a French revolution va sans dire; nor can any truer reason be assigned for the indiscriminate murders than that given by a Frenchman, "We were a pack of cowards" (p. 786), each afraid (as is bound to be the case in a nation so corrupt as is the French) to trust one another. A subject, less alien to the French convulsion than it may at first sight appear to be, is treated by Mr. H. G. Keene in his paper on "The Disorder of the Age," in which the writer vigorously assails the contented, or rather otiose, pessimism, and moral lassitude, of our modern schools of thought. Can it be that some tremendous crash is needed to bring us, also, back to that true insight into "things as they are" which underlies all healthy thought and all healthy action?

All classical scholars, and many to whom Homer is but a name, will read with great pleasure Mr. Bent's most interesting parallel between the life of the Greeks as depicted in the most truly human of uninspired poems, and that of their degenerate successors of the present day. Customs are all but unchanged; saints have, as in Spain, supplanted the ancient deities in name only.

Pity that the very remarkable "Stuart Papers," now given to the world by Mr. F. R. V. Radcliffe, have not sooner seen the light. They would, so far as they go, have been most useful to historiographers. Still more is it to be regretted that the larger portion of an invaluable collection, preserved intact until 1849, should then have been committed to the flames, because "they could now do no good to the family."

* "The National Review." August, 1888. London. (W. H. Allen and Co.)

With many of the Rev. John Hudson's criticisms on "Church Hymns" it is impossible not to agree, but he has left unnoticed an anti-climax in a well-known hymn, which has always struck us as supreme in its bathos. The Saviour is, rightly enough, assured that "the whole realm of Nature" would be "an offering far too small" to indicate a sinner's sense of His redeeming love, but it is not obscurely hinted that an infinitesimal portion of that "realm," "my life, my soul, my all," is very well fitted to take its place. "The part greater than the whole" with a vengeance!

ORIENT AND OCCIDENT.*

A journey from Lahore to Liverpool, via the Straits Settlements, Hong Kong, Japan, and thence across the American Continent to New York, may well be supposed to serve the author with many a chance of agreeable chit-chat; and it is no undue compliment to General Reveley Mitford to assert that he has made the most of his opportunities. The volume teems with interesting accounts of the various places visited, the information being sufficiently minute to answer the purposes of a general reader, wearisome details being left for those who desire to write a work of historical research and archæological learning. What is told, too, is accurate, so far as we are able to form an opinion, a criticism to which, however, one exception must be made—to wit, Husan and Husain were grandsons, not sons, of the Prophet, as asserted at page 11 of the text, their father having been Ali the "Lion of God" of Sarasenic fame.

From amongst the endless variety of facts and fictions which are collected together in this volume it would be easy to make quotations without ceasing; the difficulty is the embarrass des richesses, and we can only pretend to glance at a few somewhat notable matters. Every nation has its own peculiar characteristics. In China "every man, woman, and child carries a fan, from the tottering grandsire or hobbling, ghoul-like grandam to the grotesque, toddling infant; from the Emperor in his gorgeous palace to the beggar in the gutter, every class and every age uses the fan." In Japan women are bedaubed and made beautiful for ever in the public highway; and further, when they take unto themselves a husband they blacken their teeth; and Americans use a spittoon to an extent that is incredibly sickening. Fancy, as we ourselves saw the other day, a Bishop driving in his carriage, and expectorating as he rattled along the crowded streets of our most fashionable quarters! Chinamen—ay, and women too—will sell their very clothes off their backs to enable them to indulge in their characteristic love of gambling. Japanese are celebrated for the excellence of their jugglery, while our American cousins are noted for the peculiarity of their drinks and the arrogance of their language. You must partake of a "resurrection nip" or a "Presidential straight swizzle," a "doctor," or a "dream of eternal happiness reviver," so that you may realise the "greatness of our country." Such is the style of Yankee Doodle in his own land.

Lovers of scenery will find in General Mitford's account of his travels, no lack of novelty, and assuredly no absence of grandeur. Alike in Japan, as in California and America, Nature seems to have revelled in the most gorgeous, the wildest, and the most picturesque of garbs. Trees are huge, precipices are dazzling in height, mountains are colossal, waterfalls are bewildering; and the wanderer returns to the home of his birth with mind enlarged, and insular prejudices removed by the sight of the glories and wonders of Creation. Is it forbidden to envy one's neighbour's experiences? If not we should be tempted to select our warrior-author, for he has visited many lands and witnessed not a few glorious scenes, and the results are portrayed with clearness, and described with vigour.

TURKEY.†

Everyone is familiar with the "sick man" of Eastern politics, but it is only a comparative few who could give particulars as to the history of Turkey. Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole has, therefore, done good service in stepping into the breach, and affording the public a most admirable epitome of the annals of the Ottoman Empire; and it may be said with truth that of the valuable series of volumes comprised under the head of the "Story of the Nations," not one has as yet surpassed this very concise and clever summary of many hundreds of years of greatness and power.

The vitality of the sick man is proverbial. He has been ailing for upwards of three centuries; at times death was imminent, and dissolution scarcely avoidable. But still the pulse is beating; still Turkey lives to the discomfiture of the Colossus of the North, who seeks to grasp her possessions and sit on the throne of power in the proudest situation in the habitable globe. Whence comes this extraordinary recuperative faculty? The question is not easy to answer. In the early stages of the Ottoman dominion the cause is clear and unmistakable. Their organisation was incomparable; their administration of justice, if severe, yet pure and rapid. Rulers were sagacious and progressive in their views; and, lastly, the people were brave as lions, fearless as the classical heroes of antiquity. Such a combination of advantages, it may well be supposed, served to place the world at the feet of a race who knew how to conquer, and were alive to their duties when the sword was placed in the scabbard and the scales of justice took the place of the scimitar. But what is to be said in regard to the Turkish history of the last two centuries? Why is the death-knell of the Ottoman Empire always shaking and never sounding? Why is the dominion doomed and still continuing? Why are the vultures congregated, and yet the carcase is still a living being? We confess that we are powerless to answer the question, and we have not succeeded in tracing in the work under review the cause of these marvels of the political world. One fact, and one alone, seems to furnish a fairly reasonable solution of the problem. Turkey fills a rôle in the comity of nations which could not be discharged by any of her numerous rivals. Who could hold Constantinople with the assent of Europe at large? Ay! who, indeed? Till this point is satisfactorily settled Turkey may, perchance, continue to live a precarious and haply prolonged existence. Sick, she is not dead; decaying, she is not effete. And who can foresee the part she is yet destined to play in the unknown future?

THE STOCKBROKERS HANDBOOK.

Mr. Kennedy's valuable little manual, "The Stockbroker's Handbook"—one of the well-known "Wilson Series"—is chiefly designed for the use of brokers and their clerks; but their clients may pick up not a few hints which are likely to prove serviceable in these days of limited companies, and, shall it be said, more limited incomes.

Miss Chreiman, whose admirable lecture on "The Physical Culture of Women" has recently made a considerable stir in the learned world, has, we are glad to observe, published her essay in the form of a pamphlet, issued by Messrs. Sampson Low and Co. Mothers of families, and, indeed, all persons concerned in the education of girls, would do well to ponder on the hints given in this little brochure, which is as cheap (1s.) as it is valuable.

The Art Journal for August contains, as usual, a charming pièce de résistance in the shape of an etching of Stirling Castle, by J. MacWhirter; but this by no means exhausts the interest of the number, which contains a variety of other illustrations—all good, and some of more than average excellence. We would single out "With the Camera from Lechdale to Oxford" as justifying this criticism.

The Century Magazine for August is noteworthy, not only as containing a further contribution to the most excellent series of articles on the Cathedrals of England, but as affording an insight into the remarkable and little known Abbey of La Trappe, in Kentucky, founded in 1804 on the principles inculcated by the French austere, De Rance, more than 250 years ago.

Mr. Bowles has published a pamphlet designed to show that the Declaration of Paris, which during war protects merchandise carried in foreign bottoms, is a source of danger to England, crippling her power, interfering with her rights, and depriving her of the advantages which should naturally fall to her lot as Queen of the Seas. Cordially agreeing with these assumptions, we gladly call attention to a thoughtful essay on a subject pregnant with the deepest importance to Great Britain as the foremost naval nation in the world.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Military Memoirs," by J. A. O'Shea (W. H. Allen and Co.); "Decisive Battles of India," by Col. G. P. Malleson, C.S.I. (W. H. Allen and Co.); "Greville Memoirs," Vol. VIII. (Longmans and Co.).

THE PESHAWUR COMMISSIONERSHIP.—The Civil and Military Gazette says:—"If Colonel Waterfield takes leave this summer, as last spring he certainly intended to do, the arrangement is that Colonel Ommanney will take his place at Peshawur. It is not, however, by any means certain now, in view of recent events on the Agor border, that Colonel Waterfield will take leave."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1888.

THE STATE OF BURMA.

The news received from India this week, both by telegrams and overland mails, goes to show that matters are still in a very critical condition in Burma, Lower Burma appearing in the disorderly reports as well as the Upper Province, from which both telegrams and letters tell of continued dacoity and acts of violence. Notwithstanding the number of Upper Burmans we have executed in order to preserve the peace and give rest of mind and body to those who desire to be loyal to British rule, tranquillity to the country is apparently as far off as ever. Dacoity continues to flourish in spite of all efforts to put it down. We made from the first a mistake in thinking that this would be an easy task, forgetful of the fact that dacoity was generally considered to be no disgrace, but rather as a meritorious method of exercising high-spirited young men in village warfare. Dacoity was as natural to the average Upper Burman as faction fighting in the olden days to an ordinary Irishman. We were sanguine, however, of improving the Burman raider and cultivating him in the arts of peace. We have, however, hitherto failed, and it is not pleasant to learn that when the last mail left Rangoon dacoity was as rife as ever, and that there is no sign that we have yet reached the beginning of the end in crushing it out.

The local Press states some of the difficulties which we have put in our own way. One is stated to have been Sir Charles Crosthwaite's sweeping order for a general disarmament of the population. It is pointed out that although there was always the double danger that every weapon left in the hand of a Burman villager might be used either for the purposes of dacoity by the possessor of it himself, or by his yielding it up to the first dacoit that demanded it from him, yet at the same time in districts where our police and military organisation were manifestly insufficient it was a grave error to deprive the villagers of their only means of defending their lives and property. But this is not all. It is asserted that this disarmament has made no appreciable diminution in the number of weapons awaiting for dacoity purposes, for weapons of all kinds are coming in across the frontiers, especially from Siam.

A greater difficulty, however, has been in the inefficient organisation of the Upper Burma Police force itself. In the military part of the force the men are said to be an omnium gatherum of all races and characters, under too many bad Native officers and too few good English ones. The civil police are, we are told, in even a more unsatisfactory condition—not being looked after at all. An Indian contemporary, which calls serious attention to this state of things, summarises the situation thus:—

From what we have written it must be abundantly clear to everyone that drastic reform is called for in our methods of administering Upper Burma. It is not too much to say that, unless a firm hand be promptly applied towards remedying the existing state of matters, Burma will become a serious drag on India. The gravity of the outlook may be understood from the recent outbreaks, not merely in old centres of disturbance, but in quite new ground, in Arrakan and in Tavoy (on the coast, and the two extremes, west and east of Burma), in the Chin country, and in the Pagyi district. In consequence of these disorders, military expeditions have been sent, merely to return, for nothing can be done in such a country by military during the rains. In a country like Burma it seems an absolute necessity to secure the co-operation of the orderly classes, and to have a well organised Native police, composed of Burmans, Karens, Shans, &c. as an auxiliary to the Indian military police. But to give this Native police anything like a fair chance, they should surely be clothed, armed, and officered like other similar bodies of men. It is palpably absurd to expect Burman police in twenties armed with old flints (if armed at all), and not officered and not in defensible positions, to stand and fight, when we find it necessary to put Punjabees or Goorkhas into strongly defensible positions, and in bodies of not less than forty. Moreover, it is a manifest impossibility to do anything with Burman or Karen or Shan police unless they have a sufficiency of the right sort of European officers. Yet another flaw in the present arrangements is that, owing largely to the defects in the working of the police, civil officers are overworked, and are constantly breaking down. The frequent changes of district officers does an infinite amount of harm, and everything should be done to avoid this. No unimportant factor, too, in pacifying the country will be the opening up of communications, thereby developing trade, giving the people work in tracts where there is scarcity, and inducing immigration, so much wanted in many districts. But the grave facts we have placed before our readers will show that a radical change in our methods of police administration will be absolutely necessary before any really permanent results can be effected.

This is a grave enough state of affairs, and it will be seen that the Rangoon correspondent of the Times, in a telegram which we publish to-day, makes similar complaints.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 27.

THE HYDERABAD (DECCAN) COMPANY.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the First Lord of the Treasury, in view of the injurious nature of the charges and allegations that had appeared in the Indian Press both against Government and against private individuals and officials of repute in the matter of the Hyderabad (Deccan) Company's affairs, whether he would undertake that the discussion on the report should not take place before the evidence taken before the Select Committee had been printed and circulated; and whether it was the intention of Her Majesty's Government to take that discussion in the present portion of the Session or in the autumn Session?

Mr. W. H. SMITH: The Select Committee referred to was moved for by one of the hon. members for Northampton, and I have not seen, nor am I aware that the Committee have yet presented, their report. Till the report is before the Government I am unable to say whether it will be necessary to afford an opportunity for its discussion, and I cannot, therefore, give any pledge on the subject—(hear, hear).

JULY 30.

RETIRING ALLOWANCES (INDIAN ARMY).

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India under what retiring rules, citing the number and dates of warrants, orders, or despatches now in force, officers of the Indian Army got retiring allowances; were officers residing in India excluded from the benefit of existing retiring rules; whether the despatch of the Secretary of State (No. 407, of December 8, 1881), which related explicitly by the words of the despatch to "retiring allowances," superseded all those existing retiring rules for officers of the Indian Army, and came into force in July, 1882; whether, and if so on what grounds, the retiring rules laid down in the above-mentioned despatch were limited by the practice of the Indian Government, by an alleged order or "principle," which was in force in 1854, and was applicable to a state of circumstances which did not now exist; whether the despatch of the Secretary of State (No. 407, of December 8, 1881), in Clause 15, stated that every officer of thirty-eight years' service would be entitled to "retiring allowances" of £1,124 17s. 6d. per annum; and whether the Secretary of State would continue to sanction the payment of such allowances to officers resident in India in a reduced currency, while paying officers residing out of India the full amount of such allowance in sterling?

Sir J. GORST: (1) The rates of pensions of officers of the Indian Army are contained in Royal Warrant January 16, 1861; Secretary of State's despatches, No. 159, August 8, 1866; No. 252, August 4, 1881; No. 404, December 8, 1881. (2) No. (3) It came into force on July 1, 1881, and did not supersede existing rules. (4) The Secretary of State does not admit that these rules are limited by the practice of the Government of India. (5) The "colonel's allowance" is not, in the view of the Secretary of State, a retiring allowance. (6) The Secretary of State is not prepared to make any alteration in the rules regarding the rates of colonels' allowances.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. JOHNSTON asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the decision of the Viceroy of India on the Public Service Commissioners' report had been received at the India Office; whether he would state to the House the purport of that decision; and whether any conclusion had been come to as regarded the limit of age of candidates for the Indian Civil Service, and, if so, when any change was likely to come into operation?

Sir J. GORST: No decision has yet been come to by the Government of India on the report of the Public Service Commissioners. Apart from the report, there is no intention of altering the limit of age for candidates.

PIRACY OF BRITISH TRADE MARKS.

Mr. VINCENT asked the Under-Secretary of State for India if the attention of the Governor-General in Council had been directed to the extensive frauds committed on British industry by the piracy of the names, labels, and trade marks of British manufacturers well known in the East upon cutlery and other goods imported into India from foreign countries; and what steps had been taken to extend to India the provisions of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, and how soon they were likely to come into operation.

Sir J. GORST: The attention of the Government of India as been several times called to this subject. With reference to the action taken in India, I have nothing to add to the answer given by me on June 7th, except that a despatch in the sense then promised was sent to India on June 28th.

GROG SHOPS IN INDIA.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the attention of Her Majesty's Government had been directed to the correspondence recently published between the Deputy Commissioner for Darjeeling and the general manager of one of the largest local tea companies, in which great pressure was put upon the latter to open grog shops on his estates with a view "to the protection of the revenue and the enforcement of the law;" whether a very large number of the managers of tea gardens in the Darjeeling district had signed a document protesting against the Government Excise system; and whether the Secretary of State would take any steps to put a stop to the establishment of those grog shops in the public and private bazaars of India.

Sir J. GORST: The Secretary of State has no official information on this subject, but he will inquire from the Government of India what action the local Government is taking in the matter.

THE CANTONMENT ACTS IN INDIA.

Mr. J. STUART asked the Under-Secretary of State for India what reply had been received from the Government of India to the despatch of the Secretary of State dated the 17th of May; whether he would lay upon the table of the House the despatch in which the Secretary of State communicated to the Government of India the resolution of the House of the 5th of June last; what was the date of that despatch; and whether any steps had been taken to apprise the Government of India of the erroneous method in which Dr. Barclay and others had taken the averages in connection with the Lock Hospital reports.

Sir J. GORST: (1) None has yet been received. (2) Yes; if the hon. member will move for it. (3) June 14. (4) I regret to say that, through an oversight, this has not yet been formally done; but the Secretary of State will direct it to be done forthwith.

Mr. J. STUART said that on the Indian Budget he would call attention to the delays in the communications between the India Office and the Government of India on the subject.

AUGUST 4.

THE HYDERABAD-DECCAN COMMITTEE REPORT.

Sir H. JAMES: I have to ask permission to make a short statement relating to a matter of public interest, and to the rules of this House. In several newspapers this morning, and especially in the Times newspaper, there appears a statement of the contents of the report of the Committee on the Hyderabad-Deccan Mining Company. That report has not been laid upon the table of the House, but still the paragraphs to which I have referred state with some detail what the contents of that report are. As far as I can judge, the writer who communicated the contents of these paragraphs to the newspapers, who is said to be a person connected with a Press Agency, must have obtained a copy—probably the original draft copy of the report—at a stage and time when that report had not approached completion, and indeed had scarcely been considered, and when it was merely a draft report. While I cannot, for a moment, say what that report is or may be likely to be, it is, I think, my duty to say that the statements as to the contents of that report are not only insufficient, but are misleading, fallacious, and in many respects entirely erroneous. I do not think that at this stage I ought to suggest any course that should be taken to meet the evil that is so frequently displayed, as I have not yet had an opportunity of consulting with my colleagues; but I am sure they will share with me the great regret that I feel that such a course should have been taken in regard to the report to which I am referring—(hear, hear). I wish to say as distinctly and as emphatically as I can that the statements connected with the company are false and erroneous, because it happens that the duties of the Committee were to inquire into the affairs of a company, the shares of which have been largely dealt with—speculatively dealt with—and I believe are still being largely dealt with on the Stock Exchange; and it appears to me that if the report remains uncontradicted the result will be—it may be the intentional result—that the credulous and the unwary will suffer, and that those who do not possess those qualities will benefit—(hear, hear).

Mr. T. HEALY asked whether the Government would avail themselves of the Newspaper Law of Libel Bill which was coming down from the Lords to insert provisions that would put a stop to such practices—(hear, hear).

Sir G. CAMPBELL took the earliest opportunity of asking whether in regard to the Official Secrets Bill, the Government would take into consideration the question of dealing not only with those who stole public information, but with the receivers of that stolen information—(hear, hear).

Mr. T. D. SULLIVAN asked whether offences of this sort were not constantly being committed by The Times newspaper, and whether it was not the habit of that journal to get information of this kind which was the result of thefts and forgeries—(hear, hear, and laughter).

Mr. JACKSON: It is not possible for me to give a direct answer to the question of the hon. member for Longford, but I at once take the opportunity of saying that these occurrences have been of late so frequent that it will be the bounden duty of the Government to consider what measures should be adopted to put a stop to them—(hear, hear).

AUGUST 6.

TREATMENT OF COOLIES.

Mr. S. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the treatment of coolies described in a despatch issued at Calcutta on the 5th of May, 1888, from the Secretary of the Indian Association to the Secretary to the Government of India, wherein it was stated that "since the passing of the new Emigration Act in 1882 the mortality in the tea gardens has largely and steadily increased. The death-rate, which followed a downward course from 1878 to 1881, began to rise in 1882, when it was 37·8 per 1,000. In 1883 there was a further rise to 41·3, and in 1884 it rose to 43·2. In 1884 the death-rate among children in tea gardens had risen from 39·7 to 44 per 1,000. While the death-rate increased the birth-rate gradually fell; in 1882 it was 39·7 per 1,000; in 1883 it was 34·3; and in 1884 it further decreased to 32·7 per 1,000; and whether any steps were being taken by the Government of India to see that effect was given to the assurance made in 1883 by Mr. Elliot, then Chief Commissioner of Assam, "that no exertions will be wanting on the part of the civil and medical staff of the Assam Commission to wipe out the blot on the administration of which this terrible mortality is the cause."

Sir J. FERGUSSON, in the absence of Sir J. GORST, said: The memorial of the Indian Association referred to has not been received at the India Office. In November, 1886, the Secretary of State requested the Government of India to watch narrowly the working of the Emigration Act of 1882. In 1886 the rate of mortality sank to 36·8 per 1,000, and in 1886, notwithstanding the prevalence of cholera, it was only 39·8. The Secretary of State is confident that the Government of India will take due notice of the representations made by the Indian Association, and will not hesitate to enforce, wherever necessary, the adoption of such measures as will lead to the greater health of the labourers in the Assam tea gardens.

H. E. LORD DUFFERIN AND THE POONA NATIVE INSTITUTE
—We are very glad to congratulate the promoters of the Poona Native Institute on the rare honour of a medal from the Governor-General of India. His Excellency Lord Dufferin has thought it right to send a silver medal to the Institution before his departure as a mark of appreciation of the good work going on in the city in an unostentatious manner. It is known to the Poona world that this very Institution has already secured the august patronage and goodwill of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and now his Excellency the Right Hon. Lord Dufferin, Viceroy and Governor-General of India, has been pleased to forward to the managing Board of the Institution a silver medal to be awarded to the student of that school who gets the highest number of marks at the ensuing Matriculation Examination. The medal has been manufactured by a firm in Regent-street London.—Deccan Herald.

THE famous and long-drawn-out Rukhmabai case has come to a final close before the Court of Appeal. The defendant lady has agreed to pay Rs. 2,000 towards plaintiff's costs, and the latter undertakes to make no attempt to execute the decree of the lower court against her, ordering restitution (or, rather, in this case, institution) of conjugal rights. The matter thus ends with the main question at issue still in doubt, whether a Hindoo lady can be compelled to cohabit with a husband whom she has married in infancy and without responsible consent on her part. Dadajee so far has the law with him; he has its decisions on his side, but as he admits Rukhmabai has no affection for him, he does not press for the penalty of imprisonment against her. That public opinion would have tolerated Rukhmabai's being sent to gaol is impossible. Such a step would, almost for certain, have caused an agitation in and beyond India, which would have resulted in prompt legislation, and cut away the ground from under the feet of the Conservative Hindoos who have backed up the plaintiff all through the proceedings. Thus the settlement of the case is a compromise pure and simple. The law is with Dadajee; a moral victory rests with Rukhmabai.

"RIFLEMAN" writes, alluding to the Gurkha Native officer who behaved so splendidly in the Agror affair:—After the Indian Mutiny some of the regiments that had most distinguished themselves were asked to choose from amongst their members the one they thought most deserving of the "Victoria Cross." A story is told (which I believe to be true) that one of the regiments unanimously voted for a bhisti who belonged to it, and the "V.C." was accordingly given to him. Whatever gallantry the bhisti may have performed, it is scarcely probable that the brave Subadar who recently distinguished himself in the affair near Oghi is less deserving of the coveted reward of "valour" than the bhisti who received the "V.C." after the Mutiny. What, then, could be a more suitable reward for Subadar Kishunbir Nagarkoti than to bestow on him the "Victoria Cross?" It can scarcely be imagined that anyone would grudge him or the "gallant 5th Gurkhas" the honour of being the only possessors in the Indian Army of the "Victoria Cross."

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE
AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

BECHUANALAND METHUEN SETTLEMENT.

PATRONS:

COLONEL the HON. PAUL METHUEN, C.B.C.M.; the Right Hon. LORD ELIBANK, R.N.

Gentlemen proceeding to this colony as settlers can for a sum of £200 purchase 3,000 acres of freehold land, to be selected on arrival. Through Bechuanaland lies the great trade route to Central Africa, and the extension of the railway from Kimberley to Vryburg, the centre of British Bechuanaland, is only a question of time. Gold has been discovered near the settlement. A settler writes: "I am delighted with my two farms; have plenty of water and trees. Shall be able to find a market for my produce. The Kaffir cattle, sheep, and goats on the veldt were in splendid condition. I consider the settlement should be a gigantic success."

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 24th July; from Allahabad to the 22nd July; and from Calcutta and Madras to the 21st July.

PETERHOFF ceased to be the Viceregal residence at Simla July 23, when the Viceregal party moved into the new Lodge. The first public entertainment under the new roof was to take the shape of a dinner-party on the 8th of August, followed by a small dance; what is called the house-warming ball, which had been announced for that date, being deferred to the 22nd, by which time the internal arrangements of the Viceregal residence will have been sufficiently advanced for the more ambitious undertaking.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY was to leave Calcutta on tour in Lower Bengal and the Sonthal Pergunnahs on the 27th July, returning to headquarters on the 12th prox. Between these dates his Honour will visit Midnapore, Bankoorah, Raneegunge, Deoghur, Doomka, and Sooree.

THE HON. MR. CHARLES MASTER, the Senior Member of the Madras Council, was still seriously ill at Ootacamund when the mail left.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE, Chief Commissioner of Upper Burma, arrived at Minbu on the 12th July, and proceeded on his tour on the 14th, arriving at Pokoko the same day.

GREAT sensation has been caused in the Bombay Presidency by the suspension of Mr. Arthur Crawford, the Commissioner of the Central Division, on charges of receiving bribes.

MR. CRAWFORD attempted to abscond from Bombay in disguise, but was arrested by the police.

HE was subsequently taken back to Poona, from which place he had fled to Bombay, and liberated on bail for Rs. 70,000.

SEVERAL Native officials have been also suspended, and between sixty and seventy persons are said to be implicated.

THE Shinwaris in the Jellalabad District have put to death a large number of influential men of that quarter, who were sent to them on business by the Ameer's Commander-in-Chief.

REINFORCEMENTS are being sent by the Ameer to the district. There are between 7,000 and 8,000 troops there.

IT is probable that an expedition will be sent to the Black Mountains in the autumn.

THE force will number about 10,000.

No less than eighteen Indian Railways will be represented at the Conference which is to assemble at Simla on the 3rd of September next. The sittings will last from this date till the 27th of that month.

THE date of the opening of the annual Exhibition of the Western India Fine Arts Society has been finally fixed for the 18th of September. The Patron of the Society is Lord Reay, and the Vice-Patron H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught.

THERE is to be a gathering of "Old Cheltonians" at Poona in the first week in September. Captain L. L. Steale has arranged for cricket and polo matches, and there will, of course, be a school dinner on September 4th.

A SCHEME is on foot for raising a memorial to Sir Herbert Macpherson, the late Commander-in-Chief of Madras.

THE Births, Deaths, and Marriage Registration Act of 1886 come into operation from the 1st of October.

THE average membership of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Association during the past year was 12,119, as against 11,495 during the previous year.

IT is understood that thirty-six gentlemen, including representatives from all classes of the community, will be appointed honorary magistrates in Madras.

PRIVATE PEPPER, of the 6th Dragoon Guards, committed suicide at Mhow by shooting himself.

THE Vice-Chancellorship of the Bombay University, vacant by the resignation of Sir Raymond West, has been conferred upon the Rev. Dr. Mackichan, Principal of the Free General Assembly's Institution, Bombay.

MR. BADEN-POWELL, Judge of the Chief Court, Punjab, will shortly be placed upon his Excellency the Governor-General's Council in connection with the Forest Bill, on which he has been for some time engaged.

THE Pioneer says:—"There has been a considerable outcry on the Madras side about the impending removal of Sir Harry Prendergast from the Chief Commissionership of Mysore. A Native gentleman expresses the local discontent in the following remarks:—"I see," he writes to us, "that Sir Oliver St. John is to come here as Resident in October. Without entering into the question of either his or the present Resident's merits, I would wish to point out the great hardships these constant changes entail on Mysore. No sooner do we get to know and trust a British Resident than he is moved away. I know the sentiments of many of my fellow-countrymen, and can confidently say that Sir H. Prendergast is a man we can trust. He is popular with everyone who has had anything to do with him, except evil-doers, from his Highness to the lowest ryot. At first there was a great outcry against appointing one who had no judicial nor revenue experience, but he has now mostly conquered the difficulties of the situation, and as regards his judicial capacity even the lawyers have confidence in him. His removal will certainly be a calamity." Now the above gives a rational view of the position, and makes a reasonable complaint about a state of things which, however inevitable, is to be regretted."

THE Amir Abdur Rahman is determined to consolidate his power in the country east of Jellalabad. A regiment of cavalry and two regiments of infantry are reported to have passed Gundamak, en route to the Shinwari country, where the tribesmen are still in open rebellion. The troops in the Jellalabad district must now number 7,000 or 8,000 men.

A REPORT has reached Peshawur city, and is widely circulated there, that the Shinwaris of the Jellalabad district have put to death a large number of influential men of that quarter who were sent to them on some public matter by Gholam Haidar Khan, the Afghan Commander-in-Chief. The smallest number of those killed is at present limited to sixty and rises gradually to nearly 200, as it pleases people to add to or diminish from the original number.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the continuance of cavalry rates of pay to the British mounted infantry employed in Burma, but are unable to extend the concession to Native mounted infantry.

THE subscriptions to the proposed Bombay "Zoo" now amounts to Rs. 41,900.

THE Government of India is encouraging the Bengal Presidency Rifle Meeting by allowing the railway expenses of regimental teams and competitors to and from the Central Rifle Meeting at Mirat.

NOTES.

WE have commented elsewhere upon the debate on Sir J. Gorst's Financial Statement, as it took place in the House of Commons on Thursday night. In the Press on the following day there was as little to be satisfied with as in the oratorical displays of the night previous. The English Press seems to have only two ways of looking at India—either everything there is going to the bad under British administration, or everything there is perfect, and cannot be improved upon. The agitators take the pessimist view—officialism takes the roseate, and their printed organs represent their sentiments accordingly.

THE halfpenny evening papers are not generally the best-informed on Indian, or, indeed, on most questions, but the Echo on Friday last took that unfortunate country under its protection. "Look," it says, "at the picture presented in the House last night at the close of the Session, when a languid assembly of tired gentlemen, after an hour's perfunctory debate, passed 'the customary resolution,' and then say how much the Native of India has to expect from Parliament." The Echo would have a thorough and exhaustive inquiry into the administration of India, "notwithstanding all Sir John Gorst may say." And to what ends, it may be asked, would the Echo have such inquiry directed? It would have an investigation made "into the necessity of continuing the disastrous Salt-tax," and as to the best method of providing "a safeguard of the liberties of the Hindoo population." Such is knowledge!

THE appointment of Sir A. Alison as Military Member of the Secretary of State's Council in lieu of General Foster, whose ten years' tenure of office has expired, ought to give satisfaction even to the discontents amongst the Indian armies. General Alison knows those armies well, and has always been in sympathy and touch with them. General Foster left India in 1846, and, with the exception of having taken part in the Mutiny campaign, has had no further military experience in India.

THE Times' correspondent at Calcutta is evidently of opinion that the Maharaja of Benares is an oracle of wisdom, for he has thought the following rhodomontade from that ancient nobleman are of sufficient importance to be wired to London. The Maharaja is denouncing the National Congress, and he does so thus:—"The blister has burst, and the more you scratch it now the worse it will be. The Government, anyhow, will not suffer. The Government will be the gainer in every way. Whether the melon falls on the knife or the knife on the melon the melon must suffer."

BUT this is not all. His Highness warms up, under some outside inspiration, possibly:—"In conclusion, I ask you to bear in mind one thing most clearly. It is far from my intention to insult in any way any oilman, or carpenter, or kavar, or mochi; but I have endeavoured simply to prove that democracy, or representative Government, does not suit India, and that elections will not do for the Council. Oh! Almighty God! I pray give some wisdom to our Hindoo and Mahomedan brethren that they may close up this Congress business, and not prolong the quarrel, which can have but one inevitable and disastrous end."

IT is well that the law in India is showing itself to be no respecter of persons. Holkar's brother has been tried and convicted of cruelty to a wife aged twelve. She jumped out of a high window to escape his brutal treatment, and was then taken under police protection. The accused was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, and also to a fine.

POOR Waghorn, who was allowed to die in the shadow of official neglect, and for whose family an appeal had to be made to public charity, has had at length the cold honour done to him of a statue erected to him at his birthplace,

Chatham. This statue, which is of bronze, has been provided by private subscriptions, and is erected on rising ground near the railway station a short distance from the house in which he was born. On the base of the statue is the inscription, "Thomas Frederick Waghorn, Lieutenant R.N., Pioneer and Founder of the Overland Route. Born at Chatham, 1800; died Jan. 7, 1850." The statue was unveiled on Friday morning last by Lord Northbrook in a brief speech to a number of spectators, in which his lordship touched upon some of the episodes in the career of a man whose name has almost been forgotten by the present generation.

A SUNDAY contemporary is responsible for the following:—Sir Somers Vine is a lucky man. The Kensington Shows made him, and when they came to an end the Imperial Institute gave him a comfortable billet. But notwithstanding princely pressure of an unprecedented kind, the financial outlook for the Institute is anything but promising, and now it is said that Sir Somers is to start on a tour round the Colonies to beat up subscriptions. Speaking, as he will, in the name of the Prince of Wales, he may scrape together a few thousands; but, be that as it may, there is one man who will have a pleasant time of it—Sir Somers Vine, to wit.

WE give a digest to-day of the Report of the Select Committee of Inquiry into the Hyderabad (Deccan) scandal. Different men will have different opinions as to how far the Commission has fulfilled public expectation. It has certainly been very careful in abstaining from naming any official for blame. Its verdict would seem to be "Not guilty, but don't do it again." We wonder if the members were unanimous in the signing of the report? Truth may come to the aid of public curiosity some day.

BY TELEGRAPH.)

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 12.

Two largely-attended meetings of Mahomedans have been held at Bombay to decide the question whether men of their faith should attend the next so-called National Congress. His Highness Aga Akbar Shah presided at the first meeting, and the following resolutions were passed:—

"First, that it is not desirable, either from an educational point of view, or looking to the unsettled condition of Europe and Asia, even from a political point of view, that the Mahomedan community should join the Indian National Congress in trying, however unconsciously, to force the hands of the British Government in India by any organised demonstration, however seemingly pacific in character.

"Secondly, that in the opinion of this meeting, which is representative of all sections of the Mahomedan community, it is not desirable to join the Congress, and that whoever attends the meeting of the Congress at Allahabad, in the next cold weather, will be considered as self-elected."

There were two dissentients only from the above resolutions. Similar resolutions were carried by large majorities at the second meeting.

An Indian Patriotic Association has been formed by the Hindoos and Mahomedans of the North-West to endeavour to counteract the mischievous consequences of the Bengalee Congress agitation. In the course of a letter setting forth the objects of the association, Sir Syed Ahmed writes as follows:—

"The National Congress which the Bengalees and some others have made has been thoroughly discussed throughout India. In Bengal, Behar, Oudh, the North-West Provinces, the Punjab, Bombay, and Madras, influential and distinguished Mahomedans and large general meetings have expressed extreme antagonism to the movement, and stated a conviction that the Congress and its objects and methods, by which hatred and hostility to the Government are stirred up in the ignorant masses, are in the highest degree dangerous for the Government, for the country, and for the preservation of peace. Influential and distinguished Hindoo gentlemen of these provinces have expressed agreement with the Mahomedans. The Talukdars, both Hindoo and Mahomedan, have united in refusing to join the movement and in stating opposition to its objects. His Highness the Maharajah of Benares, Maharajah of the most sacred city of the Hindoos, has in a large meeting, attended by all the most respectable Hindoo gentlemen of that town, expressed thoroughgoing and uncompromising hostility to the Congress. There have recently been two large meetings of Mahomedans in Bombay. In one his Highness Aga Akbar Shah was president; the other was held at the house of Mahomed Ali Ragay. Both meetings passed resolutions condemning the Congress and declining to join it.

"Besides, there are reasons of a general nature. The most thoughtful and influential Mahomedans have stated their belief that the proposals of the Congress would be extremely prejudicial to the interests of Mahomedans, not only in their present condition, but also in the future, however much their education might have advanced; and that these proposals would seriously endanger the preservation of order. If the measures of the Congress be carried into effect, the disturbance of the peace will be so great that it is impossible to prophesy its extent. It will be no wonder if such events occur as the imagination cannot picture. In India all the people are well aware of the opposition now being raised by Hindoos and Mahomedans to the Congress; but the supporters of the Congress are trying by wrong means to create a false impression in England that the whole of the people of India, Hindoos and Mahomedans, are in its favour. Hence it is necessary for us to inform the people of England that the Mahomedans and many influential and powerful Hindoos, are opposed to it.

"It is therefore desirable that an association be formed of those Hindoos and Mahomedans who are opposed to the Congress."

SIKKIM AND THE TIBETANS.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 12.

The Tibetans, emboldened by the purely defensive attitude maintained by the British troops behind entrenched and fortified positions, are rapidly massing troops and pushing forward their preparations for an early attack. It is stated that 11,000 Tibetans are now encamped behind the Jalapla Pass and 1,500 between the frontier and Lhasa. Two hundred Khamtya soldiers have arrived at Phari under the leadership of two "chidungs" or holy lamas. They have erected a fortified wall at the foot of the Natula Pass, on the Sikkim side, and have occupied the pass with a strong outpost, stationed at Yakla.

The latest telegraphic despatch from Gnatong states that information has been received that a representative of the Chinese Ampa, or Legate, has visited the Tibetan outposts in Sikkim, and has started on his return journey. The present Ampa is said to be of higher rank than any previously sent from China. The former Ampa was recalled in consequence of his omission to report the true character of the dispute between the Indian Government and Tibet.

It is rumoured that the Tibetans are intriguing with our protected Himalayan States, and that they profess to be prepared for twelve years of war.

The First Goorkhas have started from Pathankote, and are expected to arrive in Gnatong about the 23rd inst. A battery from Darjeeling will arrive to-morrow.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 11.

The official bulletin last issued on the condition of Upper Burma is somewhat favourable. Several petty affairs between the police and dacoits are reported. In Mandalay town eight dacoits, who had assailed a house in the outskirts, were attacked by the police, one of them being killed and three captured. The heavy rains make military operations in many parts of Upper Burma impossible for the present. The weather also lessens the activity of the dacoits, and the mounted infantry have been re-called to headquarters in several districts. The district north of Thayetmyo, along the old frontier line, is reported to be in a disturbed condition, and a strong band of dacoits is in the Arracan hills, to the west of this district. Several expeditions have been sent against these outlaws, but they have escaped owing to the difficult nature of the country.

Disturbances are reported from Tavoy, where the inhabitants are resisting payment of the punitive police-tax, which is being forcibly levied by armed police. The Rangoon Times reports that the military police, with fixed bayonets, have visited several houses in Tavoy to compel payment of the tax, but have so far collected very little. Great discontent prevails among the people of Tenasserim. The action of the Local Government in levying a punitive tax on Tavoy is very generally condemned. To restore order in this province it is absolutely necessary that some change should be made in the officials in charge of it. The present state of things has been allowed to continue too long. The public interests should now prevail over personal considerations.

The Ruby Mines district proves to be very unhealthy. Out of 120 military policemen stationed there fifty were recently in hospital.

Mr. Philip Nolan, General Secretary of the Government of Bengal, arrived here to-day, on a special mission to arrange for an extensive scheme of migration to Burma from certain districts in Bengal adjoining Assam. The sparse population of Burma has been greatly thinned by the long-continued disturbances. The loss of life during the past three years has been very large, and a large number of prisoners have been transported to India. The Government of Burma have vast tracts of land available for new settlers, and a great many of the military police have expressed their willingness to settle in Burma if grants of land are made them. The policy of the local Government, under successive Chief Commissioners, in reference to public lands has been very obstructive. Great difficulties are experienced by persons who wish to take land for cultivation.

The unsatisfactory condition of the police, and the inefficiency of many of their officers still attract attention. Tsagain has been throughout the recent troubles the most disturbed district in Upper Burma. It has been the scene of repeated outrages of the gravest character. The present state of affairs in Tsagain is mainly due to the inefficiency of the police administration. Tsagain specially required to be controlled by a police superintendent who was thoroughly acquainted with the people. Yet the district has been for the past year left in charge of an officer who neither speaks nor understands Burmese.

The survey for the Moo Valley line of railway will be commenced at once. Mogoung is less than 200 miles distant from the nearest railway station in India. Direct railway communication between India and Burma cannot long be delayed.

AUG. 12.

A band of dacoits has attacked Yenanyoung, on the eastern bank of the Irrawaddy and the centre of the earth-oil district. They attempted to burn the town, but were sharply repulsed by the military police. This is the fourth time Yenanyoung has been attacked. The three previous attacks were partially successful, and portions of the town were burnt.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

PARTISAN JOURNALISM AND THE DECCAN MINING COMPANY.

(Englishman.)

According to a telegram from Bombay, the leading journal in that city has been commenting significantly on the conduct of the two papers which have made themselves conspicuous in connection with the Deccan Mining Inquiry. We have no desire to discuss the matter at the present stage; we do not forget the rule by which matters that are sub judice are for the time withdrawn from public discussion. It is characteristic of the furious and prejudiced crusade upon which the erring journals have embarked that they have utterly disregarded one of the first rules of respectable journalism. From the moment when it was known that there was to be an inquiry the violent special pleading, instead of being held in abeyance, was redoubled, and on the strength of biased and wholly unreliable telegraphic reports the most sweeping condemnation was passed upon men who bear honourable names and who hold high office under Government. The whole proceedings are so outrageous that it is little wonder if the journals in question have fallen under the suspicion of being blind to the merits of the case. Without commenting upon the case itself, we are justified in saying that the vicious and persistent attacks upon Abdul Huq are typical of the spirit of the whole discussion, and that the impeachment of high and honoured names are merely incidents, in what we call the great Huq hunt. The Bombay Gazette seems to imagine that, in speaking thus of the case, we are showing a tendency to condone a "discreditable fraud," but our contemporary displays a strange inability to appreciate the perfectly obvious course which we have adhered to throughout. It is not a fraud that we seek to condone, but a discreditable attempt to prejudice the issue of the inquiry and to blacken the fame of men who have hitherto borne themselves in high positions with spotless integrity that we unhesitatingly condemn.

Having thus explained our position in regard to this painful subject, we here reproduce a telegram summarising an article which appears in the Bombay Gazette in which that position is grievously misrepresented. Let it be clearly understood that, unlike our impetuous contemporaries, we have hitherto taken no side, and that we maintain that to discuss the case at the present stage is to be guilty of something vastly more serious than a breach of journalistic etiquette. Here, then, is the telegram:—"The Bombay Gazette says that the Englishman, with strange unconsciousness of the existence of anything that is serious or particularly discreditable in the Deccan Mines fraud, gives the recent inquiry the title of the 'Great Huq Hunt,' and coolly speaks of such criticism as has been passed upon the affair in India as an attempt to make sensational capital out of it. If the whole affair is a Huq Hunt, and nothing else, we should like to know what particular pleasure the Home Government have got out of it, and whether it was in order to make sensational capital out of it that they consented to the Parliamentary inquiry. In sheltering itself behind the special pleading of the Bullionist, the Englishman takes cover behind a ruinously transparent screen. No one in this country, so far as we know, was shocked at finding that there was one solitary financial paper in London prepared over this business to argue that black was white. If there is anything shocking in connection with that incident, it is the readiness of an influential journal to treat such advocacy as the Bullionist's as serious financial criticism. We are bound to say that we cannot quite understand the process by which our contemporary has arrived at its airy conclusions on this subject. Nothing short of ignorance of the evidence laid before the Committee and of the comments passed upon it here would lead an intelligent observer of events to see in the affair nothing beyond the flinging of mud in one direction and a singing of praises in the other." We publish this message fully so that the Gazette may have no cause to complain that its views are ignored or are only represented by an unsatisfactory gloss. To what we have already said, we can only add that, far from treating this affair in a light and airy manner, we regard it as one of vital importance, fraught with the most serious consequences to many of those concerned, not excluding our two contemporaries, who have rashly pronounced judgment while the Committee of Inquiry is still considering the evidence.

THE TAVOY SCANDALS.

(Rangoon Times.)

British Administration in the East, which we have always considered so much superior to anything Eastern, seems to have sunk lamentably in Tavoy. The recent rising there is said to have arisen from impatience of heavy taxation, from our having corrupt and ignorant police and inefficient Deputy Commissioners. The Commissioner seems to have considered the time propitious for fining the inhabitants of Tavoy Rs. 17,000, and the officials are said to have collected this sum in some cases by summarily seizing the personal property of the inhabitants, and levying from Rs. 4 to Rs. 100 per house. There are legal ways and means of levying a punitive tax, but we have no hesitation in condemning the recent methods adopted at Tavoy as highly illegal, and calculated to provoke the people into rebellion and disloyalty. Twomey, the Deputy Commissioner, is said to sympathise with the people in their opposition to the Commissioner's illegal order, but to have expressed himself as unable to set it aside. It is to be hoped that the Local Government will cause full inquiry to be made into recent official doings in Tavoy. If they are as bad as have been reported to us, instead of being subjected to fresh police taxation the people of Tavoy would seem to have a legitimate grievance in the fact that the taxes which have hitherto been paid have been so misapplied as not to afford them the ordinary protection to which, as British subjects, they were fully entitled.

A STRANGE ADVENTURE.

(Englishman.)

Four Europeans who had been out after tigers in the Maimensing district were returning at the close of a very long day, and had almost reached the factory where they were to dine and pass the night, where the captain ordered a halt. The "line" at once pulled up, and he said: "I hate seeing loaded guns taken into a house (it was the old muzzle-loading days), more especially where there are children. I propose that we fire ours off." "All right," said another, "but we haven't had a shot all day, what do you say to a 'pool'?" "There is nothing to fire at," observed a third. "There's that ghurrah," said the Captain, pointing to an earthen vessel which some rayats, who were working at a little distance, had as usual brought their day's supply of drinking water in. "Very good," said the fourth, "but, what with bad light, and the distance, it's by no means an easy shot. I propose we each put a chick on."

"How shall we decide as to the order for firing?" said one. "Oh," replied the Captain, generously, "commence at your end of the line."

I have observed that the mark was by no means an easy one to hit, for the distance was well-nigh a hundred yards, the guns smoothbores, and the light that deceptive kind which one gets just between daylight and dark. But, on the other hand, the hunters were exceptionally good men, all excellent shots, either of whom could hit a running deer from the back of an elephant twice out of three times.

"Fire away," said the Captain. No. 1 graved the right side of the vessel, and it was thought must have hit it. No. 2 went just over it. No. 3 went a little to the left. "Thank you, gentlemen," said the Captain. "I'll trouble you for these twelve rupees." He raised his gun as he spoke, and the next moment the jar was covered with earth, the bullet had cut the ground beneath it. Presently the vessel was seen to wriggle, and then to kick, while a feeble cry proclaimed it to be a baby. Consternation was depicted on every face. The elephants bitoed; the sahibs jumped down and rushed to the spot, the parents running from the opposite direction. The little mite hadn't been touched, and was carried off by the father and mother with great rejoicing. They also took the "pool" along with them, and right glad the sahibs were, under the circumstances, to part with it.

BENGAL.

SIR STEWART BAYLEY was to leave Calcutta on the 27th. July, on tour, not returning till the 12th of August.

THE expedition to the Chittagong Hills is now fully determined upon. A small force will be despatched, probably early in December.

OF the 189 civilians employed in Lower Bengal, twenty-eight were absent on furlough on the 17th of July, and three other furloughs were granted lately, which leaves six available. Two of the officers now absent will return before the end of July. Nine furloughs will probably be available before the 1st of October.

DURING the absence, on deputation, of Colonel W. L. N. Knyvett, Mr. Giles, of Maimansing, will act as Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Bengal.

It is officially notified that Babu Durgagati Banerji will act as Superintendent of Excise Revenue and Collector of Stamp Revenue, Calcutta.

THE proceeds of four sales of Bengal opium and three months' pass duty on opium exported from Bombay amount to Rs. 2,49,92,825, or Rs. 8,94,825 better than the estimate. The whole gain has been made by Bombay, the Bengal returns being still Rs. 1,89,125 less than the estimate.

MAKUN LALL ADDY, his brother, Cour Mohun Addy, and their mother, Kooosum Coomaree Dossee, who were charged before the Presidency Magistrate with torturing Hem Coomaree Dossee, a child, the wife of the first accused, by branding her with a hot iron, have been sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment each.

THE Calcutta Municipal Bill has not yet received the Viceroy's assent. It is a formidable code, containing some 500 sections, which will have to be carefully examined in almost every Department of the Government of India before being ripe for that final touch. The objection taken by some of the Native Associations to the want of authority to alter the boundaries of Calcutta is pronounced by the law advisers of the Crown to have nothing in it.

THE total expenditure on jails in Bengal during the past year has been reduced from Rs. 10,93,361 to Rs. 9,68,033, and this, too, in spite of the fact that the annual cost of keeping each prisoner has advanced from Rs. 73-13-6 in 1886, and from Rs. 58-10-3 as it was in 1886, to Rs. 79-0-4 last year. The total jail population on the 31st December fell to 13,210 which is said to be the lowest figure on record, and in a great measure the result of remissions granted on Jubilee day. The daily average population of all classes of prisoners decreased from 14,805'90 in 1886 to 12,250'36 in 1887. There was a lower death-rate, 33'1 per mille, against 37'2 in 1886, and an average of 50'2 since 1863.

MADRAS.

LORD CONNEMARA was to pay a visit to the gold-fields at Kolar on August 1st.

THE HON. MR. STEWART R. TURNBULL, of Messrs. Wilson and Co., Madras, has resigned his seat in the Madras Legislative Council, previous to leaving Madras for Europe for six months. He was appointed to the Council in February, 1887. He has also resigned the Chairmanship of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. D. Rasbotham, Vice-Chairman since January, 1887, has been elected to succeed him in that office.

THE students of the Madras Christian College (College Department) have abandoned the intention of writing to the Rev. Dr. Miller in Scotland, in reply to the three letters he has addressed to them on the subject of the late disturbances at the College. They are well advised, for in this case "the least said the soonest mended."

THE Government of the Maharajah of Travancore has offered to the South India Railway Company to guarantee 4 per cent. interest on the cost of the proposed line of railway within Travancore, or from Quilon to the British frontier, provided the Company will undertake to construct the whole of the line from Quilon to Tinnevely.

MR. RASBOTHAM, of Messrs. Binny and Company, has been elected to succeed Mr. Turnbull as chairman of the Madras Chamber of Commerce.

THE appointment of Lord Connemara as Grand Master of Freemasons in the Madras Presidency has been confirmed by the Prince of Wales. The installation ceremony, it is believed, will take place in November. It is said that the Duke of Connaught and other distinguished Masons will be present.

THE Secretary of State has, it is stated, declined to sanction the proposed reorganisation of the Revenue establishments of the Madras Presidency for the present, on the ground that the state of the finances is not in a condition to permit of the introduction of a measure of the kind, which would involve, according to the scheme now drawn up, an annual additional charge of Rs. 4,14,772.

BOMBAY.

A PAINFUL case has afflicted Bombay and Poona. Mr. Crawford, C.S., Commissioner of the Central Division, was on Monday, July 16, suspended on charges of corruption. He fled in disguise to Bombay on Tuesday morning, leaving behind a letter to his brother stating that his body would be found in the river under Holkar's Bridge. The river was dragged, but Mr. Crawford arrived in Bombay, and was there arrested by the police. He was taken back to Poona the same day. Sixteen persons, subordinates and others, have been also suspended, and some arrests have been made.

THE first intention of Government was to appoint a commission to deal with the charges preferred against the suspended Commissioner. That course is prescribed under section 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which provides that when a judge or public servant is accused of any offence "no court shall take cognisance of such offence except with the previous sanction of the Government having power to order his removal." It is further provided in the same section that such Government may determine the person by whom, and the manner in which the prosecution of such judge or public servant is to be conducted, and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held." A Commission will only have power to inquire and to report to Government, as was done in the Cambay case. It is directed in Section 21 of Act 37 of 1850, that "after the close of the inquiry the Commissioners shall forthwith report to Government their proceedings under the Commission, and shall send with the record thereof their opinion on each of the articles of charge separately, with such observations as they think fit on the whole case." Section 22 of the same Act gives to the Government the power to "finally pass such orders thereon as appear just, and consistent with its powers in such cases." The issue of a warrant under the 161st Section of the Penal Code, the arrest of the accused, and his liberation on heavy bail, decided the matter in another sense.

THE Vice-Chancellorship of the University of Bombay, which has been vacant since Sir Raymond West resigned it shortly after his nomination to a seat on the Governor's Council, has been conferred by Government on the Rev. Dr. Mackichan, Principal of the Free General Assembly's Institution.

THE well known Dr. Maneckjee Kharshedjee died at Surat on Tuesday night, July 17.

SURGEON-MAJOR C. F. OGILVIE has been permitted to retire from the service.

BURMA.

A RANGOON correspondent asks "what the Burmese police were doing to let a gang of 400 dacoits roam about the country" and tear up the railway line near Prome; and, really, as the question seems difficult to answer, it ought to be put. The entire country is patrolled by police ostentatiously suspicious of all persons and on the look-out for the smallest bands of marauders; and it is, therefore, hard to explain how an army of no less than 400 dacoits were pursuing their avocation unmolested in the midst of the police line of patrol and along the railway. Considering that within the last six years ten lakhs of rupees have been spent in excess on the police, the above result is certainly disappointing. But it would seem that the working of the Burmese police is generally unsatisfactory, their remissness in vigilance being equalled only, if people say true, by their avarice for forbidden gains. It is said that they extort money largely, and harass the recalcitrant. The Burma papers are much discontented at this state of things, and believe that the police could not be worse. In this state of public opinion inquiry and reform are absolutely necessary. The comparatively private and personal malpractice of unlawful extortions might be overlooked where there are counterbalancing merits in a creditable performance of work. Where this is wanting the police become an unmixed evil, especially in a country which has enough to do to grapple with external difficulties, and most needs efficient servants to assist it.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

ON the 4th July the station-master at Nowshera was shot while sleeping outside on the railway platform. He now lies in a precarious condition. Pathans are suspected of having committed the crime.

A NARROW escape of a serious railway accident lately occurred on the North-Western Railway. A covered waggon and an inspection carriage were blown by the wind from the Khushab Railway Station-yard on the line, and came into collision with a passenger train between the Khushab and Dhak North-West Railway Stations. No fatal results occurred. The inspection carriage and the engines of the passenger train were considerably damaged, however.

A SAD accident occurred at Agra on July 20. Mr. Fred C. Ellis, a gentleman connected with the Press, was out shooting with some friends, when one of them, who was out in an opposite direction, fired, and the ball accidentally hit Mr. Ellis, entering the thigh just below the hip. Mr. Ellis displayed great fortitude in having walked nearly a mile after meeting with the accident, but now he is in a precarious state. He has a large circle of friends, with whom, being of a kind, lively disposition, he is deservedly popular, and great anxiety is being felt for him.

SURGEON HERMAN THIELE, Medical Staff, died of enteric fever on 7th July, at Lady Roberts's Hospital, Murree. This promising young officer only arrived in India in the spring of 1887, and since then has held the appointment of Staff Surgeon of Peshawur. He contracted his fatal illness on his way back from Thundiani, where he had been on short leave of absence.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL SIR JAMES BRIND.—We record with regret the death of General Sir James Brind on the 3rd inst., after a short illness. General Brind entered the Royal (Bengal) Artillery in 1827, and was consequently sixty-one years in the service. Throughout this long period he evinced an earnestness of purpose, a devotion to duty, and a regard for the interests of all who served under him that gained for him the warm and undeviating respect of the army. Conspicuously at the memorable siege of Delhi in 1857, where he commanded for a great part of the time the besieging batteries, he animated all under him by a noble example and an almost reckless exposure of himself to danger. It was indeed said of "Brind of the Batteries" that he never slept. "We talk of Victoria Crosses," wrote a distinguished officer to one of the historians of the Indian Mutiny, "but Brind is a man who should be covered with them from head to foot." "On all occasions," wrote another of the foremost of our Delhi heroes, "the exertions of this noble officer were indefatigable. He was always to be found where his presence was most required; and the example he set to his officers and men was beyond all praise. A finer soldier I never met." It can easily be imagined that under a leader of this character men worked prodigies of valour, unshaken and undismayed by the trials and hardships of a protracted siege. In the earlier part of his career Sir James Brind was employed under Sir Sydney Cotton against the tribes on the North-West Frontier; and he took a leading part, after the siege of Delhi, in the active operations which took place in Oude and Rohilkund, and in the pursuit of the noted Feroze Shah towards Central India. Here his services again gained for him repeated mentions in despatches and the thanks of Government. The late General served for some years after this as Inspector-General of Artillery in India, and commanded a division of the Army in Bengal from 1873 to 1878, when he retired from active military life. He was created a K.C.B. in 1869 and a G.C.B. in 1884. He leaves a widow and several children, some of whom, by a former marriage, are in the army.

MAJOR-GENERAL WILLIAM WILTSHIRE LYNCH, C.B., who was only appointed to the command of a Division of the Bengal Army in March, died suddenly of cholera, at Allahabad, on Friday last. General Lynch had a most distinguished record, including some of the severest actions connected with the Indian Mutiny. After taking part in the Persian Campaign with the Scind Horse, he joined Havelock's force on its first taking the field in India, and was present in every battle fought by that column. At Cawnpore he had a horse shot under him, and was several times in imminent peril. Appointed to the command of a troop of Volunteer Cavalry after the recapture of Cawnpore, he subsequently served as second in command of those auxiliary troops with the Oude Field Force, and was present with it in all its actions and skirmishes until the final relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde. Having been severely wounded he was honourably mentioned in despatches, thanked by the Governor-General in Council, received the medal with clasps and grant of a year's service for Lucknow. During the epidemic of yellow fever in Bermuda in 1864 he was in command of his battalion, and was mentioned in Horse Guards General Orders for conspicuous and praiseworthy conduct. He was for some time in command of the West Surrey Regimental District at Guildford, and afterwards held an appointment as Assistant Adjutant-General at Aldershot, which he only vacated five months ago on appointment to a divisional command in Bengal.

COLONEL NEVILLE HILL SHUTE, who died on Wednesday at Clayfield, near Southampton, was one of the few officers recently surviving who took part in the Persian Campaign of 1857. During the following year he served with his regiment, the old 64th, in Bengal and the North-West Provinces, and played a prominent part in suppressing the Mutiny. With Havelock's column he was present in the actions of Futteh-pore Aoung, Pandoo Nuddee, Cawnpore, Onao, the two affairs at Buseerut Gunge, and all the conflicts that were crowned by the first relief of Lucknow. He was engaged in three sorties, two of which he commanded, and for these services he was specially thanked by the Governor-General in Council. He took part in the defence of Cawnpore and the defeat of the Gwalior mutineers. In the actions that followed, from Kala Nuddee to the capture of Bareilly and the final victory at Mahomdir, he was equally conspicuous for gallantry and skill. These qualities were scantily recognised by the brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel and a year's service for Lucknow. Colonel Shute retired from the Service just twenty-five years ago, and died at the age of sixty-nine, so that all his brilliant services were performed during a period of less than a quarter of a century, and he abandoned a military career at a time when his experience might have been most valuable to the country.

HON. LIEUTENANT-COLONEL THOMAS SMITH, late 37th Regiment, who died on the 2nd inst., at Forest Hill, S.E., in his seventy-ninth year, entered the Army as Ensign in 1847, received his Lieutenant's commission three years after. He served with the 97th Regiment at the siege of Sebastopol from November 20th, 1854, receiving for his services a medal with clasp and the Turkish medal. He also took part in the suppression of the mutiny of the Bengal Army, being present at the siege and capture of Lucknow, for which he received a medal with clasp. The late officer was made Paymaster in 1854, and was placed upon half-pay in 1866.

CLERKS IN THE INDIAN SECRETARIATS.

The following new rules for the regulation of appointments in the Secretariat clerical service of the Government of India and attached offices have been issued :—

The Secretariat clerical service shall for the future be separated into an upper and a lower division—the former comprising all appointments the pay (or, in the case of appointments carrying progressive pay, the minimum pay) of which is Rs. 200 and upwards; the latter, all appointments (other than those of copyists, to whom these rules do not apply) the pay of which is below that sum. No clerk will be entitled to promotion from the lower to the upper division as a matter of course or otherwise than in accordance with these rules.

The head of the office concerned shall have an absolute power of selection in the case of appointments of registrars of offices, superintendents of branches, head assistants, personal assistants, or appointments involving the control or supervision over divisions of an office. The mode of recruiting one-half of the remaining appointments in the upper and two-thirds of all the appointments in the lower division shall be by open competition. The rest of the appointments in the upper and lower divisions may be filled in accordance with Rules 12 and 13.

An examination of candidates for the Secretariat clerical service will be held at Calcutta, Allahabad, and Lahore, and at such other places as may hereafter be appointed, in January of each year. The examination at Allahabad will be confined to persons domiciled in the North-West Provinces, Oudh, the Central Provinces, Rajputana, and Central India, and that at Lahore to persons domiciled in the Punjab and Biluchistan. The arrangements for the examinations will be made by the Board of Examiners, Fort William, who will be assisted by paid Examiners, and act in communication with the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department. Before the examination commences a distinguishing number will be given by the Secretary to the Board of Examiners to each candidate with which he will mark each of his papers of answers.

The number of candidates to be selected by the Examiners for each division will be notified in the Gazette of India by the Home Department on or before the 31st October. This number will be determined in communication with the heads of the officers concerned, with the heads of number of vacancies existing or estimated as likely to occur within the course of the following year, plus a margin of 10 per cent for casualties. One-half the number of vacancies offered will be reserved for candidates in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Punjab and the Central Provinces, Rajputana, Central India, and Biluchistan, provided that a sufficient number of duly qualified candidates to fill these appointments appear from those territories.

Every candidate, whether selected by examination or nominated, who receives an appointment, will be on probation for twelve months; and if at any time during that period, or at its close, his work is not considered satisfactory by the head of the office in which he is employed, he will receive his discharge, and will have no claim to gratuity or compensation on that account. This rule will not apply to clerks selected for the upper division who were previously permanent clerks in the lower division of the office in question, nor to clerks selected from Government offices: but such clerks may, if found unfit for the higher grade, be relegated to their former appointments, or, so far as may be, to appointments of corresponding emoluments. To provide for such cases, arrangements should be made by which promotions in the place of the transferred clerk should be sub. pro tem. until the latter have passed their period of probation.

The above rules will apply to the Secretariat Offices of the Government of India, except the Foreign Department and the Department of Finance and Commerce whenever the latter fills vacancies by recruitment of officers already holding clerical appointments in any of the account offices subordinate to it. When the Department of Finance and Commerce does not recruit in this manner the rules will apply. They will also apply to the offices of:—

- The Sanitary Commissioners with the Government of India.
- The Surgeon-General with the Government of India.
- The Director-General of the Post-Office of India.
- The Northern India Salt Revenue Department.
- The Inspector-General of Forests.
- The Director-General of Telegraphs.
- The Accountant-General, Public Works Department.
- The Consulting Engineers for Railways.
- The Surveyor-General of India.
- The Superintendent of the Geological Survey.
- The Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.
- The Accountant-General, Military Department.
- Military Account Offices in the Bengal Presidency.
- The Commissary General-in-Chief.
- The Commissary-Generals of Circles.
- The Director-General of Ordnance in India.
- The Inspector-General of Ordnance.
- The Surgeon-General, Her Majesty's Forces.

The office establishments of the several arsenals, depots, and factories in Bengal, and to such other Imperial or Provincial offices as may hereafter be notified as having adopted them.

Copies of these rules may be obtained on application at the office of the Home Department, Calcutta.

THE HYDERABAD (DECCAN) INQUIRY.

The printed report of the Select Committee appointed to inquire into the formation and promotion of the Hyderabad (Deccan) Mining Company (Limited), the circumstances under which the concession was obtained from the Government of Hyderabad, and the subsequent operations on the London Stock Exchange, by persons interested in the company, was issued on Wednesday. It was elicited by the Committee that about the time of the first statutory meeting of the company on November 26, 1886, Mr. R. Stanton Evans began to sell shares for Mr. W. C. Watson, one of the concessionaires, on terms arranged, and from that time transactions on the Stock Exchange were frequent. "Of the 85,000 shares issued as fully paid, about 55,000 were sold to the public. There are now about 700 shareholders. The prices of the shares ranged during the period between September, 1886, and April, 1888, from 13½ to 5½. Mr. Watson, by dealing with his fourth of the 85,000 shares, and by transactions in buying and selling shares in the market, had at the time when he gave his evidence realised £209,300, out of which he had paid in brokerage and commissions, £20,829, and he still retained 5,559 shares. Mr. Watson had also given away many shares." No application for a settlement or quotation was made to the Committee of the Stock Exchange, and no prospectus of the company was issued. The method adopted by the sellers was apparently not to place before the public specific information, but to "stimulate interest by affording hints and glimpses of the magnitude of the enterprise." A printed memorandum regarding the company contained a description of the scheme very favourably coloured. "It will be observed, by reference to this memorandum," says the report, "that no statement is made in it which would convey to the public that the 85,000 shares had been passed to the concessionnaires under the circumstances mentioned above. The memorandum was headed 'Capital £1,000,000 in 100,000 shares of £10 each, 85,000 being fully paid, and 15,000 on which £5 per share is paid.' The company have been carrying on mining operations in the Singareni coal-fields to the extent of raising about 150 tons a week. They have also been prospecting for diamonds and for gold. Five diamonds have been found in some refuse. No gold has been produced." The Committee express no opinion as to the prospects of the enterprise. Reference is made to the purchase in June, 1887, on the Stock Exchange for the Nizam's Government of 8,750 fully paid, and 3,750 shares £5 paid. This purchase was rescinded after the Committee commenced its sittings. Abdul Huq was commissioned to purchase 10,000 shares at or under £12 per share, and he carried out the transaction in concert with Mr. Watson. "What was done, in fact, was that Abdul Huq received the price and handed over to the Nizam so many of the shares which had fallen to himself in the distribution of the shares of the concessionnaires." Abdul Huq, in consideration of this transfer received £131,250 of moneys belonging to the Government of Hyderabad. In July, 1887, Lord Lawrence became a director of the company. He did so in consequence of a request made to him by the directors to represent the Nizam. There can be no doubt, the Committee say, that Lord Lawrence in all his dealings and connections with the company acted in perfect good faith.

The report goes on to say:—

"The history of the Hyderabad (Deccan) Company shows that the concession has in fact proved highly lucrative to the concessionnaires. They have appropriated to themselves and dealt with £850,000 of the capital of the company; but the question remains how the 85,000 shares out of the total of 100,000 shares have passed into the hands of the concessionnaires."

"It has to be admitted that concessionnaires who hand over a concession to a company are entitled to benefit to a greater or less extent by the transaction. In this case Mr. Watson urges that the concessionnaires were entitled to obtain from the Nizam's Government a large profit, and contends that the concession in its terms admitted of the 85,000 shares being appropriated by the concessionnaires as such profit."

"The previous history of the railway scheme is referred to in support of this view. It was suggested by Mr. Watson that in the matter of the railway he had done the Nizam's State service, for which he had not been adequately remunerated, but after considering the services performed by the concessionnaires in promoting the railway company, and the amount received by them for such services, your Committee consider that no such deficiency in remuneration existed as to entitle the concessionnaires to obtain the mining concession."

"The Committee desire to abstain from expressing any opinion on the legal rights or liabilities of the Nizam, the concessionnaires, the Company, or individual shareholders. But your Committee are of opinion that the concessionnaires have used the concession for the purpose of realising great gains not intended to be conferred on them, and that this has been done to the injury of the State from which they obtained the concession with the assistance of their partner, Abdul Huq."

"It appears to your Committee that throughout the transactions which occurred before the granting of the concession no one, excepting Abdul Huq and the concessionnaires, ever contemplated that the concessionnaires should be entitled to appropriate the £850,000 of capital, or any part of it, to themselves. A first issue of 15,000 shares was contemplated, leaving the remainder of the capital to be issued from time to time, as the development of the gold and diamond fields might require. No one acting in the interests of the Nizam seems to have addressed himself to the question how much the concessionnaires should receive. Mr. Cordery's statement was, "that if it had been pointed out to the Government of India that the wording of the contract was such as to admit of such a transaction taking place, they would probably have pointed out to the Nizam's Government, and have suggested that the Nizam's legal advisers, who were responsible for drafting the contract, should look to that point."

"The fact that the concessionnaires were placed in a position to claim to appropriate to themselves £850,000 of the capital of the Company was the indirect effect of a set of provisions which were carefully considered with another object."

"In support of the course which has been taken the concessionnaires rely on a clause in the concession which has throughout the negotiations stood in precisely the same terms, except as hereinafter mentioned, as when the concession was signed. It was originally settled by Messrs. White, Borrett and Co., under the advice of eminent counsel. Under the original suggestion the first issue of capital was to amount to £500,000; such amount was afterwards altered to £150,000. This change was discussed with reference only to the amount which would be required for the immediate operators of the Company, and without any reference to the effect the change would have on the remuneration of the con-cessionnaires. But the concession at no time contained any direct provision as to what was or was not to be done with the balance of unissued capital. Thus, £150,000 only being necessary for application to the coal-field, and the rest of the capital not being immediately required, unfortunately no express provisions appear to have been inserted in the concession as safeguards to protect the other £850,000 of the capital from being immediately dealt with."

"The concession having been framed under the above circumstances, the Directors of the Company entered into the agreement under which the £850,000 of capital was transferred to the concessionnaires. The responsibility for this transfer rests with the directors, but it is established that no investigations were made as to the value of the property so transferred, and it was contended on behalf of the Company, and alleged by Mr. Batten, the Chairman of the Company, that it was not the duty of anyone to inquire whether the consideration given by the concessionnaires to the Company was or was not of a value equal to the sum received by them. It may be doubtful what was the value of the rights under the concession transferred to the Company, but whatever that value may be no steps were taken to ascertain it."

"It appears to your Committee that the transfer of the 85,000 shares to the concessionnaires under the circumstances mentioned above has affected, and will affect, injuriously the interests of the State of Hyderabad. If 85,000 shares still remained unpaid, capital could, from time to time, be obtained by further issues of shares beyond "the first issue" of 15,000. Such capital so obtained would, in the main, be expended within the State of Hyderabad, which would necessarily be benefited by such expenditure. But the money which the Nizam and the Government of Hyderabad seem to have regarded as destined to develop the Deccan has passed into the possession of the concessionnaires and their associates. The whole of the shares having been issued, the means of obtaining capital beyond the £1,000,000, the now capital of the Company, can only be regarded as of a speculative character, dependent upon the estimation in which the enterprise may hereafter be regarded by the public, from whom the future means of working the gold and diamond fields will have to be sought."

The Report concludes as follows:—

"The circumstances under which the mining concession was obtained show that serious risks to the interests of Native States attend the direct access of London speculators to Native Ministers. In the present case, the initial arrangements were made between Abdul Huq and the concessionnaires; and it was after a settled draft had been prepared under his instruction that particulars were considered by British officials. When the matter came before the Resident, the Government of India, and the Secretary for India, no one of them was aware of the circumstances relating to Abdul Huq which called for a peculiar vigilance; and, apart from this, it is clear that the terms of the concession were subjected to less complete review than they would have gone through had they not been already agreed upon by the accredited negotiator of the Nizam. This result is to be regretted; and it is apparent that if more effective and direct British assistance and advice had been given to the Government of Hyderabad the events that have occurred could not have taken place."

"It appears to your Committee that so long as the Government of India interferes with the proceedings of a Native State in business matters, such as granting an important concession, great care should be taken fully to fulfil the responsibility thus assumed; and that there will be considerable difficulty in discharging such duty by the Indian Government if the communications between the Government of the Native State and speculators be allowed to be of a direct character."

THE question of the grant of language leave to officers to study elsewhere than in Presidency towns having been under consideration, it has been ruled that in future officers may be granted leave for the purpose of studying the Native language to any station at the discretion of the Commander-in-Chief or of Madras and Bombay, the grant of the leave being in all other respects subject to existing rules and regulations. In all cases of officers serving with local regiments the discretion will be vested in the authorities by whom the leave is ordinarily granted.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—AUGUST 8.

THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. LABOUCHERE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he could state why the Bombay Government had refused to sanction the payment of the money voted by the directors of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company to be paid to Messrs. Dewey and Bedford, both Eurasians, viz., Rs. 8,000 and Rs. 6,000 respectively, as compensation for expenses incurred in defending accusations brought by the Railway Frauds Commission in 1877 and 1878, in which both were honourably acquitted and reinstated in their situations?

Sir J. GORST: I am informed that the reason why the Government of Bombay ten years ago withheld its sanction to the payments in question from funds under the control of the State was the conduct of Messrs. Dewey and Bedford in failing to repress malpractices of which they ought to have been cognizant, and the other circumstances of the case fully justified their prosecution in India by the agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company.

Mr. LABOUCHERE asked whether, in view of the Queen's proclamation on assuming the direct government of India in 1858, assuring all her subjects equal rights of employment for all offices they were fitted to fill, the distinction now existing in the Great India Peninsula Railway between Eurasian and European would be continued, the distinction being that there were two classes of employés, Eurasian and European guards, who did identically the same work, but who were classed, both as regards pay and privileges, on entirely different footings.

Sir J. GORST: The question seems to be economical rather than political, the object of the railway company being to obtain the services of the different classes of officers they require at the cheapest rate. But I understand the subject is receiving the attention of the board of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company.

THE REPORT OF THE HYDERABAD (DECCAN) COMMITTEE.

Mr. ISAACSON asked the Secretary to the Treasury whether he would make an application to the proprietor of the Times newspaper for the name of the person or persons who communicated to that paper the contents of the report of the Hyderabad (Deccan) Committee before the said report had been officially placed upon the table, in order that the Government might deal with the offenders.

Mr. JACKSON: The paragraph in question appeared in other papers as well as the Times, and seems to have emanated from the Press Association. I do not think that it would be for the public interest that the steps which are being taken in the matter should be published.

AUGUST 9.

MEDICAL INSTRUCTION IN INDIA.

Dr. TANNER asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the course of special instruction and ultimate examination which was proposed "to be given better and at less expense" in India would be afforded in each or in a selected Presidency; what existing hospital or hospitals in India would be selected; what would be the estimated cost of providing such selected teaching centre or centres with a teaching staff, teaching plant, hygienic laboratory, and museum, &c., such as had been supplied at Netley; whether at present India paid only her share of the cost of the Army Medical School, according to the number of men under tuition, the War Office being charged with the remainder; whether the advice of Sir Joseph Fayrer, physician to the Council of India, had been asked on the proposed change; whether future entrance examinations for the service in question would be conducted by the same staff and in the same place as heretofore; whether the intended hypothetical economy would entail an immediate and continued increase of expenditure, and whether any corresponding advantage would be attained; and whether such expenditure was proposed to be imposed on the already overburdened taxpayers of India.

Sir J. GORST: The questions (except four and five) relate to matters upon which, as I informed the House on July 26, no decision has yet been arrived at.

CANTONMENT REGULATIONS (INDIA).

Mr. J. STUART asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he had any further information to communicate to the House with respect to the action of the India Office, or of the Government of India in consequence of the resolution of this House of the 5th of June last; and whether he could inform the House if the cantonment regulations as to prostitution were still in force or not in the various military stations in India.

Sir J. GORST: The Secretary of State has no further information to communicate to the House with reference to the repeal of the Contagious Diseases Act and amendment of the Cantonment Acts. The Secretary of State has given such executive directions to the Government of India as will prevent the revival of the regimental system, which has already been wholly abolished; and the cantonment regulations hitherto in force are to be so revised as to put a stop to the objectionable incidents in their administration.

INLAND EMIGRATION ACT (INDIA).

Mr. J. STUART asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he was aware that the following among other provisions existed in the Inland Emigration Act, 1882:—That persons, male and female, of sixteen years of age were held by this Act to be competent to make a contract practically selling their liberty for a period of five years; that after a coolie had been registered he had no liberty to change his mind, but was liable to imprisonment if he refused to proceed to or remain in the tea garden, to which he could be brought back on arrest without warrant; that the coolie in many instances might be transferred from one tea garden to another without his consent; that in case of illness, if his absence from work was longer than thirty days, the time he was absent beyond the thirty days was added to the term of his contract; that a system of fines and imprisonment for absence from work, which might much exceed the amount of his wages, was imposed under the Act; whether the Government of India contemplated the amendment of any of these provisions; and whether he was aware that as a fact the provisions of the Act for the protection of the coolie, whereby he ought to be individually examined as to his willingness to make the contract before registration, and other protective provisions were often neglected.

Sir J. GORST: The epitome which the hon. member has made of sections 11, 121, 142, 150, 162, 170, and 171 of the Act is not in all respects accurate. The Secretary of State is not aware of any Bill amending the Act being at present before the Legislative Council of India. The Secretary of State is not aware of the provisions of the Act for the protection of the coolie being often neglected.

COOLIES IN ASSAM.

Mr. J. STUART asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the attention of the India Office had been drawn to a memorial addressed to the Government of India, dated Calcutta, April 12, 1888, from the secretary to the Indian Association of Calcutta, requesting the appointment of a Commission to inquire into the working of the Inland Emigration Act of 1882 and the unrepealed Act 13 of 1859, and giving grounds, based on the actual treatment of the coolies in the tea gardens of Assam, for the appointment of that Commission; whether the India Office had received a copy of this memorial; and what practical steps were contemplated for granting the prayer of the memorial and for putting an end to the abuses indicated.

Sir J. GORST: If the hon. member will refer to an answer given by me on the 6th inst. to the hon. member for Flintshire he will find that it replies to this question.

COLONEL MARSHALL OF HYDERABAD.

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR asked the Under-Secretary for India whether his attention had been called to an article in the St. James's Gazette of July 16th last, entitled "Another Hyderabad Scandal," which gave a quotation from Stubbs' List of June 30th, showing that in the bankruptcy of H. Wathen and Son, wholesale tea dealers, of Fenchurch-street, E.C., Colonel Marshall, Hyderabad, India, was put down as an unsecured creditor for £5,250 in the schedule of the separate estate of William Hulbert Wathen; whether Colonel Marshall was private secretary and confidential adviser to the Nizam, and William Hulbert Wathen was Colonel Marshall's brother-in-law; whether, when the Hyderabad Prime Minister was in this country representing the Nizam at the Jubilee ceremonies, Colonel Marshall became for the time being virtually Minister of Hyderabad, and in that capacity took upon himself the responsibility of appointing Mr. Wathen Agent of the Hyderabad State; whether with the appointment a new procedure was instituted, Mr. Wathen being supplied with funds in advance, £6,000 were thereupon remitted to Mr. Wathen from the public and private funds of the Nizam, of which amount Mr. Wathen only expended £750, dealing with the whole £6,000 as an unsecured loan to himself personally, for the balance of which—namely £5,250, as above shown—Colonel Marshall was now ranked on his separate estate as a creditor; whether the unsecured debts of the firm were put down at £26,121 and of the separate estate of Mr. Wathen at £6,250, while the net assets of the firm were quoted at £3,177 and of the separate estate as £512 only; whether the above allegations and facts were known to the India Office or to the Government of India when it was arranged that Colonel Marshall should accompany or precede the Hyderabad Minister on his visit to Simla to meet Lord Dufferin about the 19th of last month; and what steps would be taken by Her Majesty's Government or the Government of India in dealing with Colonel Marshall.

Sir J. GORST: The Secretary of State has no means of knowing whether the statements in the St. James's Gazette are correct. The matter is one which it is the function of the Viceroy to deal with in the first instance.

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR asked whether he was to understand that when such a charge was made against an officer in the position of Colonel Marshall the Secretary of State did not consider it his duty to call attention to it?

Sir J. GORST said that the Secretary of State was not in the habit of calling the attention of the Viceroy to paragraphs in the newspapers. ("Oh, oh.")

Mr. KELLY asked whether the Government were not sending Colonel Marshall back to Hyderabad?

Sir J. GORST said that question was a matter which was entirely within the functions of the Viceroy, and a matter with which the Secretary of State had in the first instance no right to interfere.

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR asked was he, then, to understand that when a serious charge was made against a public official the fact was not considered by the Secretary of State a sufficient reason for ordering an inquiry or suggesting an inquiry to the Viceroy?

Sir J. GORST said he did not think the hon. member understood the principle on which India was administered. The person responsible for the administration of India and for the conduct of Indian officials was the Viceroy; it was only the Viceroy who could take such a matter into consideration and pronounce a decision upon it; and it was not in accordance with the practice of the Government of India that the Secretary of State should interfere.

AUGUST 10.

CHARGE OF LETTERS TO INDIA.

Mr. HENNIKER HEATON asked the Postmaster-General whether it was in contemplation to reduce the charge on letters to India and the East from 5d. per letter to 2½d., the latter amount being charged from France, Germany, and other Continental countries to English possessions in India, &c.; and whether it was his intention to give English and Indian correspondents the benefit of the £100,000 saved on the Indian mail contract this year.

Mr. RAIKES: I am very glad to see my hon. friend back to his Parliamentary duties, and that he has signalled his re-appearance by giving notice of a fire of questions. In answer to this question I have to say that it is not in contemplation to reduce the postage on letters to India and the East in the manner suggested in the first part of the hon. member's question. The saving referred to in the second part of the question is not a profit, but merely a reduction in the amount of a heavy loss. I may refer the hon. member to the reply which I gave on the 14th of February last to a similar question asked by the hon. member for Oldham.

THE HYDERABAD (DECCAN) COMPANY.

Mr. KELLY asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the statements made with reference to Mr. Furnivall on page ix. of the report from the Select Committee on East India (Hyderabad (Deccan) Mining Company), to the effect that Mr. Furnivall, who was recently in the employ of the Government of India, but had now retired on a pension, received from Mr. W. C. Watson 500 shares in the Hyderabad (Deccan) Company "for nothing;" that he sold those shares at £11 each, and therefore realised £5,500 for them; whether Mr. Furnivall would be required to refund such sum of £5,500 to the shareholders of the Hyderabad (Deccan) Company; and whether, in the event of his refusing to refund such moneys, the Indian Government would take steps to secure the amount being repaid to those shareholders out of the pension payable to Mr. Furnivall.

Sir J. FERGUSON (for Sir J. Gorst) said: The attention of the Secretary of State has been called to the statements respecting Mr. Furnivall in the report of the Select Committee on the Hyderabad Mining Company. As, however, Mr. Furnivall had retired from the service of the Government of India before the transactions in question took place, it is not within the competence of the Secretary of State to take any action in the matter.

Mr. KELLY asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the statements made with reference to Mr. Hughes on page ix. of the report from the Select Committee on East India (Hyderabad Deccan) Mining Company, to the effect that Mr. Hughes, a Government official in India, one of the superintendents of the Survey, was nevertheless allowed by that Government to be employed and paid by the Hyderabad (Deccan) Company to ascertain the value of the concession obtained from the Nizam, that he received from Mr. W. C. Watson, the promoter and director of the company, shares to the value of £3,200, only paying £1,000 for them, and that that transaction amounted, according to the statement of Mr. Watson, to a gift by him to Mr. Hughes, who, in return, was to "work and throw his whole energies into it"; and whether Mr. Hughes would be required to refund that sum of £2,200 to the shareholders of the Hyderabad (Deccan) Company.

Sir J. FERGUSON (for Sir J. Gorst) said: The Secretary of State has noticed the statement, to which the attention of the Government of India will at once be called. Mr. Hughes's services were lent to the Deccan Company, they arranging for his remuneration. During his employment under the company no salary was paid him from the Indian Treasury.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.

Mr. SUMMERS asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the statements in the Native Press of India, which were borne out by the reports of the Chief Commissioner and Sanitary Commissioner of Assam, that the abuses to which the coolies were subjected in many instances amounted to conditions of slavery, and were certainly such as to demand immediate attention.

Sir J. FERGUSON (for Sir J. Gorst) said: The Secretary of State has noticed statements of the kind referred to, but he cannot admit their accuracy. As stated to the House on Aug. 6, the Secretary of State requested the Government of India in November, 1886, to watch narrowly the working of the Emigration Act of 1882. He does not consider it necessary to issue further instructions to the Government of India, as he is satisfied that the Government of India is alive to the importance of the subject, and has now under consideration the memorial of the Indian Association.

THE first feeling at the outcome of [the Rukhmibai case is one of sincere gratification, observes the Pioneer. No one can help rejoicing that the lady who has displayed so much courage and intelligence is at last relieved of the odious importunity to which she has so long been subjected. The relief is cheap at Rs. 2,000, and the only pity, so far as concerns this aspect of the case, is that the measure of Mr. Dadajee Bhikajee was not taken sooner, in which event Rukhmibai might have been saved much vexation and annoyance. On the other hand, looked at apart from the persons implicated and with reference only to the legal and moral principles involved, the upshot of the case can scarcely be regarded as satisfactory or final. So far as we can make out from our telegram, the Chief Court has affirmed the ruling of the Lower Court, but has suffered the parties concerned to make a mutual agreement whereby that ruling will be partially circumvented. Rukhmibai is still declared to be the wife of Dadajee according to Hindoo law; but, in consideration of the payment of a sum of money, Dadajee agrees to forego for ever all rights and claims belonging to him as husband. From the point of view of Western thought, this is not going far enough; from the Hindoo standpoint, it is going too far. We have introduced the penalty common in English law for breach of promise of marriage, but there has been no breach of promise; or if there has, there has been breach of more than that there has been rupture of actual union. In the eyes of the old school of Hindoos Rukhmibai will now be looked upon with just the same abhorrence as if she had paid no 2,000 rupees. Under Hindoo law she could not have been coerced into living with Dadajee, so that all English law has done is to get her mulcted in a sum of money and save her from actual prosecution by the man who may still call himself her husband, without shielding her in any way from the wide consequences of caste ordinance. At the same time the fact of Rukhmibai having got rid of her engagements to Dadajee under the sanction of the English Court will probably rouse quite as much resentment among the Hindoo standfasts as if an Act had been passed at once declaring all such marriages null and void. Obviously matters cannot rest here.

THE Pioneer says:—Ever since the days of the American War, when the Berari kunbi put silver tires on his cart wheels, the thriving town of Amraoti has been hard up for water. It was dry work in the little Cottonopolis every hot weather. Finally, after twelve years of incubation a scheme for water-supply was perfected and brought to the very witching point, at which the water was to begin to run. A big reservoir was made at Wadali, and all was ready. The water did begin to run. Owing, however, to want of communication between the Meteorological Office and the Department of Public Works, an extra supply was turned on into the new reservoir. About nine inches of rain fell on the neighbouring hills, and it ran into the tank. Then it all ran out again. But unluckily it scorned the proper channels which had been made pro hac vice by the Department of Public Works, and ran out through the bank at each side. This is very annoying to the good people of Amraoti; and what they now want is an engineer who can build wet-weather water works.

WANT of space obliges us to hold over our usual "Notice of Books" until next week.

MONDAY, AUGUST 13, 1888.

THE INDIAN BUDGET DEBATE.

THERE is no occasion on which history repeats itself so consistently as that of the annual Indian Budget Debate. It has been the same old story for years—this year being no exception to the rule—of the Indian financial Statement being presented to Parliament at the fag-end of a Session to a beggarly account of empty benches. Honourable members, who, as a body, care little or naught for India at any time, were not likely to be much interested about anything concerning it this year, after the weary wranglings which they have had to listen to on the Irish question, and with the prospect of an autumn Session before them. And, perhaps, after all, the honourable members are not so unwise in their generation in leaving the subject of India alone. Their common-sense tells them that it is better not to meddle with matters which they do not understand; and they, perhaps, not unreasonably hold that as there is a Secretary of State assisted by a number of experienced Councillors appointed to look after India, that is a duty which may safely be left to them to fulfil. How it is fulfilled is a matter with which few honourable members care to trouble themselves. Mr. Bradlaugh on Thursday evening, filled with much zeal and little knowledge, endeavoured to do some mischief with the very best intentions. Having got hold of that well-ridden hobby, the "grievances" of the Natives of India, he moved for an Inquiry into our system of administration in India, and asked for a larger employment of Natives in Government service, and for their representation in the Legislative Council. Mr. Bradlaugh evidently looks upon India as a "nation" united, but discontented under British rule, and only asking for an extension of those liberal institutions which are the boasted possession of Englishmen. Mr. J. M. Maclean, who paid India the doubtful compliment of having found a true friend in Mr. Bradlaugh, very easily blew away the froth of all that gentleman's arguments, pointing out that since the Crown took over the Government of India it had been more or less under the daily control of Parliament; and that, as to representative institutions, the people of India had never possessed them. In opposing the proposed Inquiry also, Sir Richard Temple, while recognising the abilities of the Natives of India, insisted upon the necessity of retaining Europeans in the higher positions where energy, firmness, and loyalty were required. Sir Roper Lethbridge, however, thought that the present was an exceptionally favourable opportunity for an inquiry into Indian administration, both in England and in India. This, he said, was demanded in the interests of the Natives, of the officials, and of the people of England. And then Sir Roper wandered away, until called back to the point by the Chairman, to complain of the treatment which Sir Lepel Griffin had sustained at the hands of the Indian Government in not being allowed to prosecute some of his detractors in the Native Press for libel. Then Sir W. Plowden enlarged upon the capability of the Natives of India as administrators; and in view of effecting economies, he moved an amendment, urging that the recommendations of the Commission on the Indian Army—a Commission held nearly ten years ago—be carried out. Sir Roper Lethbridge characterised that Commission and the later Public Service Commission as "shams," and and so the ball of talk went merrily rolling. It was all little better than "excellent fooling" away of time. The chief object of the discussion—the question of the state of India as to her present finances and future prospects regarding income and expenditure was overlaid with a volume of talk, and Sir John Gorst's "statement" was accepted. He himself allowed that but little dependence could be placed upon the accuracy of the figures it contained, but he looked hopefully to the future. It was "deficit" now, as indeed it has been for years past, but "the charges, which have caused the deficit, and have been charged against revenue, are not ordinary charges, but are quite abnormal, and will not, we hope, recur in future years."

And in this hope the few honourable members who remained to listen to the "Statement" joined by voting that everything was "all right."

Could farce go further?

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE post of Minhla, in Upper Burma, is transferred from the Upper to the Lower Burma Command.

COLONEL GERARD, C.B., has arrived in Allahabad to take up his appointment on the local Divisional Staff.

CAPTAIN B. E. SPRAGGE, D.A.A. and Q.M.G., Upper Burma Force, has returned to Mandalay from short leave in England.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the assimilation of the patterns of good conduct badges and chevrons for the Native army of the Bombay Presidency with those for Bengal troops.

COLONEL GERARD, C.B., is likely to be the District Staff Officer of the Allahabad Division when the redistribution of commands takes place. He may, in fact, be transferred from the Sirhind Division to Allahabad forthwith.

A PATTERN of tongas for ambulance work has been sealed. It is similar to the bullock tonga used in the Central Provinces, but differs internally in having portable seats and back rests, to allow of lying-down accommodation for two, or sitting accommodation for four men. It is also provided with rifle rests.

SURGEON-MAJOR H. J. HAZLETT, I. M. S., has been appointed to officiate as Examiner of Medical and Fund Accounts, Madras. Future appointments of Medical and Fund Examiners, like all other appointments to the Military Accounts Department, will be made by the Viceroy.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the continuance of cavalry rates of pay to the British mounted infantry employed in Burma, but are unable to extend the concession to Native mounted infantry. The grant of cavalry rates to the British soldiers is provisional only, up to April 1, 1889.

It has been decided to place the company sergeant-majors of the Bombay Sappers and Miners on the same footing as regards engineer pay as the company sergeant-majors of the H. J. and K skeleton companies of Royal Engineers, and they will be entitled to the "A" rate of engineer pay, viz., two shillings per diem.

THE court-martial which assembled at Dinapore for the trial of Gunner Kelly, charged with the wilful murder of Sergeant-major Burton, of R-3, R.A., did not find it necessary to take any evidence, as the prisoner pleaded guilty. There can be little doubt as to what the sentence will be, considering all the circumstances of the case.

DURING the next six months only three regimental commands in the Native Army will fall vacant in Bengal. Colonel Chapman, 8th B.C., has to go on September 12; and Colonel Kauntze, 17th B.C., vacates on attaining fifty-two years of age on Dec. 19. Colonel Cubitt, V.C., 43rd Gurkhas, completes his seven years of regimental command on Aug. 12. Next year there will be seven vacancies, including those in the Central India Horse and the Hyderabad Contingent.

THE 5th Bengal Cavalry is, says the Civil and Military Gazette, a regiment which the authorities evidently think will stand—or, perhaps, requires—a good deal of work. At the Cavalry Camp at Lawrencepore they were not kept idle; and this year they will march from Mian Mir to Umballa, where they will be joined by the 7th Dragoon Guards and the 1st Bengal Cavalry. From Umballa they will reconnoitre, as if on service in the field, all the way to Delhi; and will then take part in the forthcoming Camp of Exercise. From Delhi they will march to their new quarters at Lucknow. These arrangements will occupy the regiment from the beginning of the cold weather to pretty near the end of it.

THE proposals of the Special Forage Committee for the supply of grass to British cavalry regiments and batteries of artillery in India will be tried as a tentative measure in a British cavalry regiment and battery of Royal Horse Artillery before according general sanction to the adoption of the scheme, which is:—(1) That the grass-cutters of British crops be reduced by two-thirds, and that the Commissariat Department supply the grass required for this portion of each regiment and battery; (2) that for the remaining one-third of the corps transport mules and drivers be substituted for bringing in grass in place of grass-cutters and ponies. The discharge of the grass-cutters and ponies will be carried out gradually, to the extent of one-third of the sanctioned strength of horses, and the reduction of the remainder will be dependent on the preparedness of the Commissariat Department to meet the demands of the corps for fodder.

WE (Pioneer) drew attention some days ago to the hardships endured by a detachment of the Queen's Regiment on their journey during the month of June from Mandalay to Umballa, and we are now glad to hear that an official inquiry has been ordered into the whole circumstances of the case. The military authorities in the Allahabad Division at least are likely to receive praise and not censure for their action in the matter. It appears that the detachment arrived at Allahabad at about half-past ten on the morning of June 13, and, according to the time-bill, they would have started at half-past eleven on the following morning. The heat was terrific, and General Lynch, after consultation with the Deputy Surgeon-General, decided that the men should travel by night. A careful medical examination was made of the whole party, this being considered most necessary, as one death had occurred in the train between Dinapore and Allahabad; and nine men who seemed unfit to travel were ordered to be detained. The journey to Cawnpore was made by the remainder in the greatest comfort. Four second-class carriages were substituted for the third-class in which they had previously been travelling, and sleeping accommodation was thus given for nearly all. Ice was also provided, and the authorities at Cawnpore were warned to make all necessary preparations for the comfort of the detachment on arrival there. These orders were well carried out, and as the railway authorities gave up their waiting-rooms to the men, there was no necessity for a march to the barracks on a June morning. The detachment were again inspected by a medical officer, and as they were all found fit to travel, they were sent on to Umballa. We have given these facts in detail as proving that with a little forethought the whole journey from Calcutta to Umballa might have been rendered far less dangerous to the health of the men than it proved to be. The initial mistake was, of course, in marching the men from Fort William to Howrah station at four o'clock in the afternoon; and the second was in ordering them to travel by day as well as by night. But for the firmness and good sense shown by the military authorities at Allahabad these two blunders might have been followed by consequences even more serious than those we have noticed.

WOUND PENSIONS FOR CIVILIANS.

Section 64 of Chapter XL, Civil Pension Code, has been amended as follows:—

Gratuities and pensions in compensation for wounds received in action, or in the execution of duty otherwise than in action, may in cases in which, under the Army Regulations, India, they would be admissible to officers or men of the regular forces be granted as follows:—

- (a) To officers and men enrolled as volunteers in a force which has a military organisation, who are not entitled under the following rules, or under special conditions of service, to gratuities or pensions at higher rates,—the gratuities or pensions which would be admissible if they held the same rank in the regular forces.
- (b) To an officer of the Covenanted Civil Service or other civil officer wounded while serving (in circumstances justifying his presence) with a military force,—the gratuity or pension admissible to an officer or soldier of the regular forces under the Army Regulations, India, according to the following scale, viz:—

100 "	... a Subadar.
200 "	... a Lieutenant of less than 3 years' service.
300 "	... a Lieutenant of more than 3 years' service.
500 "	... a Captain.
1,000 "	... a Major.
1,500 "	... a Lieutenant-Colonel.
2,000 "	... a Colonel.
2,500 "	... a Major-General.

- (iii) To a Viceroy of India or Governor of a Presidency—the gratuity or pension admissible under the Army Regulations, India, to a Field-Marshal, General, or Lieutenant-General Commanding-in-Chief.
- (c) To a person who is not in the service of Government, while serving as aforesaid (clause b)—a gratuity or pension according to his station in life as compared with an officer of the regular forces.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1888.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Seen from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE
AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterized by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

SPEICIFIC
CHOLERA.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHOEA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE IS THE TRUE PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. Is. 1jd., 2s. 2d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER: J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 & 35, Russell St., W.C.

COUGHS, COLIC, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This caution is necessary, as many persons have purchased by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 15th, 1884.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 17, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 31st July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 29th July; and from Calcutta to the 28th July.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla, July 25th, the Hon. Sir Charles Elliott introduced a Bill to make an addition to the Telegraph Act; the Hon. Mr. Westland introduced a Bill to regulate the payment of duty in respect of salt where there has been an alteration of the duty payable in respect thereof; and the Hon. Sir Charles Aitchison introduced a Bill to repeal certain enactments relating to contagious diseases.

A RUMOUR is abroad to the effect that the Viceroy's plans are changed, and that he will now not leave India until January next. As a matter of fact, his Excellency's programme remains unchanged, and according to this he will leave either during the first or second week in December.

LORD DUFFERIN will make over charge to Lord Lansdowne at Calcutta, where the former will spend a few days prior to the latter's arrival, following the precedent set by Lord Ripon. Lord Lansdowne will probably be sworn in on Saturday, December 8th, and Lord Dufferin take his departure on the following Monday. The date of the Viceroy leaving Simla is not yet fixed, but it will probably be early in November, his Excellency making a short tour en route to Calcutta.

LORD CONNEMARA paid a visit to Seringapatam on July 23rd, in company with the Resident at Mysore and a number of Native officials. His Excellency also visited Bangalore for the purpose of discussing the various schemes for supplying the cantonment with water.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, was to leave Calcutta on a month's tour in North-Eastern Bengal on the 15th of August.

SIR CHARLES ARBUTHNOT, the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Presidency, is expected to visit Secunderabad on the 15th August, and will remain there till about the 29th idem.

GENERAL SIR ROBERT LOWE has arrived in Calcutta.

MR. H. S. CUNNINGHAM, of the Calcutta High Court, who it was believed had retired from service in this country, is understood to be desirous of returning to it.

MR. WARE EDGAR, Chief Secretary to the Bengal Government, still continues to make good progress towards recovery.

A DEPARTMENTAL order has been issued by General Chapman, Quartermaster-General in India, acknowledging the services rendered by Colonel Bell, V.C., Royal Engineers, who is about to vacate the appointment of head of the Intelligence Branch. His extended reconnaissances in Northern China, in South-Western Persia, Mesopotamia, and Armenia, and in Western China and Kashgaria, made since the beginning of 1882, are mentioned in the highest terms of praise; and his administrative work in the Intelligence Branch is specially acknowledged. Colonel Bell, as already stated, will be succeeded by Colonel Woodthorpe, R.E., of the Survey Department.

COLONEL T. CADELL, Commissioner of the Andamans, takes furlough very shortly. Colonel Tucker, Deputy Inspector-General of Police in the Punjab, will act during Colonel Cadell's absence, and Mr. Charles Brownie will probably officiate for Colonel Tucker.

COLONEL HOLROYD, Director of Public Instruction in the Punjab has taken three months' leave.

COLONEL HUGHES-HALLET has left Madras for Simla to assume charge of the office of Judge Advocate-General of India in the absence of Colonel Clementi.

COLONEL J. STEWART, Superintendent of the Saddle and Harness Factory at Cawnpore, will not return to India. Major Baddeley, R.A., who is officiating for him, will obtain the substantive appointment.

DR. RICHARDSON, Sanitary Commissioner, N.W.P., has been granted six months' leave, Dr. Thomson officiating.

COLONEL T. C. WRAY, commanding the Royal Irish Regiment, was found dead in his room at Murree on Sunday morning, July 22. Heart disease was the cause of death.

LIEUTENANT HUBBARD, of the Marine Light Infantry, was killed at Benares on the 21st June by a fall from his horse. The deceased had been attached to the 17th Bengal Infantry as a probationer for the Staff Corps, and was on the point of reverting to his own regiment.

THE charge against Mr. T. M. Kirkwood, the Judge of Patna, is still under consideration, and will probably be disposed of by the Government of India, to whom the Government of Bengal are likely to send it, with the opinion of the High Court.

COLONEL DEANE, Superintendant of Remount Operations, has left Simla on inspection duty. Mr. Ribbentrop, Inspector-General of Forests, has started for Burma to confer with the Chief Commissioner regarding the timber contract granted to the Bombay-Burma Trading Corporation, respecting which questions have recently been put in the House of Commons. Mr. John Eliot, the Meteorological Reporter to Government, has left for Bombay and Calcutta.

WHAT is known as the Jamalpur mela case, in which Mr. Glazier was censured by the Government of Bengal, has been finally disposed of by the Secretary of State. Mr. Glazier failed to induce the India Office to interfere, Lord Cross expressing his entire concurrence with the action of the Government of India, before whom came the decision of the Local Government on Mr. Glazier's memorial appealing against the orders passed in the case.

IN the event of the difference of opinion between the India Office and Indian Government on the subject of the working of the proposed Kalka-Umballa-Delhi Railway not being settled to their mutual satisfaction, the line from Umballa to Kalka only may be undertaken as a State project.

A Gazette of India Extraordinary announces that all notes or stock certificates of the 4½ per cent. loan of 1870 will be discharged at the Public Debt Office of the Bank of Bengal, Calcutta, on October 27th next, on which date interest on such notes will cease. Holders will have the option, which must be exercised before September 1st of transferring the amount of their notes or stock certificates into the 4 per cent. loan of May 1st, 1865, bearing interest from November 1st next.

THE report of the massacre of the Afghan Jirgha by the Shinwaris is confirmed. Out of one hundred and thirty persons composing the Jirgha which the Afghan authorities sent, some fifty were killed outright, and about an equal number were placed in confinement, the remainder effecting their escape. The massacre has created great sensation among the local tribesmen.

A fire broke out on the 19th July at Mandalay, near the old Residency, destroying over one hundred huts and all the minor monastic buildings within the compound, where the high priest of Buddha resides. The estimated loss is about Rs. 40,000.

THE Government of India have just issued a resolution on sanitation in India. It states that the main obstacles which have hitherto impeded sanitary improvements in India has been the ignorance of the masses and their dislike to any change of custom, and want of funds.

THE Government of India is in favour of grants-in-aid being made by provincial Governments for sanitary purposes; and in exceptional cases the Supreme Government will not refuse to consider applications from Local Governments in the interest of sanitary improvement of more than local importance.

ABDUL AZIZ, the late Sultan of Muscat's brother, contemplates an attack on Muscat after the date season.

CRIMES of organised dacoity and highway robberies are fast decreasing in Kattywar.

A COLLECTION of models of Indian ornamental gourds is being made for presentation to the Imperial Institute by the Government of India.

THE Chief Commissioner of Burma arrived at Mandalay on the 20th July from Rangoon, having visited the river stations en route.

UNDER the Registration Act, which comes into force on the 1st of October, soldiers and sailors are exempted from the payment of fees.

A YARKANDI ran amuck in a railway carriage at Malakhera Station, between Delhi and Bandiqui, on the 23rd July. He stabbed a railway porter to death, and severely wounded two Hindoo passengers.

It is stated that a proposal has been made to the Home Government to reduce the number of British troops in India by 3,000.

THE RAJA OF RAMPURA, in the Jhansi Division, has signified, through the Commissioners of his Division, his wish to make a donation of Rs. 8,000 towards the building of a school at Orai in commemoration of the Queen's Jubilee.

Two deaths occurred on board the s.s. Lombardy, on her last voyage from China to Bombay, of sporadic cholera. Mr. Farmer, the chief steward of the vessel, died at Hong Kong, and Mr. Napier, the chief officer of the vessel, died a day after the vessel left the above-mentioned port. The disease was not in any way epidemic.

THE subscriptions to the proposed Bombay "Zoo" now amounts to about half a lakh of rupees.

A SERIOUS affray has taken place in the Victoria Dock between Seedees and Pathans. Several persons were seriously injured.

THE MAHARAJAH OF TRAVANCORE will be invested with the insignia of a Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India by Lord Connemara, on November 21st, in Madras.

OBITUARY.—Lieut. B. J. HUBBARD, R.M.L.I., at Benares.

THE Civil and Military Gazette learns from private sources that several of the Punjab Chiefs are a little anxious that their offers of assistance towards the defence of the Empire should be accepted as soon as possible, in the suggested form of military contingents, well-drilled and officered, to take their place by the side of our Native troops. Of course, so large a modification of the military status quo in the Native States involves a host of political, military, and technical difficulties; and some time must be taken to settle. Still a considerable period has already elapsed; and with Chiefs who are sincerely anxious that their offers should be accepted in this shape—as we have reason to know that several of the Punjab Chiefs really are—the delay is a little disappointing.

NOTES.

THE Overland Mails which left Bombay on July 31 have come to hand here a day sooner than was expected, thanks possibly to fine weather and favourable wind. Credit will of course be claimed for the fine steamer Victoria, whose speed is certainly a matter which the P. and O. Company have good reason to boast of and passengers to congratulate themselves upon. And if we could only believe that the worthy commanders of the Company's magnificent fleet are now anxious to run within the contract time, irrespective of the consumption of coal, we should say that matters have indeed wonderfully changed for the better in the relations between the Company and the public.

ACCORDING to Reuter's telegrams hostilities are imminent between the Tibetans and Colonel Graham's force. It is expected that the former will attack the latter on Tuesday next. How Reuter came by this information we do not pretend to guess, but it is possible that Colonel Graham may take the initiative and give the Tibetans a lesson, which they evidently stand greatly in need of.

For these gentry do not understand the forbearance hitherto shown to them. The order given to Colonel Graham not to cross the frontier, no matter how strong the provocation to do so, was a wise one; but there is a limit to human endurance of all nationalities, and a swift, sharp, and condign punishment of the mischievous, braggart Tibetans will have an excellent effect. And there need not be the slightest fear that such punishment will involve us in any complications whatever with the Emperor of China. That potentate may claim suzerainty over Tibet, but the killing of many Llamas will not rouse him to vengeance. He will exhibit what the Times describes as the physical organism of the Chinese race. "Under the most excruciating provocation he will remain wholly impassive. His nerves will go to sleep as apathetically as the pre-scientific frog in a quarry."

At present the situation is thus described by a correspondent with the force at Gnatong:—

We show no disposition to attack, but [we are making a regular Metz of our entrenched position here at Gnatong, and already it is very nearly as difficult a matter for one of the garrison to get out of camp as it would be for a Tibetan to enter it; and this I believe to be the chief aim of the practice of fortification. Nothing will induce us to "go for" the enemy unless, of course, he interferes with us, and then we will no doubt sweep him off the face of the earth. The Tibetans, on the other hand, employ themselves in the construction of walls and sungars whenever there is a clear space of ground and stones are handy; while occasionally, when the weather is not too damp for a gentle stroll, they venture into the Kapup Valley, and retire precipitately if any of us chance to be looking over the hill. Nobody will declare that this mode of warfare is particularly exciting, but we—and possibly also the Tibetans—console ourselves with the reflection that we are doubtless assisting in the elaboration of some tremendous piece of statecraft. When I return from Sikkim I shall look upon myself as a political of the deepest dye.

A TELEGRAM to the Bombay Gazette says that the notorious Tantia Bhil had a narrow escape of being captured last month after being driven into Holkar's territory. Five constables and several villagers went after him and his followers, but although they are reported as having fired a volley into the pursued they effected no captures beyond some canisters of gunpowder, six guns, twelve swords, and some cooking pots. Tantia escaped into the Betul district, where it is said "he cut off a constable's nose and decamped." A policeman's life in the East has its drawbacks, as in the West.

As the very ancient subject of the ill-treatment of coolies recruited for the tea districts is again cropping up, and will possibly be made the subject of some more humanitarian agitation in England, the following remarks in the Pioneer are worth noticing:—

The question of coolie recruitment for Assam, Cachar, and Sylhet is threshed out at length in the latest report on Inland Emigration. The most noticeable feature is the falling-off in the numbers recruited by the certificated agents, and the large increase of what are technically known as free emigrants—of whom rather more than twenty thousand passed into Assam last year, exclusive of the importation into Cachar and Sylhet. Indeed, it is stated that unlicensed recruiting has almost superseded the work of the contractor, and “is now rapidly ousting that of the Garden sirdars.” It may be true that the position of these unregistered emigrants is, during the journey and on transfer to the scene of their work, the same as that of the Government supervised coolies, but this makes it all the more difficult to see the utility of the distinction between the registered and unregistered coolies established by Act I. of 1883. Both in the interests of clearness, and to put a final stop to the sensational stories of coolie oppression, the entire Act is in need of recasting on more comprehensive, and, at the same time, more practical lines.

THE evidence taken by the Bombay Factory Commission having been published, it was not likely that the Radical Press here would refrain from expressing holy horror at what it is pleased to call “revelations.” The Star, which would stir up strife and disloyalty in India as it encourages them in Ireland, is particularly shocked at what it declares to be a state of things which is a scandal and disgrace to the Government that permits it. It is horrified to find that Indian factories are open on Sundays, and it mourns over the circumstance that only fifteen holidays are given throughout the year to the employed. This is the first time that we have heard as an Indian “grievance” the want of “holidays.” It is certainly not an Irish grievance, and it used not, in our time in India, to be an Indian one.

The Star calls attention to the fact that work in Indian factories begins often at four o'clock in the morning. This is “slavery.” The Star knows too much. A Factory Act was no doubt wanted in India, but we can spare the comments of the would-be friends of the Natives here concerning it.

WHO composes the wonderful letters that Rukmibai has been in the habit of sending to the Indian Press? Here is her latest effusion, addressed to the editor of a Madras paper:—

If you, Sir, search Hindoo society you will find thousands of girls situated as I am. Parents, as you and your readers know, have the arrangement of marriages. The chief contracting parties have not a word to say in the matter; unhappiness is not unfrequently the result. Couples are often unequally yoked. Winter and spring, ignorance and enlightenment, amiability and boorishness are often linked together. The powers placed in the hands of parents are often abused. It is all very well to say that these natural guardians of young people will so arrange for their future as to secure for them the largest amount of happiness possible in a world full of sorrow, change, and suffering. But people who argue in this way forget that human nature is weak, and human motives are operated on by many injurious causes. Greed of gold is the chief source whence flow unhappy marriages.

She ought to have addressed the above to the D. T. It would have formed an interesting addition to the wonderful correspondence which is now appearing in that journal concerning the married state.

WE publish to-day a letter from Sir Roper Lethbridge, correcting a statement which we made, on the strength of a published report, to the effect that Sir Roper had denounced the Indian Army Commission which sat some years ago at Simla as a sham. We are glad to find that we were in error, and that Sir Roper intended to have seconded Sir William Plowden's amendment.

But, Sir Roper, what is this: “Sir Frederick Roberts, the one soldier in whom both England and India have absolute confidence?” Have we, then, no other? If so, we are “poor indeed!”

THE dates on which the troopships will leave India during the coming relief season are October 14 and 25, November 4 and 18, December 30, January 13 and 20, February 10 (or early in March), March 17 and 30, and April 7.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

A HORRIBLE SCANDAL.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The eldest oyster winked his eye
And shook his heavy head,
Meaning to say he did not choose
To leave the oyster bed.

The Walruss and the Carpenter.

There was, as the poet says, “a shine in the tents of Ham.” All the Pi's friends and enemies and acquaintances assembled with copies of the T—s of I—a of the 13th July in their hands and wagged their heads dolorously; “Oh Pi!” they groaned. “Profligate old Pi! And has it come to this?” “Come to what?” said the Pi, shortly, for it was busy. “Shock, shock! fie, fie!” cried the crowd, and they intoned the following in jerks:—“English newspapers being subsidised to take sides in the keen controversy which has been created in the Deccan Mining Scandals. . . . Most grave allegations made against such papers as the Pioneer and the Bombay Gazette.”

“Yes,” said the Pi, abstractedly. “They said five thousand dubs was its price. No wonder it took steps. Five thousand! Just about the price of a new machine; But go on.” “Gross slanders reproduced in a number of journals . . . naturally looked for a prompt and indignant denial. . . . Pioneer has seen fit to sit silent under the imputation . . . We still urge upon our contemporaries that they should give the lie direct to their traducers.”

“Traducers’ is distinctly good,” said the Pi shamelessly. “The style of the indictment seems familiar to me. Is it by any chance my little friend, the Kingdom of Bombay?” “It’s the T—s of I—a,” said the crowd, shocked at this display of levity, “and it’s very angry.”

“Ya-as,” said the Pi. “I don’t wonder. The poor devil has been out of it since the beginning, and I think it owes me one or two. It is very virtuous!”

“The honours of Anglo-Indian journalism,” quoted the crowd, “demands that the plain, blunt, and unmistakable course should be followed. The Native Press!”

“Dear creature!” said the Pi, sweetly. “The Native Press have been indulging in bitter and sarcastic allusions to the manner in which, according to them, the Nizam has been led by unscrupulous Anglo-Indians. Now, what have you to say to that?” The crowd looked at the Pi under its eyebrows, and the more tender-hearted proffered it tracts and oranges to keep up its spirits.

“It’s very pretty,” said the Pi, reflectively—“very pretty. Especially that touch about the ‘honour of Anglo-Indian journalism.’ Is there any more in the same strain?”

The chorus began anew:—“That such statements, however false, carry weight with natives, if allowed to pass without emphatic contradiction, is incontestable. To ignore the grave charges, or to gloss them over, is a serious mistake, involving much wider issues than even the fair fame of the journals involved. The charges are categorically made. They should be categorically answered; That’s all,” said the crowd. “Now go and hide your diminished circulation.”

“It’s much too kind of the Kingdom of Bombay,” said the Pi, wiping its eyes. “Any time during the past twenty years I’ve been branded as a hireling organ of a brutal Government, a subsidised mercenary, a deliberate liar, a bloody contemporary, and everything else that was nice and complimentary—and the dear little kingdom took no notice. It’s really overwhelming. My ‘fair fame’ is safe—it is in the keeping of the T—s of I—a. Let the world roll!”

“But, Pi, this is disgraceful. You should take steps—you really should,” said the crowd.

“Think so?” said the Pi, “Do you happen to remember who was the traducer?”

“It was the Hyderabad Record,” said the crowd. “Ah!” said the Pi,—and a grin of introspective reflection stole across its expressive countenance. “H’m!” said the Pi, chuckling softly. “The Hyderabad Recorder—excellent paper—extended knowledge—first-class information. Says that the B—y G—e would take a five thousand rupee bribe. I like it for that. It must have made the G—e wild.”

“But it says that you have sent a representative with a bill to the Nizam, for services rendered, of forty thousand rupees,” said the crowd.

“How much!” shouted the Pi indignantly. “Forty thousand! That’s a clever hit—worse than the slur on the B—y G—e. Forty thousand rupees at one-and-four-pence each! My dear friends, if I ever sent in a bill to the Nizam, it would not be for thousands, but for lakhs—five at least. Forty thousand rupees! What does he take me for?”

“Oh! what cynical and blatant immorality,” said the crowd. “You admit that you can be bought?”

"Yes—for four annas a copy—back Numbers half price," said the Pi. "Would you like some? They will explain exactly how I came to be bribed, you know."

"We don't want your back Numbers. We want a categorical explanation," said the crowd.

Plain, blunt, and unmistakeable? You shall have it—though you have no right to it. In the first place you are not wise."

Here the Kingdom of Bombay sailed into the discussion, breathless and panting. "Oh, the arch deceiver!" it cried; "and we never had any news at all. Hit him hard—he's got no friends! We had to borrow his telegrams! Gouge his eyes out! Make him confess! Alone we did it. I myself and the incorruptible Englishman! Smash his head in! Think of our fair fame and—those telegrams."

"You'll hurt yourself, my little man if you go on like this," said the Pi, tenderly. "I admit it was irritating to be left in the cold."

"Don't impute motives," said the Kingdom of Bombay, sulkily. "You're always making fun of me, but I've got you now. Deny the imputation or die the death."

"It will need a bigger man than you to kill me. Listen, my Breach Candy Bantam. I led and the B—y G—e followed, and together we did what—forgive my being personal—you couldn't do. You admit that?"

"It was with other people's money," snarled the T—s of I—a.

"That's foolish—and insolent. But, never mind. Out of Hyderabad, where I have been working, and whose workings I know a great deal better than you ever will, comes an 'imputation' that a representative with a till is knocking about the State. You know the paper that makes the charge? If you don't, I can tell you all about it?"

"I don't want to be told," said the T—s of I—a. "I hate you! Let me go."

"Now you're talking sense," said the Pi. "You and Calcutta have no reason to love me—I know that. And it suits you—bless your innocent heart—to run the Record as a first-class journal for this occasion only. Do you know that the Record has withdrawn its wild statement about our bill-sticker?"

"Then you bribed it to do so," said the T—s of I—a. "I hate you. You're a bully!"

"Sweet child—perhaps I am—perhaps I'm not. But you are impertinent and too clever by half, with your honour of Anglo-Indian journalism and your 'Native Press.' Since when has the Native Press believed that the Pi is anything but bribed to the gullet, that its good opinion should be so desperately important? You precious little Pharisee! Go home for a few months and live in wholesome surroundings for a while. Do you suppose that any moderately sane man believes that the first paper in Asia risked its reputation by pecking about for bribes? And if it did, do you suppose that it would look at half a lakh? No—nor twenty half lakhs. If you can't understand honesty, try to comprehend expediency at least."

"But we do hate you so," said the T—s of I—a. "You swagger, and you bully, and you're generally offensive."

"When you are as big as I am perhaps you'll be able to do it yourself, and perhaps you'll do as good work as I have done. But at present my advice is, don't you try to ram a ship that carries twice your metal. Go and hit the B—y G—e and see what happens."

"But you haven't denied the charges," persisted the T—s of I—a.

"You made them," said the Pi, graciously.

"After you will come the Englishman, after the Englishman all the Native Press, calling Heaven and earth to witness that the Pi is no better than it should be. Then some madman may ask questions in the House of Commons, and then, perhaps, I'll attend to it. You certainly won't be paid the compliment of a direct denial here. You aren't worth it; and—forgive my making fun of you—I want to see what you'll do if you are left unanswered."

"I'll smash you. I'll go and tell every one that the Pi takes bribes hand over fist." "Quite so," said the Pi, gravely—"anything from postage-stamps to blank cheques. The smallest contributions thankfully received! You really have no knowledge of my perfidy—my avarice, and my want of principle. It will give you material of a much finer business than the Deccan Scandal. Run along and convulse India with it."

But the T—s of I—a went away in a pet, and the Pi returned to its work. The convulsions are maturing.

"BLOW, TRUMPET BLOW."

The Times of India, says the Indian Daily News, is at it again. Some time since we had to expose a little inaccuracy of that paper in claiming credit for being the first paper in India to oppose the idea of bleeding people in this country for the purpose of an Imperial Institute to be built in London. We were able to show that the Indian Daily News took up that precise line before the Times of India. Now our Bombay contemporary receives the news of Lord Cross's commendation of the marriage-reform action of the Rajpootana Chiefs as "all the more gratifying to us, inasmuch as the Times of India may fairly claim to have been the only journal out here or at home which seemed to appreciate the momentousness of the reform. At the beginning of April, we drew attention to the fact that in the matter of social reform Rajpootana had afforded a splendid example to the whole of India by curtailing the expenses of marriage, and by raising the marriage age to eighteen in the case of girls. About two months later when to our surprise, we found that either from oversight or from failure to grasp the significance of the change, the Press, both home and Indian, had still preserved silence on the question, we returned to the subject," &c. We are modest folk and do not like to take a course which savours of blowing our own trumpet. But we really must protest against the Times of India's complacent assumption of superior knowledge and judgment. The Indian Daily News, at any rate—we speak for ourselves, but believe other Indian papers also noticed the Rajpootana decision at the time in much the same spirit—was not blind to the importance of the Ajmere Conference and its result. On April 2nd last we wrote:—

"A substantial move has been made in the direction of that social reform which India needs much more than political concession. . . . We trust the rules formulated by the assembly of delegates at Ajmere will find general acceptance and faithful observance throughout Rajpootana, and that other parts of India will soon follow the sensible example thus set."

After this second abortive attempt to pose as a monopolist of Journalistic virtues amongst the Indian newspapers, perhaps the Times of India will be content to leave its readers to form their own estimates of its intelligence and enterprise. Bombay is not the hub of the universe, nor the Times of India its only tinkettle.

THE INDIAN ARMY AND EGYPTIAN DECORATIONS.

(Times of India.)

When the question came to the front last year we wrote strongly on the injustice of withholding the Bronze Star from the British and Indian forces who served in the Nile and Suakin Campaigns of 1885, although the Khedive was willing to grant it to them. Since then we have learnt with satisfaction that the British Government has been roused to a sense of the great virtue of avoiding invidious distinctions and of meting out "equal justice" to all the divisions of its army serving in campaigns extending over two or three years in the same country. Our home advices by the last mail inform us that precisely the same story is being repeated with regard to the Order of the Mejidie; that is to say His Highness the Khedive is not only quite prepared, but has expressed his wish to bestow the usual proportion of decorations on the officers of the British, Indian, and Colonial Contingents who served in the above-mentioned campaigns, but the British Government decline to move in the matter. Now, as the Order was conferred for the campaign of 1882, and also for Sir Gerald's Campaign of Suakin in 1884, we fail to understand why the British Government, instead of stopping the way should not, by all the legitimate influence it can exercise, encourage his Highness in carrying out his very laudable intention, and we are more firmly convinced of the fairness of our views in regard to the foreign order by recollecting that, though the object of the Nile Expedition was not attained, Government thought fit to confer a peerage on the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Garnet Wolseley, and distribute K.C.B.'s and C.B.'s to Commanders of Divisions and Brigades, &c. By these remarks we do not mean in any way to find fault with the action of the British Government in this respect. In no campaigns in which British troops have been engaged in recent years have there been greater fatigue, greater hardships, and harder fighting than in the Nile and Suakin Campaigns of 1885. When we recall the extraordinary difficulties the troops engaged had to contend against, difficulties of climate, of heat, nay even sometimes of hunger, and often of parching thirst, and when we reflect on the soldier-like bearing, the gallantry, and the patient endurance of all ranks of the army under these difficulties, and the numerous instances of individual heroism performed, and when we recall the many noble and brave soldiers who poured out their life's blood on the burning sands of the Egyptian deserts, it is with something more than surprise we learn that the Home Government should show an inclination to stand between the survivors and any honours that a foreign sovereign may be willing to confer upon them. We are by no means enthusiastically in favour of British troops being decorated by foreign potentates, but in the present case this is not the question. The practice began so far back as the Crimean War, and has been continued since; and if there may be some difference of opinion regarding the propriety of the principle, there can be none at all regarding the impropriety of making fish of one portion and flesh of another portion of an army the component parts of which contributed, each in their degree, to the main object with which warlike operations were undertaken—the pacification of, and the restoration of order in, Egypt. Our military readers will learn with satisfaction that the matter is not slumbering, but is being actively taken up at home by an influential body of members of Parliament, who have undertaken to bring this very reasonable army grievance before the House of Commons at no distant date. Amongst those M.P.'s interesting themselves on behalf of their brother-officers we are told are Colonel Duncan, C.B., General C. Fraser, V.C., C.B., Sir H. Havelock-Allen, V.C., K.C.B., Lord Charles Beresford, R.N., C.B., and Lord Randolph Churchill. Questions, we understand, will shortly be asked in the House on behalf of the three armies concerned—the British, the Indian, and the Colonial. The interests of the Indian Contingent will be confided to our able and versatile ex-Governor, Sir R. Temple, who is at all times ready to place his services at the disposal of his old comrades. We may safely leave the matter in the able hands in which it is at present, in full confidence that they will do their utmost to see justice done. For the rest we have but one word more to say. Orders, unlike medals, are not distributed broad-cast, and if the British Government consent to the Khedive carrying out his intention, it is not probable that more than three decorations per regiment will be given even if the proportion be so liberal. We would wish, therefore, to append a proviso to our advocacy of this claim on behalf of the Indian Contingent, which will not apply to the other two contingents who are interested in this matter. It is that the native officers should share with their European brother officers in the distribution of the Order in proportion to their number. We may add that we have recently heard a very great deal of Imperial federation for national defence, and the Government of Great Britain will certainly not assist or advance the movement that has been made in this direction by showing any niggardliness in the matter of honours and rewards for services rendered on western battlefields by Indian and Colonial troops.

BENGAL.

THE decision in the case where the husband, brother-in-law, and mother-in-law were charged with torturing a Hindoo girl-wife, eleven years of age, was given by the Bengal Chief Presidency Magistrate on the 24th July, each of the accused being sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment. The sentence is heavy, but not a whit too much so. The treatment of the children whom the custom of the country puts in the position of wives, is too frequently a scandal to Hindoo civilisation, and it is well when an opportunity offers that the law should enter an emphatic protest.

THE Indian Daily News gives a shocking picture of the condition of many children of Calcutta who may be said to be of European parentage, and who are so far the objects of parental neglect as to be "allowed to run naked in the streets. If this were all, bad as it is, it might be endured as an apparent necessity; but that such a thing is possible shows that there is something seriously wrong in our social system, or in the legislation for this country. In the abstract, there should be nothing very horrible in seeing children naked in a land where the sun renders the absence of clothing to some extent anything but a hardship. Indeed, so familiar are we with the sight of naked children and more than semi-naked adults that the sight ceases to be considered in the least shocking, when the exhibits are 'only Natives.' But change the colour of the skin from dark to light and all the proprieties seem to be outraged at once. This may be prudery or anything else we please to call it. We are not concerned about the name, and only wish to deal with the fact. And here we have it that a family of children, fair of skin, of bright intelligence apparently, even if not of super-acuteness induced probably by their surroundings, running naked, dirty, and showing numerous evidences of gross neglect and there seems to be no remedy. We mentioned that the children begged food from the Chinese shoemakers in the neighbourhood, or from grogshops, and even picked up cigar ends to smoke. This is simply shocking, and people may well cry 'shame upon their parents, if they have any, and upon society if they have not.' We hear still more shocking stories of these neglected waifs. We are informed that they have been seen scratching among kitchen refuse thrown into the streets, and sucking the mango stones that are daily to be found there! This may seem incredible, and yet we are assured it is a fact."

"SINCE we first noticed the case," adds the journal, "some people have taken interest in the children so far as to place themselves in positions of observation to be assured whether such things are possible. The evidence and the cause have been but too palpable. There is every disposition to interfere; but there is no power to do so. There are women who have hearts to feel for these poor children, but they are powerless to help. There are men, too, who would move if they could, but the law gives them neither lever nor fulcrum; and in the absence of these, we come to the paradox that power is powerless because it cannot be applied. Though this is a case which should concern our own community alone, be it said to the honour of a native gentleman that he was the first to come forward with a practical suggestion, which, as another paradox, is impracticable. He says his heart was moved to sympathy for the poor waifs referred to, and he asks whether all classes could not join and establish an institution that would gather up waifs of this kind of any and every race. The idea may be more noble than wise. Such an institution would relieve people of a natural obligation, and we fear it would have to be too large for the available means of support. One would fain hope that such cases as the one under notice are rare; but though it may be exceptional in the grossness of its character in this instance, cases of neglect of a kindred nature may be more common than is supposed. We understand that the parents of the children have been visited by the chaplain of the district, and probably by more than one of these reverend gentlemen, in the hope of bringing them to some sense of duty through shame. But they have followed the example of King Hezekiah, and set their faces like flint. The sense of shame, as well as that of duty, has been lost, and it is inconceivable that anything survives in the nature of parental affection. What can be done in such cases? This question is asked again and again, and left unanswered. There is no law. It is said that the law does not take cognisance of small matters. But is it a small matter that it should be permitted to self-indulgent or vicious parents to neglect their children, to ignore every legal and moral obligation of the parental character? We opine not, and if the natural feeling, which even brutes manifest for their offspring, is lost, as in this case, where the father positively laughs at remonstrance or appeal, the Government of India might pass a Bill to deal with such cases; and we hope that public opinion will urge Mr. Scoble to push one through the Legislative Council."

MADRAS.

LORD CONNEMARA, it is stated, is regarded by the people of Mysore and Bangalore as the bearer of good luck. The monsoon rains, which had held off until men began to fear a famine, came down heavily as soon as Lord Connemara entered the Province.

THE Hon. Mr. Stewart R. Turnbull has resigned his seat in the Madras Legislative Council, previous to leaving Madras for Europe for six months. He was appointed to the Council in February, 1887. Mr. Turnbull has also resigned the Chairmanship of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. D. Rasbotham, Vice-Chairman, since January, 1887, has been elected to succeed him in that office.

THE Government of India have decided not to adopt the proposal made by the Finance Committee for the amalgamation of the appointment of Sanitary Commissioner and Surgeon-General. They have furthermore had under consideration the subject of fixing a definite limit to the tenure of the appointment of Sanitary Commissioner in the several provinces, and they have decided that the term of the tenure of the appointment shall extend to seven years, subject to the condition that an extension not exceeding three years may be granted, if recommended by the Local Government. This rule is to apply to present incumbents, the seven years' limit in their cases counting from the date of these orders (viz. June 7), unless existing rules limit their tenure of office to a shorter period.

THE Harbour Trust Board have proposed to Government that, as part of their harbour construction railway is situate within Municipal limits, and to which the Municipality have now raised objection, a re-alignment of it be made within their own boundary, and, for this purpose that they be allowed to acquire the site now occupied by the emigration yard and the building now used as the office of the Deputy Commissioner of Police. They then propose to run tramways north and south from the pier, so as to connect with the Madras Railway on the one side, and the South Indian Railway on the other, and to erect two godowns—one for export and the other for import trade—at the shore end of the pier. A committee has been appointed to consider these proposals, consisting of the Chairman of the Harbour Trust Board, the Chief Engineer, Public Works Department, the Consulting Engineer for Railways, the Commissary-Generals, the Commissioner of Police, the Port Officer and the President of the Municipal Commission.

THE connection of Mr. Thorowgood, Chief Engineer of the Harbour Works, having been brought to an abrupt termination by his resignation of the office in consequence of the strained relations between himself and the Harbour Trust Board, the employés, 600 in number, presented him with an address in a richly carved sandalwood box and one of Messrs. Marcks' gold chronometers, valued at Rs.600. Mr. Thorowgood returned thanks in feeling terms for the honour done him.

THE following is an order of the Madras Government dated July 16 :—The investigations made of late years with the object of obtaining a pure water supply for the troops stationed at Bangalore having failed to produce an efficient and economical scheme, the Government resolved to offer a reward of Rs.1,000 for the best essay on the subject, on the conditions specified in the notification published in the Fort St. George Gazette of November 1, 1887, and subsequent issues; the award being left to the Chief Engineer, Public Works Department. A number of essays have been received in compliance with this invitation, and have been carefully examined by the Chief Engineer, who awards the prize to Mr. Standish Lee, sanitary engineer, Mysore.

BOMBAY.

SURGEON J. B. EATON has been allowed furlough, on medical certificate, for one year.

CAPTAINS F. ABBOTT AND G. B. E. RADCLIFFE, Bombay Staff Corps, have been promoted to Majors.

THE appointment of Dr. Mackichan, M.A., D.D., to be Vice-Chancellor of the University of Bombay, is gazetted.

MR. W. A. BOULTON, Assistant Superintendent, Sind Revenue Survey, has been allowed furlough for two years.

MR. T. D. MACKENZIE, C.S., Collector of Broach, has been granted privilege leave of absence for three months, from the 4th of September, 1888.

MR. G. CHAMBERS, F.R.S., Director of the Government Observatory at Colaba, Bombay, takes privilege leave of absence for three months. Mr. F. Chambers acts for him.

THE Rast Goftar learns that Mr. Dosabhoj Framjee, C.S.I., late Presidency Magistrate, has been presented by Government, in addition to his pension, a plot of ground of the value of Rs. 10,000, as a jagir, for the valuable services rendered by him to Government.

GREAT regret has been felt at the death of Mr. Maneckjee Restonjee Tuback, which sad event took place at his residence at Middle Colaba, July 26. The deceased gentleman was an esteemed member of the Parsee community and was connected with the family of the late Mr. Jejeebhoy Dadabhoy. Mr. Tuback was formerly for many years agent for Lloyd's Steam Service at Kurrachee. In that capacity the deceased gentleman was recognised to be principally instrumental in developing the trade between the Punjab and England. In 1854 he rendered very valuable assistance to Colonel G. E. Ashburner, who was then Cantonment Magistrate at Kurrachee, in detecting and defeating frauds practised in respect of liquor farms and bread supplies to European troops, which formed the standing complaint of the day. With Mr. Tuback's assistance, Colonel Ashburner was able to increase the Government revenue to more than three times its usual yield. In 1876, Mr. Tuback took service at Baroda under the regime of the Dewan, Sir T. Madhvarow, who appointed him the Commissioner of Police of that city. Under the energetic supervision of Mr. Tuback, an efficient police force was organised and established at Baroda, and order was restored in that city in lieu of the disturbed state in which it formerly was. On the occasion of the Durbar at Delhi, Mr. Tuback was selected and appointed the agent of his Highness the Gaekwar, and rendered very valuable assistance under exceptional difficulties. The deceased gentleman was honourably mentioned in many administration reports by the Dewan, Sir T. Madava Row, and was praised for his services by successive British Residents. The remarkable improvement introduced by Mr. Tuback in the police force at Baroda was noticed by the late Sir James Ferguson, who personally complimented him upon his success in that respect. In 1884, Mr. Tuback was obliged to resign service on account of ill-health, attributable to the hard work he had to undergo while at Baroda, and his Highness the Gaekwar was pleased to confer a large donation in recognition of his valuable services to the Baroda State. Mr. Tuback was well known among Natives as also Europeans in Bombay, and in the late Sir Frank Souter he had lost an esteemed and an old friend, whom he never ceased to deplore. Mr. Tuback was lately appointed one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for Bombay. He has left a large family and circle of friends to mourn his loss.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

COLONEL HOLROYD, Director of Public Instruction in the Punjab, takes three months' leave from August 6th; Mr. Lewis will officiate.

THE divorce case of Barber v. Barber, which came before three Judges of the Chief Court on July 28th, was deferred on a point of jurisdiction, it having been held that, as the plaintiff and defendant did not live as husband and wife at Lahore, and as the cause of action arose at Agra, the case was not within the jurisdiction of the Divisional Court of Lahore, by which it was transferred to the Chief Court. The plaintiff, Mr. Barber, has been directed to file a fresh plaint in the Chief Court.

THE Civil and Military Gazette's correspondent at Sealkote reveals an unpleasant feeling that has risen up against sowkars in the neighbourhood :—"There would seem to be a kind of organisation or an epidemic of violence against sowkars just now. Sowkars are, as is well known, often beaten by large-limbed agriculturists from sheer desperation under their exactions, and with some vague idea of inducing them to forbear from pressure as to moneys due, or at least of taking some satisfaction in advance for the ruin threatened. But it has seldom come to pass that their noses have been cut. This is an extreme measure and drastic. The punishment for this is heavy of course, but the idea cannot fail to be alarming to the sowkar, and might be more salutary than many moral exhortations. The native dislikes to have this thing done to him; and it is for this act that seven men have been arrested in the Pusroor tahsil of the district. But in the Durka tahsil a more systematic and irrational attempt has been successfully made. A sowkar was not only beaten when he called upon his debtors to settle, but his papers have been destroyed as well, so that all traces of money transactions have been removed. This, however, is too well planned an attempt to enlist sympathy; it passes from the quality of rustic stupidity and blundering straightforwardness—which is so refreshing in its way—to the invidiousness of craft and villainy."

BURMA.

THE pretended Burman Prince, now in custody at Rangoon was brought up before the magistrate on July 20. The evidence taken went to show that he was a priest, and had been lately busying himself in plotting rebellion.

A FIRE is reported to have broken out suddenly at Mandala on July 20, near the old Residency, destroying over a hundred huts and all the minor monastic buildings within the compound where the high priest of Buddha resides. The estimated loss is about Rs. 40,000.

AN excellent report has been compiled by Lieutenant H. E. Stanton, R.A., of the Intelligence Branch of the Quarter-master-General's Department, on the Shan States in Upper Burma. He acted as Intelligence Officer with the column which operated in that part of the country.

A RANGOON paper understands that the offer made in the Gazette of July 14 of the loan of Rs. 3,000 to any one starting a dairy is likely to be taken advantage of by an enterprising European, who has already started a farm on a small scale at Insein, and is now supplying several people in Rangoon with first-class milk at a moderate rate.

THE Chief Commissioner of Burma landed at Mandalay on the 20th July. He was escorted by a company of the Volunteer Mounted Rifles—whom he congratulated on their smart and business-like appearance—and a troop from the Hyderabad Light Cavalry. The Chief rode into the town through the principal thoroughfares. The native pupils of the S. P. G. Mission, led by the Rev. Mr. Colbeck, had gathered under their banner in front of the Volunteer head-quarters, and gave the Chief three cheers as he rode past. At the Europe Hotel were two arches gaily decorated with evergreens and bunting, and at the second arch a number of little children cheered the Chief, who seemed pleased, for, it is said, he stopped and taught them how to hurrah. At Government House he was received by guards-of-honour furnished by the 16th Native Infantry and by the Volunteer Corps. The officers of the corps present were thanked and complimented.

SIND.

THE survey of the Sind, Delhi, and Rajputana projected Railway will, it is reported, commence after the rains.

THE Sind Arts College has secured the services of Mr. Moses J. Jackson, M.A., Oxon., and D.Sc., Lond., as Principal in succession to Dr. Walmsley.

THE LATE MR. LESLIE SAUNDERS.—Some friends of the late Mr. Leslie Saunders, Commissioner of the Berars, have determined to erect a memorial to him in Ajmere. A committee with power to add to their number has been appointed for all purposes connected with the Saunders' Memorial, and subscriptions may be paid to Surgeon-Major J. H. Newman, M.D., Ajmere, who has kindly consented to act as Secretary and Treasurer of the Memorial Fund.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—AUGUST 13.

THE DEBATE ON THE INDIAN BUDGET.

SIR R. LETHBRIDGE asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether the attention of Her Majesty's Government had been drawn to the fact that under the new rules of procedure hon. members were deprived of the right to discuss on the Indian Budget general questions of Indian administration and Indian grievances, save only such as were of a financial or economic character; and whether, inasmuch as this tended to place Her Majesty's Indian subjects on a footing in regard to the ventilation of their grievances different from that of Her Majesty's home and colonial subjects, whose grievances could always be discussed on going into Committee of Supply, Her Majesty's Government would, before the Session of 1889 consider the possibility of granting some other annual opportunity for the public discussion of such grievances.

MR. W. H. SMITH: It is desirable that on an occasion of that character opportunity should be afforded for the discussion of financial questions rather than that hon. members should avail themselves of that opportunity for discussing questions of general administration. The hon. member is aware that it is open to those who take an interest in Indian affairs to raise questions concerning them on Tuesdays and Fridays. On the whole, the Government do not think it expedient to make any alteration in the arrangement referred to in the question of the hon. member.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

REGULATIONS have been published for the guidance this year of officers of the mounted branches of the Service who are entitled to select chargers from Remount Depots. They can proceed at their own expense to Hossur or Saharunpur, or the two temporary depots at Calcutta and Bombay, after their applications have been sanctioned by the General Officer Commanding.

THE necessity for an increase to the number of regimental officers in the Hyderabad Contingent was a pressing one. This necessity was appropriately illustrated on a recent occasion when a regiment paraded under its Havildar-Major. At the time some of the cavalry of the force was ordered to Burma—where, by the way, it has done well—its strength in officers required with a regiment on active service was increased by drawing on the regiments left behind; and these regiments, already weakened by the ordinary calls for other than regimental duty, left some others almost without any European officers at all.

CORPORAL W. POPE, Great Indian Peninsula Railway Volunteer Corps, has been awarded the Bombay Presidency Silver Medal for the year 1887-88 as the best shot among the Volunteers with the Martini-Henry rifle. His score was 68. Colour-Sergeant J. Mawhood, Poona Volunteer Rifle Corps, won the Provincial Silver Medal for the same year with a score of 67 points.

THE Bengal Presidency Association's Annual Meeting may be held at any station in Bengal between the 1st October and 17th November. The 150 best shots in the meeting will be granted a free railway pass to Meerut to compete there for the Championship matches. The Government of India have sanctioned a grant of Rs. 6,000 towards defraying the railway expenses of the successful competitors. This sum is equivalent in amount to that annually allowed by the Bombay Government to the Central Rifle meeting at Poona. It is hoped that the Government of India will be in a position next year to at least double the allowance.

The success that has attended the formation and organisation of the B or Cossipore Battery of Volunteer Artillery, under the command of Major R. Wace, R.A., Superintendent of the Foundry and Shell Factory, Cossipore, has induced the Commander-in-Chief to recommend, and the Government of India to accord sanction to the formation of a second battery of Cossipore Artillery Volunteers, the two batteries to consist of six guns each of the following strength, under the command of a lieutenant-colonel:—1 major, 1 captain, 3 lieutenants, 1 sergeant-major, 1 quartermaster-sergeant, 6 sergeants, 6 corporals, 6 bombardiers, 2 trumpeters, 100 gunners—total, 127. The existing battery, for the most part composed of stalwart Scotchmen, has detachments at Balliaghatta, Barnagore, Kamrhatti, Titaghur, Barrackpore, Samnugger, Kankanara, Serampore, and Ishra. Though its establishment was 100, the battery had 135 men enrolled on the 1st March last. There should, therefore, be no difficulty in augmenting the strength to 200 men; but it is doubtful whether the number will ever reach the new establishment of 254 fixed for the two batteries. The Presidency now only requires to form a company of submarine mining volunteer engineers, and there is ample room for the formation of so useful and desirable a company on the Hughli, to complete a Volunteer brigade of all arms at the Presidency.

FAREWELL ORDER TO COLONEL M. BELL, V.C.

The following Departmental Order by the Quartermaster-General in India, dated Simla, July 18, 1888, has been issued:—

Colonel M. S. Bell, V.C., A.-D.-C., Royal Engineers, being about to vacate the appointment of Deputy Quartermaster-General, Intelligence Branch, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India is desirous of marking his appreciation of the valuable services rendered by that officer in the Quartermaster-General's Department since May, 1880, and of placing on record a detail of the work carried out by Colonel Bell, and under his immediate direction.

Captain Bell, V.C., was appointed Assistant Quartermaster-General of the Intelligence Branch May 22, 1880, and Deputy Quartermaster-General April 26, 1885. On October 29, 1884, Major Bell was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel (by brevet) and on March 10, 1887, was appointed an Aide-de-Camp to the Queen.

The following extended reconnaissances have been carried out by Colonel Bell since joining the Intelligence Branch:—

In Northern China, from February to July, 1882.

In South-Western Persia, from February to July, 1884.

In Mesopotamia and Armenia, from September, 1885, to May, 1886.

In Western Persia and Kashgaria, from March to September, 1867.

The explorations completed by him have added largely to geographical knowledge, and the information secured for Government during the adventurous journeys which he has undertaken is especially valuable; while numerous reports and compilations, which are on record in the office, bear testimony to the industry and care with which the observations of an experienced traveller and military reconnoiterer may be compiled.

To Colonel Bell the Intelligence Branch is mainly indebted for the system under which its work has been so largely developed, and for the vigour with which important inquiries made during the last three years have been pushed to conclusion: he has successfully ensured the accomplishment of large results with comparatively small means at his disposal. The spirit with which he has performed the arduous reconnaissances above detailed, and the thoughtful attention which he has given to the administration of the Intelligence Branch, are deserving of special acknowledgment. Under his direction the standard of work has been raised, and the plan of compiling our military topographical knowledge has been improved. His own efforts have been largely supplemented, it is true, by the labours of other officers; but his example and wise management have been mainly instrumental in placing the Intelligence Branch upon its present footing.

HOT TEA.—The editor of the Ceylon Observer, during a recent visit to Canton and the China coast, noticed the significant fact that those parts of the Celestial Empire were remarkably free from both typhoid fever and cholera, owing to the inhabitants drinking hot tea in preference to cold water. The Chinamen there is said to keep for the purpose a pannikin of water always simmering. He drops in a sprinkling of tea leaf just sufficient to give the water a colour.

A FATAL accident occurred on the evening of July 21 at Benares, resulting in the death of Lieutenant Hubbard, 17th Bengal Infantry. The deceased was fond of riding, and on the evening in question was mounted on a horse which was somewhat fresh, and in attempting to make the animal jump over a ditch in the Native Infantry hospital compound the horse swerved and threw Lieutenant Hubbard, his head coming violently in contact with the trunk of a tree. He was picked up immediately, and died about an hour after. His skull was smashed in. Lieutenant Hubbard was a popular young officer and was in the Marines. He was only attached to the 17th Bengal Infantry in order that he might become eligible for transfer to a cavalry regiment. He lately passed the L.S. in Hindustani, but by a recent regulation, being over age, he was barred from entering a cavalry corps. Lieutenant Hubbard had just sent in his papers and received permission to return to duty in the Marines.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE ENGLISH IN THE WEST INDIES.*

The West Indies! What glorious associations—what splendid memories are recalled by the very mention of the name! For they were the centre of the struggle when England disputed with Spain and France the dominion of the ocean. Defeat in those days meant little, if any less, than national annihilation. No wonder, then, that Mr. Froude dwells with pleasurable pride upon Rodney's glorious victory of April 12th, 1782, when half the French fleet was either taken or sunk; when 14,000 persons were killed, and the decks of the various vessels were so bestrewn with mangled limbs and ghastly corpses that walking was impossible! No wonder, too, that our author recalls with shame that cowardly and half-hearted politicians at home—then, as now, only intent upon the affairs of the immediate future—had sent instructions to the doughty warrior that he was to "give in," and concede all that his enemies might demand. "The bow of Ulysses was strung in those days." "On that memorable day was the English Empire saved: Peace followed, but it was 'peace with honour.' The American Colonies were lost, but England kept the West Indies. Her flag still floated over Gibraltar. The hostile strength of Europe, all combined, had failed to twist Britannia's ocean sceptre from her. She sat down, maimed and bleeding, but the wreath had not been torn from her brow. She was still the Sovereign of the Seas!"

This language is grand, glorious, and inspiring. A century has elapsed since the valiant "Jack Tar" was befriended by fate. Fortunately telegraphs were unknown in those days, and he contrived to fight his battle before the humiliating and craven instructions arrived from home; and England still reaps the rewards of his genius and daring. Yet, withal, it is the custom in these days of grace to carp and cavil at the paltry pensions which a grateful country poured into the lap of those who fought her battles and defended her honour! People forget that had not our heroes of the last century done what they did there would be no Empire, and the Bradlaughes of to-day would have had no existence. The land that gave them birth would, in all probability, have passed under an alien yoke.

But what is the present history of the West Indies as told in the graphic pages of Mr. Froude's recent volume? Ah! what, indeed? It is melancholy reading. The islands possess a potentiality of greatness which is well-nigh boundless. Magnificent soil, superb climate—at least, with a few exceptions—proximity to home, labour almost nominal in price—these favoured spots might become very El Dorados of wealth to the mother-country. But what happens? All the British ideas of prosperity are restricted to one solitary product—sugar—and that industry being destroyed, owing to various causes, the nation folds its hands and regards the ruin with the same indifference which characterise Nero when fiddling while Rome was in flames. Worse, perhaps, even than this, because the spirit of the age clamours for equality; and so the intellect of the ruling power is bent upon devising constitutions which shall give representation to the "blacks," placing them on a par with their brethren the "pale-faces." And the result is comprised in a single sentence, pregnant with significance to the destinies of this Empire—national extinction is within "measurable" distance of accomplishment. The blacks are increasing with a rapidity proverbial to the negro race. The whites—now a handful of settlers—are destined ere long, unless a spirit come over the scene, to utter annihilation. And then? Only this, that the West Indies, already largely American in sympathies and aspiration, will pass, under the stars and stripes of our Yankee rivals. This is the tale which Mr. Froude proclaims in his most interesting and brilliantly-written work. This is the problem which England has to face; and, it may be feared, this is the fate which befalls those who value the great heritage bequeathed them by a glorious ancestry, merely in so far as the pocket is able to benefit, and the purse to reap a fat reward. Shame upon such commercial, such shopkeeping patriotism and meanness of soul! The bow of Ulysses is, it may be feared, if not unstrung, at any rate untouched.

THE BRITISH TAXPAYER AND HIS WRONGS.†

It is scarcely possible to analyse this work with any real advantage, since it is avowedly incomplete. Its anonymous author in the present volume deals with destructive criticism, and shows in considerable detail the objections to the various taxes now in force. He points out with great clearness, and with no less acumen and financial skill, the blots which mar the arrangements adopted to raise a revenue for the expenses of the United Kingdom. This is a valuable and interesting study, but criticism comes more into play when the constructive process is commenced; for surely it is easy to find fault, but difficult to suggest a remedy. A perfect tax—that is to say, one which alike in theory and practice fulfils all the requirements of the situation—is, perhaps, unattainable, and we shall be anxious to learn from the continuation of the present work what method finds favour in the eyes of "Finance."

That the subject is difficult he himself freely avows; but we scarce think that our anonymous author fully realises the magnitude of his self-imposed task. One example will illustrate our meaning. Speaking in broad terms, it is argued that indirect taxation is condemned as immoral in its effects and unjust in its incidents. Admitted; but if be abolished how are the masses to be taxed? It is argued, and with truth, that practically the wage-earning classes are being brought to believe that they are not fit and proper subjects of taxation (that is, of course, direct taxation); but surely the antidote to this political poison is to inspire them with the idea that though the Government collector must not enter by one door he may by another. Clearly to shut both gates is not wise. Of course there is a third alternative—to wit, a modification of the present system of exemptions, so as to bring all classes into the mesh of direct taxation. On paper such a plan would be admirable, but what Minister could dare do it? Who, for instance, could make weekly wages amenable to the payment of income-tax? Indeed, it might be argued, how could it be done? The machinery for such a purpose would be so costly as to swallow up the collections, while fraud would be end less. Added to this the annoyance, the worry, the bad-blood engendered by such a measure would be so incalculable as to appeal the heart of the stoutest and most courageous of financiers.

These remarks are not penned in depreciation of "Finance's" work. We agree with a vast proportion of what he has written; but, in all fairness, we desire to point out that able as the author undoubtedly is, clear-headed as are his criticisms, he must never lose sight of the practical; and his remedies to be salutary must be such as will stand the test of daily experience as well as of theoretical soundness.

MOHAMMADAN COINS.*

Of all the mysteries of Orientalism few exceed the subtleties of coinage. The letters are interwoven and intermingled to a degree that none but an expert can hope to untangle the skein of obscurity. True even as regards the money of later dates, these remarks are pre-eminently well founded with reference to the outcome of the mints of earlier dynasties. A glance at the excellent reproduction at the close of the work under review will serve to indicate the difficulty of deciphering the incomprehensible devices, which may mean this, or that or anything. Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole, however, will not, we fear, agree in this criticism. To him each coin appears plain, clear, and unmistakable in its purport—he sees no difficulty. To him the "writing on the wall" is perfectly intelligible. Powerless to pass judgment on what we cannot ourselves decipher we confine ourselves to the observation that as regards the text itself we have not succeeded in discovering a single error in the Orientalism, while the type is clear and well-defined. Altogether the Bodleian Library at Oxford may be congratulated at the appearance of a valuable and scholarly work, which reflects credit upon all concerned in its production.

WELLINGTON.†

"I have endeavoured in the following pages to illustrate the leading acts and opinions of the illustrious warrior and statesman in his own words, as recorded in his despatches and letters, or as reported by his comrades to his most intimate friends." Such is Mr. Lathom Browne's explanation of the raison d'être of the work which he has recently published regarding the great Duke of Wellington; who, though more than a quarter of a century has passed since he died in the fulness of years, and loaded with the honours which a country in his day poured into the lap of the soldiers who bled for their fatherland, and the statesmen who piloted safely the ship of state, still lives in the memories of a faithless and fickle generation. And it is well that attention should at the present juncture be called to eminent services, and that the embers of national gratitude should once again be blown into life. For there is too much tendency, when for a lengthened period the sun of peace has shone undimmed upon this land, that peddling, narrow-minded critics cavil at the paltry expenditure which, in the shape of hereditary pensions, is demanded from the national exchequer. But compare "then" with "after." It is all very well, now that the danger is past, to refuse to "pay the bill" because such contemptible meanness can produce no harm to the Empire, although accompanied by the withering scorn which it provokes in the heart of every true citizen and honest patriot. But how would matters have fared if Wellington had been possessed of the power of reading the scroll of the future, and said, "No. Admitted the country is in danger, but I foresee that in a few years to come reward will be begrudged to my descendants; perhaps, indeed, to me myself. I will not draw the sword from the scabbard." Had this been done, how would cavillers of to-day fare? Where would have been the paltry, ignominious crew of so-called politicians who raise envy to a science and hatred to a profession?

It is well, therefore, to recall public attention to the services of one of our greatest national heroes—to place him once more on the stage of life, and, if possible, to induce the fickle populace to learn afresh what manner of man was Arthur Duke of Wellington. This task has been carefully and ably performed by Mr. Lathom Browne, who has not fallen into the common mistake of supposing that his readers are familiar with all the circumstances which are recorded in the pages which he would have them peruse; for a few carefully-chosen sentences explain from time to time the allusions in the paragraphs which follow. One of the greatest difficulties in an effort of this nature is obviously the matter of compression. It would have been easy to have filled volume after volume with extracts from the correspondence of the Great Duke; and to compress all the essential extracts within the compass of less than 400 pages indicates an intimate acquaintance with the subject of the memoir. Mr. Lathom Browne has done his work with no inconsiderable degree of ability and literary acumen; and his labour of love—for reward is scarcely possible—will, it may be hoped, meet with the share of patronage which is undoubtedly its due.

THE LAND BEYOND THE FOREST.*

Is there a land of which the soil has not been desecrated by the footstep of the globe-trotter? Is there an inch of the civilised world where the patrician "Arry" has not planted himself for a while to explore, examine, and take notes? Alas! not many such spots can be found; but Mr. Gerard tells of one "Transylvania"—the land beyond the forest—an almost unknown portion of the Austrian Empire. Its rampart of snow-capped mountains, and its curtain of well-nigh impenetrable forests, have divided this quaint snuggerly from the outer world. There the traveller will see mankind just as they were two or three hundred years ago. No modern improvements have improved customs off the face of the earth; no barbarous railways rush, shrieking and tearing amidst the wilds of this solitary land. The severe taskmaster, "fashion," has not as yet ground down the people under the slavery of "style and shape." There people are as God made them. The hands have gone back some centuries upon the dial of time; and the traveller on returning to his own home feels that he is launched in a new world, that another life has been lived for a while, that he has drunk the cup of forgetfulness, and has become intoxicated with the potion of seclusion and repose.

This is the nook in Europe of which Mr. Gerard discourses in the two interesting volumes which have recently appeared. No attempt has been made at elaborate and scientific technicalities; the reader will find no geological mysteries, no political subtleties, no "economical" problems in the pages of this work. It does not aspire beyond "chit-chat," but it teems with information of every sort and description; and much that is new is told in language as unpretentious as the people whom it portrays and the customs which it depicts. Fancy, for instance, an edict which details to the utmost nicety what people shall put on and wherewithal they shall be clothed! Imagine churches fortified, and a store of provisions laid up within the sacred walls! "We have seven chapels all full of bacon," was the proud boast of a Saxon churchwarden, whose hoarding propensities were merely the outcome of centuries of discord and turmoil, when no one knew what the hour would bring forth, and when the peaceful citizen of to-day might to-morrow be the courageous defender of his ancestral home. What a strange fact, too, it is that peopled as is Transylvania, with a variety of races they rarely intermingle. Saxons, Roumanians, Maygars are entirely distinct as regards nationality, and yet they attend the same church, conform to the same regulations, and are in no way antagonistic to each other—marriage alone excepted. In this direction a line of demarcation is drawn, and amalgamation is almost unknown. It would be easy to multiply instances which, in the quaint language of Yankee land, are "eye-openers," but to do so would swell this criticism to an undue extent. It must suffice to say that for novelty of subject, for curiousness of information, for quaintness of detail Mr. Gerard's volumes stand second to none of the many books which treat of unknown lands and little visited countries; and the reader will with regret bid adieu to a friendly companion and enthusiastic lover of nature in its wildest and most primitive aspect.

THE MIRI LANGUAGE.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—In these hard times of the cheap rupee it is cheerful to know that the officers of Government can make a pot of money by passing in unknown languages.

One of them has just received 1,000 rupees for passing in the Miri language. Is this a written language? Who were the examiners? Were the examiners competent to examine?

The Miris are a clan living in Assam between our territory and the barbarous Abors. The Duphlahs and Abors have given us a good deal of trouble in times past, and the Miris often act as go-betweens to explain commercial matters to the Assamese and to the Abors; but would it not be better to give 1,000 rupees reward for knowledge of the Abors rather than for ability to understand the go-betweens?

I beg to refer you to Mr. Mackenzie's official book regarding the Miris published in 1884. Mr. Mackenzie is now Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces of India.—Your obedient servant,

Aug. 10.

SIR ROPER LETHBRIDGE ON THE INDIAN ARMY COMMISSION.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—The criticism on the recent Indian Budget Debate, contained in your leading article of this day's date, is, in my humble opinion, most just and to the point.

Will you, however, permit me to point out one slight inaccuracy in a statement of fact? You say that I characterised the Indian Army Commission as a sham. So far from this being the case, if the forms of the House had permitted, I should have seconded Sir William Plowden's motion to insist on the adoption of the recommendations of that Commission. I actually rose for that purpose, and with the intention of pointing out to the House how weighty was the authority, on all the points dwelt on in its Report, of a Commission whose leading Military member was Sir Frederick Roberts, the one soldier in whom both England and India have absolute confidence. And my name will be found in the minority that voted with Sir William Plowden against the Government on that question.

The Commissions that I denounced as shams, and that I hope to be able even yet to prove to be shams, were the Public Service Commission and the Finance Committee—not, perhaps, through the fault of their members, but by their very nature and composition.—Yours obediently, ROPER LETHBRIDGE.

THE Government of Bombay have accepted the offer of Rs. 66,000 made by the Albless family to construct an obstetric hospital between the Cama Hospital and the new Police Court building to be named after Mr. Bomanjee, a deceased member of their family. The donors have made it a condition that separate accommodation shall be provided for Parsee patients in the new hospital. The lady doctors attached to the Cama Hospital will also attend the Bomanjee Albless Obstetric Hospital.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season report for the past week:—Rain in all districts of the Presidency proper and Sind, but insufficient in parts of Kaira, Broach, Panch Mahals, Baroda, Nasik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Sholapur, Satara, Bijapur, Belgaum, and Dharwar. Sowing of early crops progressing generally, but retarded where rainfall is insufficient. Transplanting progressing in Ahmedabad, Baroda, Nasik, and Konkan. Young crops injured by caterpillars in parts of Kaira, Panch Mahals, and Upper Sind Frontier; good elsewhere. Fodder scarce in parts in Hyderabad, Broach, Nasik, Belgaum, and Baroda.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 17, 1888.

AN INTELLIGENCE DEPARTMENT FOR INDIA.

WE were not aware that Sir Lepel Griffin was partly the author of the system of police-reporting to which belongs the credit that our "local Governments" in India are better informed than they were of the state of the provinces which they administer. In view of this and other public measures of a decidedly practical character which may claim the same paternity we regret the probability of Sir Lepel Griffin's early retirement from India. It is in times like the present, when "radical experiments" are unsettling the public mind in India, the disaffected are sapping the loyalty of the well-disposed, and the Executive are openly and unjustly slandered by the disloyal, that men of Sir Lepel Griffin's stamp are wanted at the helm of public affairs—men who have no respect for maudlin sentimentality, but who are nevertheless as anxious as professed humanitarians to rule gently, but, withal, to rule with vigour.

It is the affected sentiment of our professions, which in practice our strong common sense declines to endorse, that does such serious harm to our acts and our motives with a public who exclusively indulge in destructive criticism. We seem sometimes to forget the basis of British rule in India, or believe that time has dispensed with this understanding. Our devotion to the palpable fallacy that we could govern India, for the present, at least, on the basis of a Constitutional Government is a conception of our public duty, which is fraught with serious danger. It would be a monstrous folly if in any scheme for the government of India we lose sight of the interests of the Natives; but we must not forget that we govern India as much for ourselves as well as for them, and it is on the perfect blending of the two interests, hardly effected as yet, that the success and popularity of our government will depend. But whether we ourselves govern the country, or do so with the co-operation of Native officials, the governors must be de facto rulers, and not sentimental humanitarians, whose only virtue consists in a desire to please everybody, and whose incapacity has doomed them to disappoint both their clients and allies.

It is impossible to deny the justice of Sir Lepel Griffin's remark in his letter to the Times, which called forth the reply from Mr. Slagg, that "in a country like India, where exist influences hostile to the British Government and the public peace," the necessity of an Intelligence Department is unquestionable. We have not only to punish and improve the misleading, but to save the misled. If the Natives only relied on the success of their selfish interests the position of our Government would be perfectly secure; but false and mischievous sentiments have crept in, and, surrounded as we are with a dearth of "indigenous talent," we have the double duty to discharge: to hold in hand the dangerous, and to save from evil the foolish. But this duty can only be discharged with the help of that knowledge for which Sir Lepel Griffin contends—that we should have a special machinery. It is not only the folly of our own subjects that we have to resist; we have to guard the Empire against the secret and open assaults of our neighbours; and Sir Lepel Griffin well puts it, that for this stupendous work we have an Intelligence Department which submits weekly reports "from every district in the province, noting special or organised crime, the movement of suspicious foreigners to and from the north-west frontier, the advent of gangs of vagrants and professional thieves, the issue of seditious and secret circulars and proclamations, the holding of important political or tribal meetings, the expressed feeling and sentiment of the Native public on all matters connected with the Government and its measures." It is equally true that "there are doubtless many persons in India who would gladly see its abolition—the seditious, the criminal, and the ill-disposed. But no loyal, honest, or honourable man has been injured by it in the past or will be in the future." Such is the opinion of one who has spent almost the best years of his life in service in India, and who has acquired Indian experience in various departments, in posts of trust and responsibility. But Mr. Slagg, without any Indian experience, has taken a different view of the Intelligence Department; he questions its necessity, and brands it as an inquisitorial institution. We are not advocates of hard words, and Mr. Slagg deprecates, not without some show of justice, the use of them by Sir Lepel Griffin. If Mr. Slagg is satisfied with the loyalty of the Indian Association he might take the trouble to satisfy himself as to the wisdom of their suggestions. He recognises the justice of Sir Lepel Griffin's advice that we should collect information on the important subjects to which he has drawn our attention, but he objects to the addition made to them by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal:—

I do not think anyone would object to police interference in those matters named in the circular to which Sir Lepel Griffin draws special attention—namely, "organised crime, and the movements of suspicious persons, gangs of vagrants, and professional thieves." But with this goodly company the circular associates, as fit and parallel objects for the secret scrutiny of the police, "Everything, however apparently trivial, that can have a political significance; comments on laws and Government measures; objects and proceedings of Native societies; political and mass meetings; information regarding religious sects; changes in doctrine," &c.

It is not easy to discover the points of difference (between the Bengal Police Circular and the system described by Sir Lepel Griffin) which would justify Mr. Slagg's indignant condemnation of the former, and its suppression in the interest of his clients, the Indian Association. It may be that the mode of giving effect to the objects of the Bengal Circular is open to objection, and the members of the Indian Association, who are supposed to be "as loyal to our rule in India as Sir Lepel Griffin himself," may have good cause for complaint. We do not wish to give offence, and we shall, therefore, not look too seriously into the loyalty of Mr. Slagg's clients ; but we repeat, that if Mr. Slagg agrees with the case stated by Sir Lepel Griffin in defence of Police inquiry in certain cases, we do not see what he has to complain of in the additional matters to which the Bengal Government have directed the attention of the local Police. But it may well be that the Indian Association have strong objections to the mode in which the Bengal Police conduct their inquiry, and we are inclined to believe that there may be a large amount of truth in the complaint. In Bengal authority is maintained meekly by an embarrassed executive, but in certain exceptional cases there has been a defiance of all rules and orders. The complaint may, therefore, have a solid ground of justice ; but it should not be directed against the Bengal Circular, but against the discretion of those who have to enforce its provisions.

Mr. Slagg is inclined to agree with Sir Lepel Griffin that "it is difficult to ascertain public sentiment" in India ; but he adds that, if the Police were to go in search of that object in England, the same may "soon" be said of this country. It is not possible to say how "soon" such would be the case, or that it would be the case at all, but we deny that any analogy exists between the circumstances of the countries as regards the relation between the governed and the Government.

But further on in his letter Mr. Slagg begins to ascribe wish and intention to Sir Lepel Griffin, for which he does not appear to us to have any reasonable ground. There is also actually no ground for him to say that Sir Lepel Griffin desires to "control all expressions of opinion by police machinery" ; all that he desires appears to us to be that the Government should know "the expressed feeling and sentiment of the Native public on all matters connected with the Government and its measures." Perhaps the members of the Indian Association of Calcutta are as "loyal as Sir Lepel Griffin himself," but the Indian Association does not comprise the whole population of India, nor does Bengal represent India in any respect that now occurs to us. Yet it is of the utmost importance that the Government should know what is being said and done by the Natives on Government measures, and to learn, from a reliable source, Native sentiments on public matters generally, whether proceeding from Government or public bodies, or social communities, or religious denominations, who are neither guided by the same motives, nor work for the same objects. It is knowledge which we are striving for, and in acquiring it we are anxious not to subject the public to any obnoxious scrutiny or expose them to Police molestation. We believe Sir Lepel Griffin shares Mr. Slagg's view as regards the unrestricted liberty of speech. "I would give them (the Natives of India)," writes Mr. Slagg, "free and unfettered voice, believing that our rule and its results, as a whole, will bear public comment and discussion." But while Mr. Slagg would leave matters alone here, Sir Lepel Griffin, with a better knowledge of the difficulties which beset our government in India, is anxious that the Government should not be ignorant of what is being done, without the help of the "unfettered voice," in the security of secrecy. If such proceedings were possible in England, no English Government worth the name would rest in false assurance, and allow the "unfettered voice" to be supplemented with uncontrolled deeds. The Government of India is not anxious to stop "public comment and discussion" on "our rule and its results ;" but all that Sir Lepel Griffin contends for is, that the Government should have a correct knowledge of these "comments" and "discussions," and provide for the contingencies to which they may lead. If, as we have already remarked, the process of collecting "intelligence" in Bengal is justly open to censure, it is the mode in which the principle is worked out, and not the principle itself which stands condemned ; let us improve the mode, and not suppress the Department.

The remark of the Indian Association, which Mr. Slagg quotes with approval, is a unique mixture of ignorance and weakness :—

The Indian Association of Calcutta can hardly be described as a seditious body, and they have addressed a very strong petition to the Government, pointing out 'the disastrous consequences which such a state of things is likely to engender, and the sense of mistrust between rulers and ruled which this circular-letter is calculated to create.'

If the "comments" and "discussions" are such as would not bear looking into, the sooner we know all about them the better for all concerned ; but if they can be known to the public or the Government without danger to those who indulge in them, "the disastrous consequences" are a myth, and they ought not to shake the nerves of such a loyal body as the Indian Association. Sir Lepel Griffin remarks that the knowledge which is collected by the Police can only be dangerous to "the seditious, the criminal, and the ill-disposed," but that the loyal and the honest have nothing to fear, and we endorse this opinion with an Indian experience now extending over a quarter of a century. Instead of addressing "a very strong petition to the Government" against the action of the Intelligence Department, the Indian Association should be foremost in keeping the Government informed of all public matters of interest which the official agency may not be able to reach ; and where the working of the Department is objectionable there should be no delicacy in exposing it to the light of day, and subjecting it to the severest public scrutiny. We are not betraying confidence, but it must be within Sir Lepel Griffin's own knowledge that, in the Punjab at least, the Intelligence Department is supplied with much reliable and important information by Native gentlemen, whose loyalty and influence are alike indisputable.

A NATIVE WEDDING AT NAINI TAL.

A European lady contributes the following account of a Native wedding to the Phoenix. This wedding has been the talk of our little station for a month at least. When the father of the bride, who is ten years old, began to order the wedding feast he had 500 tons of grain ground for the composition of all sorts of Native delicacies not only for the delectation of his guests, but for the poor also who, for three weeks after the wedding day, are allowed to come to his house to be fed. The cooking of sweets began a month ago. One thousand rupees worth of ghee was purchased for the feast, which lasted only three days. Then 500 lbs. of sweets were ordered, two tons of sugar, rice and vermicelli ad libitum, with great quantities of milk, and you have the component parts of the wedding breakfast. This particular caste eat no meat, neither do they drink anything but water, and behold, they are rolling in fat and money. The rice is boiled in milk, and then in ghee, and served up piping hot. The vermicelli (made out here) is also boiled in milk, and served hot likewise, with garniture of dates, plums and spices. This is considered the "plat de resistance," and I can answer for its excellence even without the dates, plums, and spices. The bridegroom (who is twelve years old) is the son of the rich Bengal banker, Lalla Bunsee Lal. The crowd of each day of the feast was very great.

It was indeed, take it all in all, a curious sight, most unreal, and totally unlike the nineteenth century. The street was thronged to suffocation by foot passengers arrayed in every imaginable colour, by strings of "rutts," which are extraordinary antediluvian vehicles, drawn by magnificent bullocks, with their horns covered in bright cloth, their mysterious trappings and great housings embroidered in gold or silver, and hung with silver bells. The vehicle itself rejoices in four ponderous wheels elaborately picked out in colours, and the body of the machine looks like a pagoda, with gilded and painted cupola. A string of 200 of these trotted by, making music at every step. The beautiful flowers we had seen in the morning were carried on the heads of servitors, making a gallant show, but the mob seized on them, and in an instant they were torn to fragments, and scattered about in the search for the money concealed within each flower. It seemed a dreadful piece of vandalism, but it is the custom. After this the Police made a lane down the centre of the street, and the presents to the bride were paraded. First drove past a very handsome barouch and a pair of spanking greys, which were with difficulty held in by a pair of running footmen in black and scarlet liveries, while the coachman seemed to take it very easy on the box. Then ten lovely horses were led by. They had saddle-cloths richly embroidered in gold, and silver collars and chains on their necks, and some of them scarlet garters (pieces of red stuff tied over their knees). This appendage was to take off Nuzzar, or the evil eye! Next ten elephants with silver howdahs passed. They carried the wedding jewels, and their trappings were gorgeous, got up just as we see in highly-coloured picture-books. Then, after a time, an elephant, magnificently caparisoned, passed slowly along, while two men from the howdahs flung handfuls of pice as fast as they could to the populace, who, you may be sure, were not slow to gather up the unusual shower. Through all the by-lanes and streets went this procession, the crowd becoming greater at every turning. The police, hard pressed, had to charge them to make way for the elephant, which was losing his temper at the unusual commotion; and to quiet him, his driver (the Mahout) stuck the spike with which he manages him deep into his head, and kept it there while they marched through the town. Several elephants had to be treated in like manner, as the only way of making them obedient, the crowd excited them so, and the people in their struggle for the money would fall three or four deep under their feet, perfectly reckless of consequences. There were no deaths reported, but plenty of blood was spilt, chiefly, I believe, by the policemen's staves. When this naughty elephant's howdah was emptied of pice, another came on—four in all, the last laden with rupees. These were scattered by Bunsee Lal himself. All this largesse amounting to Rs. 10,000 was his; and he spent it on the poor. Then his Regiment, preceded by a band of Highlanders with veritable Highland pipes, which they played remarkably well, marched past, and then the boy bridegroom, in a Falkee, "stopped the way." The boy's face we could not see, for he wore a veil of flowers which reached to his waist. His head was covered with a glittering crown, and his long coat was stiff with jewels. He retired within old Bluebeard's house amidst a flourish of trumpets, and so ended the day's pageant. The next day Bunsee Lal distributed two cart-loads of pice quietly along on his first march towards home. The bride and bridegroom see each other en grande tenue for the first time, in presence of their respective relations, and they play about in the mud and dust at the back of the house like any other naughty little boy and girl. A great dinner is given, and all the remains of the feast are given to the poor, who still linger at the gates. The sweeper caste come in for pickings now. Every article of clothing which the bride or bridegroom have ever worn is handed over to the girl's nurse, and the boy's sweeper—the bedding, the Indian shawls, everything. In the case of death the custom is the same. To be sure, they deserve reward, for the sweepers are the only caste which will pay the last rites to the dead. The next day the Europeans were invited to go and drink the health of the Nouveaux Maries.

The third and last scene was enacted the next day, when the bride left her home with her husband—by the way, they called him the brat, which is the vernacular for bridegroom, and in this instance the cap fits, for he is but a "brat" of twelve years of age—and his father, accompanied by three table servants and her nurse. From the time she bids good-bye to her parents until she has left her Native city several miles behind, she cries out at the top of her voice, "Why do you take me from my father and mother?" and such-like lamentations, but when well on the road her eyes are soon dried and this genuine or affected grief set aside. After three days one of her servants returns to report about her health, and at the end of ten days the bride herself comes back to her father's home and becomes a "purdah" woman, which means that outside that enclosure she never goes. There is never again a pageant in her honour. If she is greatly tempted to see the world of her street she cuts a hole large enough for one eye to peep through, and if she is caught while at it goodness help her. She must never unveil her face even before her brother. She dare not eat with her husband. She eats what he leaves after he is done. No man must ever enter within the purdah except her father or husband. She has no joy on earth, and she is taught that a woman has no soul! Most husbands would sooner let their wives die than let her see a doctor, even a Native one.

CHARITY.

A TALE OF MODERN CHRISTIANITY.

In an ultra-mundane island,
 In a transatlantic sea,
 Lived a peaceful, savage people
 In serene tranquillity.
 No elements of discord e'er
 Disturbed their peaceful life,
 Until deeds of Christian kindness
 Sowed the elements of strife.

In a fashionable office,
 In a fashionable street,
 With benevolent intention
 Many Christian people meet.
 A door-plate tells the object
 Of that good society,
 'Tis "To propagate the Gospel
 And clothe Native nudity."

With, for patronage, a Duchess
 And a Countess "in the chair,"
 A society of ladies
 Meet in weekly conclave there.
 And to propagate the Gospel
 In that transatlantic sea,
 They hire an ugly parson
 On a handsome salary.

Then, an erudite old maiden,
 Blushing deeply—said, "they should Take some steps to light the darkness
 Of their erring sisterhood.
 For, a highly finished nose-ring,
 And some sea-shells in the hair,
 Was not quite sufficient clothing
 For a modest maid to wear."

So, they held a Dorcas meeting,
 Which, as everybody knows,
 Is a place to whisper scandal
 And to manufacture clothes.

And they whispered naughty stories
With a truly Christian smile,
While they made all sorts of garments
For the ultra-mundane isle.

They hemmed handkerchiefs and towels ;
They made bonnets ; they made frocks ;
And knitted gorgeous comforters
And silk and cotton socks.
To clothe the natives à la mode,
Such was their fixed intention ;
And so they made some articles,
Whose names I dare not mention—

Then that missionary landed
On that island's coral stand,
And dealt out the Dorcas presents,
With a truly lavish hand.
(The squaws in garments masculine Their graceful limbs attired,
The chiefs in female underclothes
Were very much admired.)

He then built himself a mansion
With a chapel by its side ;
And a most extensive graveyard,
For parishioners that died.
But, his flock was non-existent
Save for two tame converts, who Being reprobates and stupid
Could get nothing else to do.

Now these charitable presents
Led to envy, rage, and grief,
For the man that got a muffler
Longed to have a handkerchief.
While others, discontented,
Said they really felt a loathing
For any other present than A piece of underclothing.

Then they took to litigation,
And divorces were the rage ;
And they copied all the vices
Of the most immoral age.
They lied and cheated, swore and drank,
In fact, I must confess
That they took to Christian customs
When they took to Christian dress.

But, at length they saw the folly
Of their newly-fangled ways,
And they went back to the customs
Of their ante-Christian days.
And, being naturally angry
With the missionary, said
"Confound your Christianity,"
And knocked him on the head.

Oh ! ye charitable ladies,
Pain and misery you'll meet
Near that fashionable office
In that fashionable street.
First see your fellow-countrymen
From pain and sin are free,
And then send your missionary
To your transatlantic sea.

* If necessary, the Serapis on this voyage will proceed to Bombay, via the Cape of Good Hope, to embark the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade.
† The dates of this voyage are subject to alteration if the Serapis proceeds out via the Cape.

THE tenure of office of the Principal Veterinary Surgeon in India—Mr. George A. Oliphant—Bengal Establishment, is likely to be extended, there being some difficulty in the way of his relief this year.

On the afternoon of July 29 a serious accident occurred on the Mall, Simla. A pony, being ridden by Lieutenant Rooke, of the Wiltshire Regiment, bolted, and after knocking down a Jhampani, threw its rider. Mr. Rooke was terribly smashed, and his face disfigured beyond recognition. He was removed to hospital, and did not recover consciousness for some hours. The Jhampani has since died.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 28, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Seen from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

BROAD ARROW

AND
NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

A MONTHLY RECORD OF INFORMATION FOR

PLANTERS OF

Tea, Cocoa, Cinchona, Coffee, Indianrubber, Sugar, Palms, Cotton, Cardamoms, Kola, Coca, Cinnamon, Nutmegs, Fibrous plants, and other Products suited for Cultivation in the Tropics.

[Published at Observer Office, Colombo, Ceylon, on or about the 1st of each month. Commenced in June, 1881.]

"THE TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST" has now an assured position in its large circulation in Ceylon, Southern and even Central and Northern India, the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Northern Australia, Queensland, Central America, Natal, Mauritius, and the West Indies. From all sub-tropical planting settlements we have had cordial approval of the publication and an encouraging measure of support. The English, Indian, and Colonial Press have spoken in commendatory terms of the T. A., as also Directors of Public Gardens, from Sir Joseph Hooker, F.R.S., downwards, and so have all planters.

* * No planter should be without it

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies Central America being included in that term, or connected with agriculture, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repository of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

* * For the sale of plants, seeds, machinery, implements, &c., used in tropical (tea, sugar, fibres, &c.) agriculture, no better advertising medium exists.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

Scenes and Incidents on Board a Cunarder from Liverpool to New York.

ATTENTION has already been drawn to the remarkably fast steaming of one of our mercantile fleet retained by the Lords of the Admiralty as an ocean cruiser in the event of war, we are glad to give our readers the actual performance of the vessel referred to, the Cunard steamer, Etruria, as follows: She left Queenstown at 1 p.m. on the Sunday, and by noon of Monday 455 knots were logged. From that time till noon of Tuesday the distance steamed was 458 knots. Up to the same hour on Wednesday 496, Thursday 485, Friday 503, and from noon on that day until 10.25 a.m. on Saturday 457 knots. It will be noticed that the Friday's running was something phenomenal, for allowing that day to be equal to 24 hours, the rate of steaming was 20.3 knots per hour. No higher rate of speed, even of the fastest torpedo boats, has been recorded for a continuous day's steaming.

Reaching the company's wharf in New York, in time to land her passengers at 3 p.m. on the Saturday, a feat which has never before been accomplished by a steamer leaving Europe on the previous Sunday afternoon.

Of all the great Atlantic steamship lines the Cunard still stands without a rival in popularity. Its steamers are not only the fastest, but excel all in comfort and general attendance. Life on board one of these floating palaces is not, as some may suppose, one of dull routine, but full of incidents; acquaintances are quickly made, friendships are established of which many interesting tales are told in after years.

A late United States Consul at one of the English ports relates the following:—

"On my last voyage from England, on one of the Cunard Steamers, I noticed one morning, after a few days out of port, a young man hobbling about on the upper deck, supported by crutches and seeming to move with extreme difficulty and no little pain. He was well dressed and of exceedingly handsome countenance, but his limbs were emaciated and his face sallow, which bore traces of long suffering. As he seemed to have no attendant or companion, he at once attracted my sympathies, and I went up to him as he leaned against the taffrail looking out on the foaming track which the steamer was making. 'Excuse me, my young friend,' I said, 'touching him gently on the shoulder, you appear to be hardly able or strong enough to trust yourself unattended on an ocean voyage, but if you require any assistance I shall be glad to help you.' 'You are very kind,' he replied in a weak voice, 'but I require no present aid beyond my crutches, which enable me to pass from my state-room up here to get the benefit of the sunshine and the sea breeze.' 'You have been a great sufferer, no doubt,' I said, 'and I judge that you have been afflicted with rheumatism, whose prevalence and intensity seem to be on an alarming increase both in England and America.' 'You are right,' he answered. 'I have been its victim for two years, and after failing to find relief from medical skill, have lately tried the springs of Carlsbad and Vichy; but they have done me no good, and I am now on my return home to Missouri to die, I suppose. I shall be content if life is spared me to reach my mother's presence. She is a widow, and I am her only child.' There was a pathos in this speech which affected me profoundly, and awakened in me a deeper sympathy than I had felt before. I had no words to answer him, and stood silently beside him, watching the snowy wake of the ship. While thus standing, my thoughts reverted to a child—a ten-year old boy—of a neighbourhood of mine, residing near my consulate residence, who had been cured of a stubborn case of rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, and I remembered the steward of the ship had told me the day before that he had cured himself of a very severe attack of the gout in New York, just before his last voyage, by the use of the remedy. I at once left my young friend and went below to find the steward. I not only found him off duty, but discovered that he had a bottle of the Oil in his locker, which he had carried across the ocean in case of another attack. He readily parted with it on my representation, and, hurrying up again, I soon persuaded the young man to allow me to take him to his berth and apply the remedy. After doing so, I covered him up snugly in bed, and requested him not to get up until I should see him again. That evening I returned to his state-room, and found him sleeping peacefully and breathing gently. I roused him, and inquired how he felt. 'Like a new man,' he answered, with a grateful smile. 'I feel no pain, and am able to stretch my limbs without difficulty.' 'I think I'll get up,' 'No, don't get up to-night,' I said, 'but let me rub you again with the Oil, and in the morning you will be much better able to go above.' I then applied the Oil, again rubbing his knees, ankles, and arms thoroughly, until he said he felt as if he had a mustard poultice all over his body. I then left him. The next morning when I went up on deck, I found my patient waiting for me with a smiling face, and without his crutches. I don't think I ever felt so happy in my life. To make a long story short, I attended him closely during the rest of our voyage—some four days—applying the Oil every night, and guarding him against too much exposure to the fresh and damp spring breezes; and on landing at New York he was able, without assistance, to mount the hotel omnibus and go to the Astor House. I called on him two days later, and found him actually engaged in packing his trunk, preparatory to starting for his home that evening. With a grateful smile he welcomed me, and pointing to a box carefully done up in thick brown paper, he said:—'That is a dozen bottles of St. Jacobs Oil, which I have just purchased from Hahnut, the chemist across the way, and I am taking them home to show my good mother what has saved her son's life and restored him to her in health. If you should ever visit Sedalia, in Missouri, I will show you a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil enshrined in a silver and gold casket, which we shall keep as an ornament, as well as a memento of our meeting on the Cunard steamer.' We parted, after an hour's pleasant chat, with mutual good-will and esteem, and a few weeks afterwards I received a letter from him telling me he was in perfect health, and containing many grateful expressions of his affectionate regards.

Perhaps there is no preparation in the world which enjoys the same degree of success and popularity as St. Jacobs Oil. Its sale far exceeds that of any other Proprietary Medicine, and exceeds by ten times that of all other liniments and embrocations combined. This wonderful success rests on the solid foundation of merit which St. Jacobs Oil possesses, combined with original, dignified, and systematic advertising, which has always characterised the announcements of the Proprietors. The name of St. Jacobs Oil has become a household word in every civilised country in the world. The great success and popularity of the Oil has become the subject of comment by almost the entire Press of the country. In many instances the leading articles of large and influential papers have been devoted to the details of what seemed to be almost magical cures effected by the use of St. Jacobs Oil in local cases, coming under the immediate attention of the publishers. St. Jacobs Oil is endorsed by statesmen, judges, the clergy, the medical profession, and people in every walk of life. The curative powers of St. Jacobs Oil are simply marvellous. It is wholly an outward application. It conquers pain quickly and surely. It acts like magic. It penetrates to the seat of the disease. It cures, even when everything else has failed. A single trial will convince the most incredulous. It has cured thousands of cases of rheumatism and neuralgia, which had resisted treatment for the greater part of a lifetime. After the most thorough and practical test, St. Jacobs Oil has received Six Gold Medals at different International Exhibitions for its marvellous power to conquer pain. It is used extensively in the leading Hospitals and Dispensaries of the metropolis and provincial cities, and also on board Her Majesty's Troopships and the Cunard Steamship Company's Fleet. Put up in white wrappers for human use, and in yellow wrappers for Veterinary purposes, price 2s. 6d. per bottle, of all dealers in Medicine throughout the world, or sent post free by the proprietors, The Charles A. Vogeler Company, 45 Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 7th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 5th August; and from Calcutta to the 4th August.

THE Viceroy will leave Simla about the middle of November, arriving at Calcutta on December 1st.

It is rumoured that Lord and Lady Dufferin will after all visit Cashmere in October, and that they will be accompanied by Sir Charles Aitchison and family.

LORD DUFFERIN granted Sir Asman Jah an interview at Simla on July 30th. It was quite private, the only person present being Mr. Faridunji, who acted as interpreter. The interview was of a very cordial character on both sides. The Minister reviewed the Nizam's assurances of loyalty and readiness, if desired, to contribute to the defence of the Empire in any way that might be thought desirable, and the Viceroy, in acknowledging this, spoke in terms of warm appreciation. Sir Asman Jah also introduced the subject of the junction of the Hyderabad Railway system with the Bengal-Nagpur line, Lord Dufferin suggesting that he should first discuss this subject with the Public Works Member of Council. Sir Asman Jah was to leave Simla on the 9th inst. on his return journey to Hyderabad.

THE Commander-in-Chief leaves Simla on the first of his cold weather tours in September. He will inspect the hill cantonments south-east of Simla as far as Kurpa Tal.

LORD CONNEMARA visited the Kolar Gold-fields on August 1st, inspecting the Nundydroog, Ooregum, and Mysore mines. At the first he was shown several bars of gold and specimens of ore. On visiting the Mysore mine he expressed surprise at the extensive scale of the works where crushing is progressing. In his first tour Lord Connemara goes to Malabar, Canara, Dharwar, Bellary, Nellore, and Triputy.

MR. WARE EDGAR has left Darjeeling for Calcutta, where he will take charge of the Chief Secretaryship from Mr. Macaulay. When Sir Stuart Bayley returns from his tour in Western Bengal Mr. Edgar will accompany him to Dacca and the other Eastern districts which have to be visited.

MR. CORDERY's formal resignation of the Hyderabad Residentsip has reached the Government of India.

SIR F. R. HOGG, the Director-General of the Post Office of India, has been granted three months' leave. Mr. A. U. Fanshawe, Postmaster-General of Bombay, will officiate for him.

MR. P. NOLAN, of the Bengal Civil Service, is to be placed on special duty in connection with the question of emigration from Bengal and Assam to Burma, it having been deemed advisable that such emigration shall be promoted. Mr. Nolan will shortly visit Burma, and see for himself the conditions under which the ordinary cultivator lives.

MR. J. B. PENNINGTON, Madras Civil Service, has resigned the service in consequence, it is thought, of the strictures passed upon him by the Madras Government in connection with the remissions of revenue which, when Collector of Tanjore, he recommended in 1886 to be made to the inhabitants of that district on account of the heavy floods in 1884.

THE magisterial investigation of the charges against Mr. A. T. Crawford, Bombay Civil Service, were to commence on Aug. 16 at Poona. A postponement of the case to that date was granted on Aug. 1, without any evidence being heard by the magistrate.

At a meeting of the Uncovenanted Service, held at Madras, Aug. 4, it was resolved to continue the utmost support to Mr. King, M.P., but to request him to confine himself to asking Parliament for a Committee of Inquiry regarding the grievances of the service.

MR. ROSS, Acting District Judge, Marwar, has obtained permission from the District Court to prosecute Mr. Rhodes Morgan, the complainant in the adultery case tried before the High Court last year, for perjury.

A NATIVE paper states that an aggregate monthly disbursement of Rs. 11,049 has been sanctioned for the 209 ladies (including a discarded Begum) who composed the late ex-King of Oudh's seraglio.

THE Armenian College at Calcutta, the Victoria College (Cooch-Behar), and the Wesley College at Colombo, have been affiliated to the Calcutta University in Arts up to the F.A. Standard.

THE Government of Bombay have decided to apply the gift of Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit of a lakh and a quarter of rupees in erecting a hospital, near the J. J. Hospital, for the treatment of the diseases of women and children.

THE Bengal indigo prospects are still discouraging.

THE body of Mr. Brind, Assistant Commissioner of Kalwet, in the Shwebo District, has been found; death was apparently due to accidental drowning.

OTTAMA, the Myinmu dacoit chief, is causing immense trouble in the district, and the Chief Commissioner has left Mandalay for the scene.

MR. H. BARTELS, the German Consul for Bombay, died on the s.s. Sutlej on her last voyage from Bombay to Aden.

It is expected that the Mysore Extension of the S. M. Railway will be open for traffic from Harihar to Berur (80 miles) in November next.

THE Mahommedans of Bombay have decided not to take part in the National Congress.

SIR GREGORY CHARLES PAUL, Advocate-General of Bengal, has been entertained at dinner by the Calcutta Bar in honour of his having received the K.C.I.E.

OBITUARY.—Brigadier-General Lynch, C.B.; Colonel T. C. Wray, Commanding 2nd Battalion Royal Irish Regiment; Captain H. R. Saunders, West Riding Regiment.

NOTES.

REUTER'S telegram from Simla, dated Aug. 24th, states that:—"Unless unforeseen events supervene, the British Mission will start for Afghanistan on Oct. 1, remaining at Cabul ten days, and getting back to Peshawar by Nov. 1. Mr. Durand, who will be in charge of the mission, assisted in the negotiations which resulted in the Ameer Abdurrahman's visit to Rawul Pindi. Mr. Durand will be accompanied by Sir Donald Wallace, Colonel Neville Chamberlain, and Surgeon C Owen, and an escort of about one hundred Native troops."

THE object of the mission is not stated beyond mentioning that it is undertaken at the request of the Ameer, who has asked that a British officer might be sent to confer with him. A military contemporary says:—"This is one of Reuter's mystifying pieces of Indian news. A great change must certainly have come over the traditional policy of the Afghan rulers if the Ameer now invites a British officer to his capital. He certainly last year invited Dr. O'Meara, the well-known surgeon-dentist at Simla, to Cabul, but that was to look at his teeth. The doctor pluckily accepted the invitation, and went at no little risk to his own life. But the Foreign Secretary to the Government of India could hardly go as a private individual without escort or staff. The fate of Cavnagari can hardly be forgotten. But why should a high official like the Foreign Secretary be deputed to Cabul at the Ameer's bidding?"

ANOTHER British Mission to Cabul will, it is to be hoped, fare better than previous ones. But the object to be gained ought to be something very important to induce the Government of India to send its Foreign Secretary. Reuter, however, is reticent on this point.

THE Times' correspondent at Calcutta telegraphed last week that the Tibetans were to attack the British position at Gnatong in great force on Tuesday last, and "if the enemy prove successful by sheer force of vastly superior numbers in rushing Gnatong by a night attack it is just possible they might swarm into Darjeeling." The Times, however, in a later issue, does its best to calm all fears. "A Tibetan attack on Gnatong was expected on Tuesday, but no news of its occurrence has yet been received. The British force amounts to 2,300 men, and it is believed to be equal to the defence of the position." It is to be hoped so; but the gallant defenders will hardly accept the Times' remark as a compliment.

THE letter purporting to have been written by Rukhmabai, on which we commented last week, turns out not to have been written by that lady at all. She has written to the Indian papers denying the authorship. The letter first appeared in a Madras paper, and the editor certainly regarded it as genuine. We are now informed that it was "a mischievous hoax."

THE Times of India says that there is likely to be a sharp and decisive controversy in Bombay as to whether the Mahomedan community of that city shall or shall not be officially represented at the next Indian National Congress. "Already more than one meeting has been held to consider the question. This course is thoroughly right and proper. If a delegate is elected and sent, well and good; if, on the other hand, the proposal to appoint one is negatived by the general voice of the community, then any Mahomedan from Bombay who may go to Allahabad next December will do so as a private individual, not as the representative of his co-religionists. If the same simple test could be applied in other quarters the hollow farce of self-elected 'delegates' to the Congress would be thoroughly exposed."

It is reported that at the present moment there is a little friction between the Judges of the Bombay High Court and the Government of Bombay regarding the arrears of judicial work in four districts of the Bombay Presidency.

The Government have passed a resolution drawing attention to these arrears, and the Judges have since sent a communication complaining that, inasmuch as they are entrusted with the direct supervision of the administration of justice in the mofussil, they should have been consulted before the Government took any action in the matter.

A PROPOSITION was made some time ago by the Government of India that the portion of the Bombay Army now serving in Beloochistan should be localised in that region, vacancies occurring to be filled up by recruiting in the district. This proposal was not approved of by the military authorities in Bombay, as tending to deprive other regiments of the Bombay Army of their fair share of frontier service. It is now said that the India Office is in favour of this arrangement.

WRITING on the Crawford case, the Indian Spectator says:—"In the presence of this huge scandal would it be impertinent to ask why the Government insist upon the maintenance of these Commissionerships of Divisions? It has been shown that a Commissioner's office is little more than a medium of communication between the Secretariat and the district officers. Is it worth while keeping it up at such a cost? Including the Rs. 50,000 odd paid to the Commissioner alone every year, the establishment cannot but entail a heavy drain on the resources of the Government. This is how the money goes. Some departments are starved, while others suffer from congestion. The latter is evidently the case with the Department of Revenue Commissioners."

THE Calcutta Bar has given a congratulatory dinner to Sir G. C. Paul, in recognition of his having been made a K.C.I.E. Complimentary speeches were, of course, the order of the entertainment, and Sir G. Paul was good enough to explain how he rose to this distinguished honour. He had always discharged his duties as Government Advocate with "industry, zeal, and care, never heeding consequences, personal results, or worldly honours." Thus modestly he spoke:—"As success has under the circumstances mentioned by me attended me in my career, I have no hesitation in asserting that the road to distinction and honour lies open to any one of you who, having attained a certain degree of eminence in his profession, may desire and endeavour to reach it by means of industry and perseverance, and by the cultivation of those qualities which ennoble the mind and command the admiration of mankind."

To comment on the above would be to paint the lily or gild refined gold, but the Pioneer attempts this. It says:—"The quotation is too perfect to be mutilated, but on reading it the irreverent Anglo-Indian may be forgiven for thinking: 'If he said all that for a K.C.I.E., what in the dictionary would he have done had they made him a K.C.S.I.?' The qualities which ennoble the mind and command the admiration of mankind seem to bloom like spring flowers under the influence of the Fountain of Honour."

DRÖITWICH BRINE BATHS.—A lecture was delivered by Staff-Surgeon J. C. Dickinson, on Friday, August 17, at St. James's Hall, on "Droitwich as a Health Resort," and the treatment and cure of rheumatism in all its varieties, gout, sciatica, and lumbago, by means of the Brine Baths. In the course of the lecture Mr. Dickinson pointed out the value of this Spa for Anglo-Indians suffering from tropical debility and malarial cachexia. The brine baths also act as a tonic, and those who are suffering from nervous debility and apprehensiveness rapidly recover their health and strength. Mr. Dickinson narrated some very remarkable cases of sciatica and rheumatism that had completely recovered from a visit to Droitwich. His account of the St. Andrew's Baths, the Raven Hotel, and the agrémens of the place, the result of a personal visit, show that the upper town of Droitwich is well suited for invalids. Mr. John Corbett, M.P., who owns most of Droitwich, has expended £40,000 in improving the town, and making it a first-class health resort. The temperature is never very cold from the absence of wind, and the rainfall is below the average, so that Droitwich is equally suitable as a summer and winter health-resort.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 19.

The Bombay Government is severely censured by the European and Native Press throughout the whole of India for its extraordinary and unfair conduct in withdrawing a recent case against a Bombay official from the magistrate, behind the back of the accused, in order to set up a special commission for his trial. An official of long and tried merit, equipped with an unusually brilliant record of very distinguished public service covering a period of over thirty years, and holding a position inferior alone to those of the Governor and the Commander-in-Chief, is suddenly arrested by the police upon a warrant admittedly granted upon utterly insufficient information and dragged into a criminal dock. An adjournment is then asked for by the Government and granted by the magistrate on the distinct pledge that on that date the Government would be prepared to proceed with the case. In the meantime the Government, finding that it possesses no legal evidence, makes an ex parte application behind the back of the accused and succeeds in withdrawing the case, and then announces its intention to appoint a special commission of its own to try the accused. With the fresh recollection of the grave scandal created by the recent trial of the Collector of Cambay by a Bombay special commission, and the reversal of the finding and the severe censure of the Bombay Government by the Secretary of State in that matter, there is little wonder that the Press should express general indignation at the very unjustifiable course adopted by the Bombay Government. In the present case there is no wish exhibited by the Press to screen the accused. It is simply urged that the accused should receive a like measure of justice accorded to the meanest coolie in India—namely, the right of public trial in a duly constituted criminal Court, and subject to the sanction and protection of the ordinary criminal law and procedure equally applicable to all classes, irrespectively of status, office, creed, or race. This contention appears only fair and reasonable.

Offers by Native Princes of military support will be accepted in a qualified form. A certain portion of each feudatory army will be maintained fully equipped by each State for immediate service. Certain representatives of the feudatory Princes will meet at Simla shortly to discuss details. The Ameer of Cabul is precluded from attending the durbār by a severe attack of gout.

The Indian Government has been strongly urged by the local Government to despatch a punitive expedition to the Chittagong Hills. Numerous raids into British territory are anticipated from the existing restlessness of the tribes.

Cholera is very active in the Punjab. Every precaution is being adopted to guard against the spreading of the disease.

The Viceroy will return to Calcutta on December 1 and await the arrival of the Marquis of Lansdowne on the 10th, and will start for Europe the same evening.

A Government resolution is published notifying the conversion into Four per Cents. of stock notes, or their purchase at par. The resolution admits with regret the complete failure of the original scheme.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 18.

The last official bulletin from Upper Burma reports numerous petty affairs with dacoits. In Kyaukse a large dacoit gang is giving trouble. Fifty of the military police, commanded by Superintendent Annesley, had a sharp encounter near Beelin with 300 dacoits, commanded by the Setkya Prince, an Alompra pretender. The police drove the dacoits from three small stockades with a loss of twelve killed. The dacoits then occupied a strong stockade on a hill, whence the police were unable to dislodge them, and retired. The police loss was two killed and six wounded. A reinforcement of a hundred military police was sent to Superintendent Annesley.

Intelligence from the Ruby Mines states that a large body of dacoits has assembled between Mainlong and Thengoo under the Choungwa Prince.

A serious inundation has occurred in the Settang Valley. The Pagaing embankment in the Pegu district south-east of Mandalay burst. A large tract of country was inundated, and much injury done to the paddy cultivation.

The Tharrawaddy district continues in a very unsatisfactory condition. Renewed attempts are anticipated to cut the railway line to Prome, near Zeegon, the scene of the late outrage. The line is strongly guarded, and at night is patrolled by numerous parties of police under European inspectors. The most serious feature in connection with the recent attack on the railway is that nearly all the people concerned are villagers, hitherto known as respectable men, and unconnected with dacoits or bad characters. They appear to have been driven to make the attack by the indiscriminate imposition of punitive taxes by the Deputy Commissioner.

The cholera is very bad in the Tharrawaddy district. At a village called Tapun, comprising 340 houses, 170 deaths have occurred.

The railway to Mandalay is practically completed.

RANGOON, AUG. 25.

The Bhamo correspondent of the Rangoon Gazette telegraphs that the Chinese Governor of Yunnan has prohibited salt being sent across the frontier. If this prove correct it will seriously interfere with the prosperity of Bhamo, where a large salt trade with Yunnan had sprung up. The Local Government is without information as to the alleged action of the Chinese authorities.

There is no material change in the condition of Upper Burma. The last official bulletin reports a rather larger number of skirmishes with dacoits than during the previous fortnight. The recent affair at Beelin between the military police and dacoits has attracted attention. Some surprise is expressed that such a large body of dacoits could assemble within three miles of Kyaukse, an important civil station on the railway, and strongly held. The Tiynchin tribe have made a petty raid into British territory near Kalenyo, and carried off some villagers. The so-called Choungwa Prince and his gang have gone southward from Mainlong. It is anticipated this pretender will submit and accept a post as subordinate at Sawbwe under the Thebaw of Sawbwe. The Mainlong district is very much disturbed.

There was an outbreak yesterday at Mandalay Gaol, which was promptly suppressed. Solapan, the head chief of the Red Karenees, who has been giving much trouble by raiding into the vassal Shan States, has sent a messenger to the Chief Commissioner proposing terms of submission.

It is announced that the Government have decided to abolish the indiarubber monopoly and throw open the trade to all willing to pay a license. The same course will soon be adopted with the jade monopoly. It is to be hoped that the Government will pursue a similar wise policy about the Ruby Mines. The abolition of monopolies in Upper Burma will greatly assist the commercial development of the country.

The settlement of the claims against the late Burmese Government is almost completed. The total claims sent in amount to about 99 lakhs. The total amount paid by the Government of India on account of the claims comes to about 8½ lakhs.

The condition of Tenasserim continues very unsatisfactory. Some years have elapsed since the province was visited by the Chief Commissioner of Burma. The local officials, owing to the want of supervision, have altogether neglected their duties, and extraordinary police corruption and oppression have prevailed. A punitive police tax is being levied in Tavoy in a very harsh and injudicious manner. Parties of armed police with fixed bayonets visit houses, carrying off the furniture and in some instances even the food of the people. The collection of the tax is intrusted to the local Burmese official, against whom detailed charges of oppression and corruption have been made by a number of respectable inhabitants of Tavoy. All inquiry into charges against this man has been refused by the Local Government. The present system pursued by the Local Government in Tenasserim must result in exasperating the people and further alienating them.

SIKKIM.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 19.

Our quarrel with Tibet is assuming a more serious aspect, and promises, unless the invaders are soon severely defeated and thence expelled from Sikkim, to develop into a frontier war of no inconsiderable importance. This has always proved the inevitable result to India of endeavouring to maintain a purely defensive attitude. The political reasons are invariably ignored, while military inactivity is certain to be misunderstood and ascribed to enfeebled resources, or more generally to timid reluctance to try armed conclusions with a braver and superior power to that of our own. Indian history teaches us by too many pregnant examples that a hesitant and halting policy in Eastern warfare is almost sure to end in failure, and is calculated, if persisted in, to court sooner or later serious military disaster.

This matter, which at first was but of trifling moment, has developed now into the most important political question in India, as it involves not only our relations with all the Eastern frontier States, but the wider issues of our relations with China. It would appear from recent events that China is powerless to exert any effectual authority in Tibet. The arrival of the Chinese Ambassador at Lhasa has apparently rather stimulated the Tibetan Government than otherwise to more strenuous war preparations, and to have been regarded at Lhasa as an expected signal for an immediate endeavour to drive the British troops out of Sikkim.

It is reported that the Tibetan levies now amount to some 15,000, and that an auxiliary force of 3,000 Bhuteas are prepared to support them as military allies in an attack upon our entrenchments. It is rumoured that this attack will be delivered on the 21st, so as to anticipate the arrival of reinforcements. Should the enemy prove successful by sheer force of vastly superior numbers in rushing Gnatong by a night attack it is just possible they might swarm into Darjeeling, as, save for a handful of Goorkha police, Darjeeling has been entirely denuded of military protection. A large number of women and children reside there, and the result of advancing the whole garrison to the front has induced temporary panic. This was somewhat increased by the arrest in the station itself of two Tibetan spies. However, orders have now been issued to replace the garrison by 100 men of the Derbyshire Regiment from Dum Dum.

The Tibetan force is threatening an advance on Entchi, which is situated in the heart of Sikkim, and is the present residence of the Rajah. A party has crossed the Nathula Pass and pushed on to Lagyapla, on the Entchi road. The enemy has been engaged in erecting fortified walls in all directions.

In the meantime, as a counter movement, a road from Rhenock Bazaar to Patoyoung has been opened out by the Pioneers. From this point Entchi is easily accessible. Reinforcements, 700 strong, are on their way to Sikkim. Colonel Graham's original force of 1,600 men has been increased by 275 Europeans and four guns. On the arrival of the reinforcements his command will be increased to 2,300 and eight guns. Gnatong will be garrisoned out of this force by 500 English, 500 Goorkhas, and 500 Pioneers.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE RAJPUTS.

(Madras Times.)

The extensive and irregularly defined territory known as Rajputana, stretching from the Vindhya Hills on the south-east, almost up to the river Indus on the north-west, and from the Runn of Cutch on the south-west, to the Punjab on the north-east, is estimated to have a total area of 135,000 square miles, and a population of ten-and-a-half millions. It is intersected by the Aravulli Mountains running in a line nearly north-east and south-west, and about three-fifths of it lie to the north-west of this line, and two-fifths to the south-east. In its very centre is the British district of Ajmere-Mainwara, which was acquired by our Government in 1818 and 1820. All around this district lie the twenty Native States of which it is otherwise composed, each State having its own separate chief and independent government, under the surveillance of the Agent of the Governor-General, who has his head-quarters at Mount Abo, and who is, besides, ex-officio Commissioner of Ajmere. The history of the Rajputs, whose settlement in India dates from a very remote period, is replete with records of feuds amongst each other, and struggles against the vast forces of the Mogul Emperor, and other Mahomedan invaders. Although the Rajput clans have always maintained a sort of independence under their own chieftains, their power has been frequently shattered by the overwhelming forces sent against them from Delhi. Akbar married two princesses of Rajput houses, and gave to Rajput chiefs high commands in his armies, and in later years whole regiments of Rajputs served under the Mogul Emperors, and their cavalry in particular became famous for their headlong charges. But when the Mahratta power arose, in the last century, the tribal authority of the Rajputs collapsed, and the States almost disappeared from history. The country was desolated by a thirty years' incessant war, and exhausted by the relentless exactions of Sindhia and Holkar, and it was only after the victories of the English over these two Princes early in this century, that it began slowly to recover. At length, after the Pindari war in 1817, each State submitted itself to British protection, and Rajputana has ever since enjoyed almost profound peace. The rebellion in 1857 scarcely extended to it, and the chiefs have been distinguished by their loyalty to the Paramount Power.

The Rajputs have a vein of poetry and romance not to be met with in any other part of India. Like the Britons, the Welsh, and the Scotch, they have their bards and poets, who recite the great deeds of their ancestors, and who are held in very high estimation among them. The spirit of clanship still exists, and the chiefs hold their lands in feudal tenure from the Rana or Rajah of the State. The clans of purest blood occupy the first rank amongst them, but there are also numbers of castes which claim to be half-blood Rajputs, or even to less close connection. The Rajputs proper are very proud of their warlike reputation, and most punctilious on points of etiquette and as a landed nobility, and the kinsmen of ruling chiefs, they have been called the aristocracy of the country. It is believed that there is now hardly a ruling family in all India which does not claim descent from, or irregular connection with, some Rajput stock. Distributed over Central India, the Punjab, Sind, and other parts, the origin of those who have left their country might be difficult to trace. The clans still recognized in Rajputana itself are, the Rahtors, the Bhattis, the Kachwaha, the Chauhans, and the Sesodias. Their religion is Hinduism, with a strong infusion of Jainism. With the exception of Tonk, which is under a Mussulman ruler, the chiefs are all Rajputs and Hindus.

Such are the people whose Chiefs the Secretary of State for India described as the leaders of the Hindoo race, and for whom Lords Northbrook and Kimberley, and Bishop Goodwin could scarcely find words sufficient to sound their praises.

The idea which prompted the course of action which has been the object of all these eulogiums was a happy one. In October last, it occurred to the present Agent to the Governor-General in Rajputana that it might be possible to prevail upon all the Rajput Chiefs to agree to a set of rules for regulating the expenses of marriages amongst Rajputs. He accordingly issued a circular, in compliance with which a meeting was held at Ajmere last March, attended by one official, one leading jagirdar and one Charun from each State, for settlement of the question. We published at the time an account of what took place, but the narration will bear repetition. All the Chiefs warmly approved of the Agent's suggestion, and all sent representatives, excepting the Maharawal of Banswara, who excused himself. Several Chiefs expressed opinions that rules applicable to funerals should also be discussed, and the Maharao Raja of Bendi surpassed the others by suggesting that a limit should be placed on the ages of brides and bridegrooms, with a view to putting down child-marriages. The result of the discussions was that the representatives unanimously agreed to the framing of twenty-two rules. The expenses allowable on marriage ceremonies was in future to bear a fixed relation to the income of the parties. Expenses at betrothals were forbidden. The heaviest expenditure of all, the distribution of Tyag, or largess to the Charuns and Bhats—the keepers of secular tradition, and of the genealogies—was very strictly limited. Lastly, no girl was to be allowed to marry under the age of fourteen, and no boy under eighteen. The whole proceedings were remarkable for the unanimity and readiness with which the resolutions were adopted, and the meeting certainly deserves a place in history, as an instance of the possibility of the most conservative classes of Hindus suddenly renouncing customs which have been in vogue among them for a very long period. Whether the reforms will be permanent remains to be seen. Rules have before been framed for stopping excessive expenditure on marriages among Rajputs, but they have proved inoperative. The Agent's special reasons for believing that those now adopted will be effective are that they apply to the whole of Rajputana, and not to its individual States.

THE COLONIZATION OF HILL SANITARIA.

(Nilgiri Observer.)

The Anglo-Indian of fifty years ago probably would have objected to the presence of any poor European in any capacity except as a soldier. A domiciled European community was a contingency he did not contemplate. Hill sanatoria were practically unknown, and for Europeans to live by husbandry in the hot plains seemed to him impossible, as indeed it was so long as heavy drinking was almost a universal custom among Englishmen. As to the Eurasians, the average Anglo-Indian of the old school probably shirked the consideration of their future as much as possible; or if he thought about it at all, perhaps settled in his own mind that the sooner they reverted to Native modes of life the better. Now we have altered all that. We have settled that the word "European" is to apply to all who adhere to European customs and modes of life, irrespective of their descent; and we have a large European community of pure and of mixed blood competing with Natives in handicrafts, and altogether in a position which it would have disgusted the old Anglo-Indian to see members of his own lordly race occupying. This class has not yet taken to agriculture to any extent; but there is a growing perception that this is a mistake on their part, and probably the next century will see flourishing European settlements on our Indian hills. The climate of the Nilgiris is undeniably more suitable for Europeans than that of Australia. The same may be said—though perhaps in a lesser degree—of the hill ranges throughout the Empire; and it is only because of the difficulties thrown in the way by Government officials the European settlers do not come and take possession of the waste lands on all the hills adverted to. Such settlements would be a great source of strength to the Government. Europeans and Asiatics being now on equality before the law, there should be no risk of collision between them; and though the Government of fifty years ago would probably have discouraged such settlements as being likely to lower English prestige in the eyes of Natives, in the happier relations now subsisting this need no longer be feared; and we trust that Government will soon see its way to some active encouragement and help towards the formation of such colonies.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

There are many in India who of late years have spoken and written on this subject: perhaps the difficulty would be to find any official of standing who has not; but there are only one or two men who have put their talk into practical shape. The Central Government has hitherto been content to beat the air; but considering that it has been engaged in this practically unprofitable, if officially fascinating, occupation for the last three years, we might have expected it by this time to have reached tangible ground, and to be ready with some definite proposals. The expectation is but feebly met in the present Resolution. The Government says much, but pledges itself to little; and the atmosphere of the Hunterian periods in which conviction of "the importance of the subject" is expressed, are rarified by qualifications, conditions, and hypotheses almost to the point of vacuity. The conclusion is that the Government should support technical education as an extension of general education: and that it should promote and countenance such technical education of a special character as may be applied to the service of existing industries. As a definition of the field of operation this is unexceptionable; our only complaint is that Government should have been so long in arriving at it; and that having so arrived, it is still quite at sea as to how the definition is to be practically applied. "It would seem necessary," we are told, to begin with such and such industries; in such cases a technical school "will be useful;" to the great railway workshops may "with undoubtedly great advantage" be attached schools of design; "probably" in large stations there will be a demand which will pay, &c.; and finally, "if caution at the beginning secures success; if capital is tempted; if a larger demand for the product of skilled labour springs up," then we are to have a "larger development." Certainly, if caution be a guarantee of success, the Government of India's schemes for technical education should be successful beyond measure, for never was a business approached in a more gingerly fashion. Virtually Local Governments are told to take their own course on the chance that if half-a-dozen hypotheses come off they will have support from head-quarters. There are only two definite suggestions in all this mass of padding, and they are characteristic. One is that a permanent Committee be appointed in each province to report from time to time regarding the annual supply of the appropriate means of technical education; and the other is that each Province undertake an industrial survey. Thus does report beget report. When shall we reach the stage of action? And why has it taken the Government of India three years to find out that it knows nothing about the "extent, character and circumstances of important local industries" in the different Provinces?

THE INDIAN POLICE DETECTIVE.

(Pioneer.)

Our present rural policeman is, unhappily, one of that very numerous class whose education has been sadly neglected. He works, as a rule, without anything that can be called a system, and for his knowledge of the higher methods of his craft he has to trust almost altogether to mother wit. His European officer is not often competent to give him much light or leading. He seldom undertakes an inquiry himself, and has thus only scant opportunities of acquiring that practical familiarity with the working of an investigation which would qualify him to give him instruction or advice. He is for most of his time tied to his desk listening to the reading of diaries. Nor is this so much the fault of the European officer as of the system under which he works. He has so much English and vernacular correspondence, so many returns, registers and accounts to check and compile, so much to do between looking after drill and uniform, his chanda fund and sowars, his guards and escorts, that he has small leisure for purely detective work; and when he goes into camp the time that might be more profitably spent in inquiring into the local condition of crime and the movement of bad characters is fully occupied in the monotonous duty of examining the manifold station registers and answering a string of intricate questions on every point in connection with the administration. There is, in short, too much red-tapeism and too little out-of-door investigation and intercourse with the people. The same departmental fungus attacks the station officer as well. The naksha is the final test of ability and success. As far as figures go one case is very much the same as another, and a really brilliant stroke of detective skill too often goes unrecognised. So the thanadar finds it answer his purpose better to secure a number of convictions on plain or petty charges than to waste his time in investigating more important, but at the same time more intricate, cases. He has to be constantly writing up diaries and reports which to some men seems the object of his existence; and, as if he had not enough to do of his own in the detective line, he has to be a nuisance inspector and process server into the bargain. There is, of course, as a link between him and his European officer, the visiting inspector. He is ordinarily a portly old gentleman who has risen from the ranks, and is looking forward to the inevitable pension. Thus, the only real detective is the despised village watchman who has a working knowledge of the local mauvais sujets; and, as a matter of fact, if either he or the complainant fails to give the investigating officer at the outset of his inquiry a tangible clue to the offenders the station detective seldom meets with success. The village watchman, the very backbone of the force, must be encouraged and better treated. While the improvement of our detective agency is a matter of urgent necessity the more general measures of reform can be no longer delayed. A policeman who does his duty can hardly ever be generally popular, and it is only in the nature of things that his proceedings should bring him into contact with many persons whose interest it is to criticise and vilify him. But, whatever it may cost, the evil odours which at present hang round our police must undergo a process of disinfection.

THE NIZAM'S OFFER.

(Deccan Times.)

The Nizam's offer seems for the present buried out of sight by the malign shadow of the huge Mining Scandal. The sixty lakhs have not, it is true, been as yet accepted, but neither has the offer been withdrawn. The latest suggestion as to the form the Nizam's contribution might take, so as to become more acceptable to the Government of India, was that of a completely equipped and handy force of all arms. If the baleful skill of statesmen will only permit it, the march of events seem to point to the time when an Army Corps of the Nizam's will form an integral portion of the Imperial forces of India on much the same footing as those of the Kings of Saxony and Bavaria. In such an event, inasmuch as their pay practically comes from the same exchequer, the Hyderabad Contingent would be re-united with the Regular Troops under Colonel Nevill and the Golconda Brigade under Major Nawab Afsur Jung. The fighting force which the Nizam would then have under our colours would amount on a peace footing to about 15,000 men and forty guns. The Regular troops and Golconda Brigade, while strong in parade work are, of course, deficient in field training and are wretchedly armed, but new weapons and a twelvemonth under General Stewart would put all this to rights. The professional education of the officers would be a matter of greater difficulty, but this might be met by an interchange of officers between the regiments. Readers would, perhaps, care to see the detail of this force of 16,000 men. Taking the Contingent first, we have 6 Regiments of Infantry of 800 each, or 4,800; of Cavalry, 4 Regiments of 500 each, or 2,000; and Artillery, 4 batteries or 24 guns. In the Regular Troops Colonel Nevill has 5 Regiments of 900 each, or 4,500 Infantry; 4 Regiments of Cavalry at 300 each, or 1,200; with Artillery two Batteries or 12 guns. Comprising the Golconda Brigade under Major Nawab Afsur Jung, we find two Regiments of Infantry of 500 each, 1,000; of Cavalry, 1 Regiment, 300; with 1 Battery of Artillery of 4 guns. This, we believe, gives a total of 10,300 rifles, 3,000 sabres, and 40 guns. This is certainly a handy little force—in physique at this very moment all that could be desired, and after twelve months' training of the weaker portion, with better armament and trained officers, would equal any in our service. Besides, these form only the first line, as the irregular troops, after some weeding, would make an excellent reserve, accustomed, as they have already been, to bearing arms. We have little doubt that the Nizam would be glad to have a well-trained force of this kind; we have even less doubt, looking on the clouds both on the North-West and the North-East, that our Government would be glad of their services—especially as they would be no charge whatever on the overburdened exchequer of the Supreme Government. Is it beyond the compass of statesmanship to settle the terms of an arrangement so much desired by, and so obviously beneficial to, both the contracting parties?

CENTRAL INDIA STATES.

(Madras Mail.)

It was, perhaps, a little unfortunate that Sir Lepel Griffin, towards the expiration of his Agency, should have had upon his hands at the same time three Hindoo princes in their minority. Such, we may be quite certain, was not his view of the case. His feeling of regret, if he entertains any, would rather be excited by his removal from the scene before the fruits of his labours could be gathered and rightly appreciated. Sir Lepel Griffin was much more likely to get on comfortably with princes still in their teens than with adults who had a will of their own, and chose to take their own way without deferring to the prudent counsels of the Governor-General's Agent. We find him, for example, very speedily clashing with the Maharaja of Indore, a wayward, self-opinionated potentate, whose seat on the gadi is already precarious. The Maharaja began only too well, but the pace was too good to last. The abolition of transit duties and of other dues which interfered with the full development of local traffic seemed to augur the dawn of a brighter era. The enlightenment of the youthful Holkar was regarded as a beacon for the guidance of other Native princes. Dark clouds, however, soon came rolling up, and darkened the brief splendour of the horizon. The visit to England proved altogether a disappointment. By his extreme petulance the Maharaja gave offence in the very highest quarters.

Many blunders, no doubt, were made by the officer [at the India Office who endeavoured to] discharge the delicate duties attached to the post of Mehmandar. The exigencies of political life had compelled the Government of the day to make some provision for the son of Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, and as Mr. Fitzgerald had seen something of European official life in two of the Presidency towns it was taken for granted that he must be familiar with the usages and traditions of Native Court life, and would know exactly how to treat each distinguished visitor to England according to his social position in India. The event did not justify those sanguine expectations. Not many years ago Sir John Kaye contrived to give perfect satisfaction to the comparatively few Indian magnates who, in those days, ventured to cross the dark waters, nor did he find it necessary to neglect his more onerous functions as Political Secretary. After the lamentable assassination of Lord Mayo it was deemed needful to find some suitable appointment for Colonel Owen Burn in connection with the India Office. As no vacancy presented itself the novel post of Mehmandar was created, but Colonel Burn being an universal favourite no outcry was raised. Upon Colonel Burn's return to India with Lord Lytton the office of Indian Chamberlain might very well have been abolished, and such, doubtless, would have been the case had it not just then happened that Captain Fitzgerald's services as his father's Aide-de-Camp in Bombay were held to entitle him to some substantial token of Imperial gratitude. He was, therefore, chosen to succeed Sir Owen Burn, and more recently, in recognition of his association with the Indian potentates assembled in London to do honour to their Sovereign, he received the distinction of Knighthood of the Indian Empire, to add to the Companionship of the Star of India which he received at the beginning of last year. It was mainly due to the mismanagement of this ill-chosen functionary that Maharaja Holkar was provoked into entering upon a line of conduct directly opposed to the bright promise of his earlier days. The forced resignation of his able Minister Dewan Raghunath Rao marked a further descent down the decline which leads from the gadi to a pensioned exile.

It is pleasant to turn from Sir Lepel Griffin's sharp censure of the Maharaja of Indore to the praise he has freely bestowed upon the Council of Regency by which the important State of Gwalior is being governed. That Council has the good fortune to be presided over by Rajah Sir Ganpat Rao, who, though a lover of ancient times and customs, has fully recognised and accepted the new British policy of introducing practical reforms, and of purifying the local Government from its lowest to its highest departments. Colonel Bannerman, assisted by Babu Sahib Sitole, was closely occupied for more than five months in ferreting out, and taking account of the treasure collected, and partially secreted by the late Maharaja. The total amount exceeded six crores of rupees in silver coin, and upwards of one crore in gold and jewels. This is not the place to discuss the late Maharaja's motive for hoarding his money. He may simply have been moved by avarice, of which George Wither quaintly remarks, "There is no passion that's more vile and base : and yet as common as to have a face." It may be that covetousness was no part of his Highness's character. He may have cherished no secret designs. Military ambition may have had nothing to do with this accumulation of wealth in small silver coins so convenient for popular largesses, or even for the payment of troops. In any case his Highness has passed away. Sir Lepel Griffin was manifestly justified in bringing his utmost influence to bear upon the Council of Regency to induce it to invest three-and-a-half millions in Government paper at 4 per cent. The Resident, indeed, is hopeful that the Council will agree to lend the Government a still larger sum, as the amount of treasure at Gwalior exceeds the bounds of safety. Hitherto no return has been received from these vast hoards. Nothing has been done with them for the public good. No profitable undertakings have been set on foot or encouraged. The taxpayers have been despoiled to no purpose. In the face of such a large surplus it would clearly have been quite practicable to have reduced the burden of taxation, and so far have lightened the lot of the industrial population. Be that as it may, the Council of Regency was at first indisposed to loosen its hold upon this treasure, the amount of which may yet, perchance, be increased ; but in the end it yielded to the prudent counsels of Sir Ganpat Rao and the steady pressure applied by the Resident. The loan is to be repaid by instalments on the present Maharaja's attainment of his majority, and in the meantime a revenue of twenty lakhs per annum has been placed at the disposal of the Regency, by whom it will be probably be applied to local public works. For the rest, the internal condition of the principality is not all that might be desired. In certain districts dacoity is still disgracefully prevalent, though specially selected Native police officers have been deputed to put down that offence and to punish the law-breakers. Their failure is easily explained. "The country gentlemen and Rajput Thakurs are themselves the instigators of dacoity, the protectors of the dacoits, and the receivers of stolen property." In such circumstances it would be unfair to expect any good results from the employment of the Native police, and in all probability a British officer will have to be sent to suppress systematic outrages. It is pleasant to learn that the Maharaja himself is "a child of great promise, and of an excellent and affectionate disposition."

BENGAL.

DURING the past quarter the Kidderpur docks have made satisfactory progress. This much is evident from the official statement, which is too technical and statistical to convey much else to the lay mind. The total expenditure now amounts to over 97 lakhs, of which 23½ were for the land.

ANOTHER large company of coolies has just left Calcutta for British Guiana in the sailing ship Sheila. The Sheila carries 547 coolies, including 133 women and 85 boys and girls. Seven old coolies are returning, and have paid Rs. 140 each as passage-money, being ineligible as contract coolies mainly on account of age. The remittances of the returned emigrants amounted to Rs. 12,104, of which Rs. 3,270 belonged to passengers, and Rs. 8,834 to contract coolies. A Sirdar returned four months ago to India, with over Rs. 10,000, and, strange to say, he decided to return, as a contract servant, after lodging Rs. 7,750 for remittance to the colony and paying his wife's passage.

THE whole Jewish community of India will grieve to learn that Mr. Aaron Shalome Gubboy died on Aug. 4, after a long illness. Mr. Gubboy was held in the warmest regard by his fellow-religionists, and his great liberality and unfailing kindness will be long remembered. The deceased, who was sixty-two years of age, was born in Bagdad, and came to Calcutta forty years ago. Along with his younger brother, Mr. Elias S. Gubboy, he started business, acting as agent for various mercantile firms in Bombay and Arabia. The firm of Messrs. Elias S. Gubboy and Co. soon became well known, and shared in the once lucrative opium trade, their dealings bringing them into contact with Messrs. Sassoon and Co. What the opium trade was in former days may be judged from the fact that Mr. Arthur Sassoon, during an eight years' residence in Hong Kong, amassed a fortune of forty lakhs of rupees. The telegraph and the vast development of steamer traffic have completely changed the conditions of the trade, although even yet more than three-fourths of it are in the hands of Hebrew firms, almost their only competitors being the Marwaris. Mr. Shalome Gubboy spent three years at Hong Kong ; but the rest of his life was passed in Calcutta, where he was noted as a man of great industry, enterprise, and intelligence. His career was devoted to business, but he was unswerving in the observance of his religion, and ever ready, in a quiet unobtrusive way, to aid the unfortunate, and relieve the lot of the afflicted. In recent years he had been solely tried by illness and by the loss of those dear to him, but his life was consistent to the last. His younger brother, Mr. Elias, is still head of the old firm, and the deceased leaves two sons, Mr. David A. Gubboy, of Calcutta, and Mr. R. A. Gubboy, of Hong Kong.—Englishman.

THE appeal in the case of Dickson v. the East Indian Railway Company was before the Calcutta High Court on the 2nd July. The bench that heard it was composed of Chief Justice Petheram and Justices Norris and Beverley. The Chief Justice delivered judgment without calling on Mr. Woodroffe, the counsel for the Railway Company, to reply. He said the case had been put forward as one affecting a large body of people and of great public interest. The Court did not think it a question of great public importance. The company have certain rules for engaging their servants, and were at liberty to offer any terms they pleased. The evidence showed that Mr. Dickson was engaged at a monthly salary, and it was shown that there existed a body of rules among the servants of the company, according to which the former had to contribute to certain funds so long as they remained in the latter's service, and enjoyed certain privileges as to pension and pay ; and, beyond that, the Company's rules stated that, after a certain number of years and at certain periods, their employes would be entitled to leave of absence and various other things. The contention raised was that a person enjoying these privileges in the service of the Company was entitled to make his service a permanent one. This was not the right interpretation. The Company started these funds for the benefit of their servants so long as they continued in their service and chose to contribute to those funds and enjoy the privileges; but as soon as they left the service they ceased to do so, and the matter ended there. It was impossible under this state of things to infer that the Company could have intended the service to be permanent; therefore, in their Lordships' opinion, Mr. Justice Trevelyan was right in coming to the conclusion that there was no contract for permanent service. The contention of Mr. Dickson could not hold good, because he said that he could leave the service of the Company on giving one month's notice. This question of permanent employment which an employer could not terminate, but which a servant could terminate by giving a month's notice, was what their lordships could not understand. The only evidence as to what was the form of notice to which the party was entitled was first of all that the salary was payable monthly; and secondly, that Mr. Dickson thought he could terminate his service at a month's notice. That being the only evidence, it was their lordships' opinion that the conclusion arrived at by Mr. Justice Trevelyan was a right one. The appeal would, therefore, be dismissed with costs. With regard to the rules of the Company, his lordship said that Mr. Dickson was well aware that a handbook of these rules existed, and he was bound to make himself acquainted with them.

MADRAS.

ON the recommendation of the Director of Public Instruction, the Madras Government have sanctioned the establishment of four schools on the salary results system at Sujakota, Kilagadda, Wondragedda, and Pokkili, in the Agency Tracts of the Vizagapatam district, the scale of establishment being Rs. 10, and the rate for results grants at double the maximum rates for five years. The Mokasaders are willing to erect buildings for the schools; and to encourage them to provide suitable accommodation, the Agent is authorised to supplement their efforts to the extent of Rs. 25 for each school. He is also authorised to spend an equal amount for each school on simple furniture and apparatus.

THE birth and death rates varied in the several districts and towns. Among the districts, the highest birth-rate was recorded in Madras, and the lowest in the Nilgiris. Eliminating Madras, South Canara returned the next highest birth-rate. The greatest mortality occurred in Tanjore, and the lowest in the Nilgiris. Cholera was the cause of heavy mortality in the towns of Gudiyatam, Palamcottah, Conjeevaram, and Tanjore. The Sanitary Commissioner remarks that the most noticeable feature in both districts and towns is an enhanced mortality from cholera, small-pox, and bowel complaints, while there is a decline in the deaths from fevers. Small-pox was the cause of a large number of deaths in the districts, and all the districts suffered more or less. There was a decrease in the number of deaths from fevers, compared with the preceding January, of 4,862. In Palamcottah and Annantapur towns the returns were nil, while in the districts of Cuddapah, Malabar, Kurnool, Godaveri, Salem, and North Arcot the mortality was heavy. Of the deaths from injuries, 141 were suicidal, 515 were from wounds and accidents, and 154 persons were killed either by snakes or wild beasts.

BOMBAY.

THE services of Surgeon-Major J. F. Keith, Indian Medical Service, have been placed at the disposal of Government in the Civil Department.

MR. W. ALLEN, C.S., Collector of Sholapur, has been allowed privilege leave of absence for three months from the 7th inst.; Mr. H. Woodward, C.S., acts for him.

MAJOR J. R. WATSON, Staff Corps, has been appointed to be Cantonment Magistrate at Malegaon, vice Colonel A. J. Doig, deceased.

THE services of Surgeon A. Milne, M.B., Indian Medical Service, have been replaced at the disposal of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief.

LIEUTENANT F. R. H. CHAPMAN, 29th Regiment, 2nd Belooch Battalion, has been appointed to be Cantonment Magistrate at Hyderabad.

MR. H. N. B. ERSKINE, C.S.I., has been permitted to resign Her Majesty's Covenanted Civil Service on the Bombay Establishment, with effect from August 31, 1888.

THE Governor-General in Council is pleased to recognise the appointment of Mr. M. R. Wyer as Acting Consul for Denmark at Bombay during the absence of Mr. H. Curjel.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—River still low in Sind. Rain in parts of Kurrachee and Upper Sind Frontier and throughout the Presidency proper, but insufficient in parts of Gujarat, Kattywar, the Deccan, and Southern Mahratta Country. Sowing of early crops progressing in parts of Surat, Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Satara, and Baroda, but retarded in parts of Nasik, Ahmednugger, and Belgaum. Transplantation completed in Kolaba and Ratnagherry, progressing in Nasik, Tanna, and Baroda, but retarded in parts of Kaira and Surat. Fodder scarce in parts of Hyderabad, Broach, Khandesh, Nasik, Sholapur, Belgaum, and Baroda.

A BOMBAY correspondent of the Pioneer writes as follows anent the Crawford case:—A few short weeks have passed away since I had to perform the painful task of writing about the death of one of the most popular men in Bombay. But sorrow at the loss of so brave and generous a spirit was tempered with the thought that he was at rest from toil and trouble. The task I have now to perform is far more bitter than the announcement of the death of Sir Frank Souter. Sorrow and shame has fallen on one whom we have all known for the past twenty years, and for whose splendid talents we all have had the greatest admiration. Never was a profounder sensation created in Bombay than that produced by the announcement of the suspension of Mr. Crawford for bribery. Europeans and Natives stood in groups, and asked themselves could this be the termination of what might have been one of the most brilliant careers in India? No harsh word was said; the expressions of regret were deep and sincere. Then men spoke of what he had done for this capital. Modern Bombay, of which her citizens are so justly proud, is in a great measure the creation of his energy and genius. He was a young man of nine years' standing in the Service, when Sir Bartle Frere appointed him Municipal Commissioner. Then under him began those improvements which have made our city one of the most beautiful in Asia. The finest market in the world bears his name. The disgrace of a man who has done so much for the State seemed to all alike as a public calamity. No class of the community were more affected by the news than the natives. A firm administrator, he has always shown a keen sympathy for the aims and aspirations of the native. A host of native friends knew from past experience that Arthur Crawford never spared time and trouble to oblige those who craved his help. The pain caused by the news of his suspension was intensified the next day by the sad intelligence that Mr. Crawford had fled in disguise from Poona and had been arrested by the police. Medical evidence is forthcoming that at the time he committed this rash act his mind had lost its balance. For some weeks past Arthur Crawford knew from the demeanour of his office that some evil was impending. He was aware that enemies were actively engaged in working his ruin. He was in a very bad state of health when the intelligence of his suspension was conveyed to him. Next day his brother arrived at Poona, and to avoid the pain of seeing him he fled his house. Next morning he took the train to Bombay, and was arrested. This rash act has wrought one good. It forced the Government to issue against him a criminal warrant, and now the whole matter will be thoroughly sifted by the highest tribunal of the land. There is a foolish rumour that the matter may be finally disposed of by the magistrate. A man of the highest rank has been arrested by the Governor, on the gravest charge that can be brought against a public servant. If he be guilty, no sentence which the District Magistrate or the District Judge could inflict would be adequate. No decision given by a subordinate Court will be regarded by any of the parties concerned as final. Public opinion demands that this painful affair be thoroughly investigated by the High Court.

BURMA.

A MANDALAY telegram says that a gang of eight men were about to excavate a Buddhist shrine, but that when they reached the edifice they changed their plans and were on the point of committing a dacoity when they were intercepted by the police patrol, who fired a shot, wounding one of them. The police arrested three others, one of whom is a policeman.

AN official statement with regard to the missing Assistant-Commissioner has been issued. Mr. Brind was marching from Kalea to Kalwet on the evening of the 27th July, and, when nearing Kalwet, rode ahead of the escort. His pony reached Kalwet riderless, and minus one stirrup. The escort saw no trace of Brind. A search party was despatched and found the body in a stream, without any indication of foul play. Death was evidently caused by drowning.

It would appear that the greatest enemies of a Municipal Office are those of its own household. The Rangoon Municipal Office is by no means an exception, for it has been secretly bled by one of its Thoogyees to the amount of Rs. 15,000. Some time back a Thoogyee, after embezzling a large sum, absconded, and the amount was never made good, simply because the only securities taken were the signatures of a few of his fellow-Thoogyees, men of no means. This, it is said, is all the surety for the present culprit, as it is the custom on the admittance of a new Thoogyee, to take the signatures of some half-dozen of the Thoogyees already in office, and, on the strength of this security, to let the new man have the run of the bills to be collected.

BOMBAY BRIBERY SCANDAL.

POONA, JULY 31.

Hunmant Rao's case was called on at noon to-day. Mr. Little, the Government Solicitor, made an application for fifteen days' adjournment, as other charges were to be framed, and it would be convenient to take all of them together. One of the new charges would be with reference to the receipt of a thousand rupees by Mr. Crawford in cancellation of the transfer of the Mamlatdar of Sattara.

Mr. Merwanji, pleader, objected, but the application was granted.

Notice has been given of a similar application to be presented to-morrow.

AUG. 1.

The Crawford case came up this morning before Mr. Vidal, when Mr. Little applied for an adjournment of fifteen days on similar grounds to those stated yesterday.

Mr. Anderson, barrister-at-law, instructed by Mr. Lynch, opposed the application, and in doing so criticised the action of Government, which, he said, was unjust and unprecedented. He urged that Government should proceed upon the information already laid, and that there should be no further delay in the matter.

Mr. Little repeated that he was not ready with his case, and the magistrate granted the fifteen days' adjournment on the condition that the prosecution should then proceed.

The trial of Mr. Arthur Crawford on charges of corruption in his position of Commissioner of the Central Division came on at noon to-day before Mr. Vidal, the District Magistrate of Poona. From an early hour the Court was crowded. Representatives of the Press and a number of the general public were present, as also Mr. Leslie Crawford, the brother of the accused; Mr. Crawford, the son; and Mr. Frank Crawford, the half-brother. Mr. Ommaney, the Inspector-General of Police, attended to instruct Mr. Little, the Government Solicitor, on behalf of the prosecution; while Mr. Anderson, barrister-at-law, with Mr. Lynch, solicitor, and Mr. Gungaram Bhawoo, pleader, appeared for the defence.

Mr. Little applied for a fortnight's postponement. He said it was in the interest of the public and accused that the inquiry should not be hurried. Since receiving a letter from the solicitor for the defence he had had no time for communication with the Government, and he wanted to engage counsel, as counsel appeared for the defence. The information laid contained only one charge, and the Government wanted time to sift a large mass of evidence in order to decide what other two charges should be joined with the first before the inquiry opened.

Mr. Anderson opposed any adjournment. He said it was an unprecedented spectacle for the Government, two weeks after laying the information and arresting Mr. Crawford, an official of the highest position, to come before the Court and confess their inability to proceed. The character of the Government proceedings was almost without precedent. Were the Government, he asked, entitled to suspend Mr. Crawford without any distinct charges against him? Mr. Crawford had repeatedly asked the Government to inform him what other charges they intended to bring against him besides those mentioned in the information; but the Government could not give the information asked for, and told him to wait. He complained that two Natives, his enemies, were unfairly allowed access to his record-office after his suspension. He insisted upon knowing who his accusers were and what they accused him with, but he was again told to wait. He protested against the way information as to the charges had been cruelly withheld from him—a course which inflicted mental distress on him.

In reply, Mr. Little said the Government had been forced to lay the information and arrest Mr. Crawford because he was going in disguise out of the country.

The Magistrate said it was a matter for regret that it was found necessary to apply for a fortnight's adjournment whilst serious charges were hanging over Mr. Crawford's head; but he thought this a reasonable application, and if all the charges were tried together it would be less harassing to the defence. There was an immense mass of evidence to be sifted, and the witnesses were scattered over different parts of the Presidency; hence a fortnight's adjournment was reasonable, and under the circumstances the case would be adjourned till the 16th inst.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR GEORGE WHITE has arrived at Mandalay and resumed his command.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GALBRAITH has arrived at Jubbulpore and assumed command of the Saugor District from Brigadier-General C. J. East, who proceeded to Bombay, en route to England.

COLONEL R. G. WOODTHORPE, R.E., who succeeds Colonel M. S. Bell, V.C., R.E., as Deputy Quartermaster-General, Intelligence Branch, will be detained in England until October next. In the meantime Major H. A. Sawyer, Bengal Staff Corps, will officiate in the appointment.

MAJOR S. B. BEATSON, 11th Bengal Lancers, will be Brigade-Major to General Luck, Inspector-General of Cavalry, this cold weather.

CAPTAIN H. R. SAUNDERS, West Riding Regiment, has died from cholera at Murree.

Two British officers will accompany the escort which attends Mr. Udry to the Kuram Valley. The escort itself will consist of 300 infantry, 75 sabres and two mountain guns, chosen from the Kohat garrison.

THE Kuno Valley Military Police Battalion has been put under the command of Captain C. W. Harris, of the 4th Bengal Infantry.

A RETURN has been issued from Headquarters showing the results of the annual musketry course for 1887-88 of the British and Native armies serving in the three Presidencies. In directing the publication of the return the Commander-in-Chief observes that "there has been a very marked improvement upon the shooting of the previous year, especially in the British Army, but the results exhibited by some few corps, principally Native Infantry, leave much to be desired, and he trusts that every effort will be made by the regiments in question to rise to a more satisfactory standard of musketry efficiency."

THE 8th Hussars heads the lists of British cavalry regiments with a figure of merit of 137'99. Two regiments are classified as very good, six good and one moderate. All show an increase on the previous year's figures. In the British infantry 50 regiments were exercised, the Royal Warwickshire Regiment heading the list with a figure of 160'65. The classification is:—Very good, 4; good, 21; moderate, 24; bad 1. Only 4 battalions show a decrease on the previous season's performances. The 3rd Madras Light Cavalry, with a figure of merit of 99'25, are first in order of merit of the Native Cavalry regiments; the cavalry of the Deoli Irregular Force coming next with 98'48 points. Six regiments are very good, 22 good, 8 moderate, and 3 bad. The 29th Punjab Infantry again heads the list in the Native Infantry with a figure of merit of 142'33. One hundred and twelve regiments were exercised: 7 are very good, 37 good, 39 moderate and 29 bad.

THE following movements for the coming trooping season have been arranged in the Madras Presidency:—

Royal Artillery, G Battery, 2nd Brigade, Bellary to England; 2nd Battery, 1st Brigade, Eastern Division, Bengal to Rangoon; 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, North Irish Division, Fort St. George to another Presidency; 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, Lancashire Division, Rangoon to Fort St. George; Garrison Battery from another Presidency to Rangoon.

British Infantry, 2nd Battalion Royal Fusiliers, Wellington to England; a Battalion from England to Wellington; 2nd Battalion, South Wales Borderers, Lower Burma to Ranikhet; a Battalion, Bengal to Lower Burma; 1st Battalion, Hampshire Regiment, Secunderabad to Upper Burma; a Battalion from England to Secunderabad; 2nd Battalion, Munster Fusiliers, Upper Burma to Saharanpur; a Battalion from Bengal to Upper Burma; Rifle Brigade, Upper Burma to Bareilly; a Battalion, from Bengal to Upper Burma; Madras Infantry, 16th, 19th and 30th, from Burma to India; and 20th, 23rd, and 33rd, from India to Burma.

CAPTAINS AND MAJORS.—The following letter has been addressed to the Pioneer by "E. F. M." on the relative positions of Captains and Majors in the matter of pay under the provisions of the last Warrant:—"Let me bring to your notice, à propos of some recent correspondence regarding the pay of combatant officers in the Army, that there is one particular rank which has been treated by Government of late in a decidedly 'stepmotherly' way—I mean that of captains commanding companies. Not long ago a warrant was issued by which promotion in that rank was brought to an almost dead stop, whereupon those in authority, feeling that something was wrong somewhere, looked benevolent and said: 'We will give somebody an increase of pay by way of compensation.' But unfortunately they hit upon the wrong people to compensate, and the increase was given to the majors, who had already got their step and the pay which accompanies it, and so were unhurt by the warrant, instead of to the poor captains who suffered so severely by it. As matters now stand, a subaltern after two years' service gets an increase of pay, and a major after two years gets an increase to the amount, in India, of Rs. 200 a-month; but a man may be a captain for fifteen or twenty years without drawing, at the end of that time, one penny or one pice more than at the beginning. The difference between his fate and that of the man who has lately had the luck to get his majority is very striking, especially as the major of the present day is in all but name and pay a captain of a company and nothing more. They each do the same work, and have each the same responsibility. Now, why should not Government show its liberality by giving to the captains of the Army, as well as to the ranks immediately above and below them, an increase of pay after a certain length of service? The pay of a major of two years' standing is Rs. 800 a month: contrast this with that of a captain, who does exactly the same work for an indefinite number of years on Rs. 415 a month! Surely his value to his country increases at the same rate as does the 'mud major's.' Why should not his pay increase too?

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

WITH THE IMMORTALS.*

If originality be the quality which is to snatch the victory, assuredly Miss Marion Crawford will take high rank among the novelists of the nineteenth century—so far, at least, as regards the last production of her pen. Whatever may be the criticism with reference to "With the Immortals," it cannot with justice be denied that the idea is striking and peculiar. To recall the dead and bid them converse alike amongst themselves, and with those around them, is a flight of imagination which can claim that it is not borrowed from any other writer of modern times. The attempt, too, merits observation in so far as it is one of the few—the very few—works of fiction which discards "plot." The tale in itself is as colourless, as Dr. Johnson's "Rasselas," which, indeed, it resembles, to the extent that each of these productions relies exclusively upon the "matter" itself rather than any sensational colouring imparted to give effect to the dénoûment which ends and crowns all. It would be no dispraise to assert that "With the Immortals" is nothing more or less than a series of "Essays," in which the dead and the living engage in a tournament of discussion.

It is obvious that in such circumstances much—perhaps, indeed, all—must depend upon the brilliancy of diction and fertility of imagination which characterise the various personages who strut upon the stage of idealism; and in this direction there is little room left for improvement. It would be impossible to surpass the keen, bitter satire, the penetrating acumen, the lively fancy which are scattered broadcast, page after page, throughout this extraordinary book. The subjects which are discussed are, too, as numerous as important. Marriage, freedom, wit, humour, Christianity, happiness, folly, anarchism, Socialism, equality, and the such-like, form the staple topics of conversation, and they are each and all handled with the most consummate skill, and with a result that the novel—if novel it can be called—is one of the most reflective works of the season. It should be read and re-read—its depth cannot be penetrated with a single cast of the plummet. There are currents and under-currents—as much is beneath the surface as upon the face. This criticism—which is in itself laudatory—is, perhaps, in some measure condemnatory. People nowadays read novels for the purpose of passing the time rather than of gaining instruction or widening the intellect. To such classes "With the Immortals" may perchance be too "learned," too little exciting and harrowing to the feelings; but there are some—it may be hoped not a few—who can appreciate trenchant sarcasm, albeit in a work of fiction, who can expand their minds by studying the minds of others. To such Miss Marion Crawford will gain an introduction; and when they part company it will be felt that time has been well spent, and that inter-communion with the dead may be productive of pleasure and profit to the living.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED MILES ON A BURMESE TAT.†

What is a "tat?" The answer is none too easy. The thing in question appears to have been a "small atom of horse-flesh," but of such a playful and merry disposition that it was always busy at some little prank; at one time shooting its master over a palisade, at another leaving the aforesaid dignitary "hanging over a bough like a night-shirt on a clothes' line;" but, in spite of these lively attempts at facetiousness, the pony did its 1,800 miles pluckily, and proved that, apart from pranks, it was a serviceable and useful beast of burden.

Mr. Younghusband in his preface disclaims any profession of "literary merit." He does not aspire at fine writing and brilliant diction, but confines himself to a faithful record of "new countries and new nations." Regarding the first part of the last sentence we are not in a position to speak, but the pages bear at every turn the impress of truth; there can be little doubt that the author has eschewed the fault of exaggeration, and all that occurred seems to have been written down just as it happened, without any colouring or attempt at addition. In regard to "novelty," the contract has been fulfilled to the letter. Chapter after chapter teems with strange experiences and funny national customs. Fancy a king having 800 wives, and as a matter of fact travelling with no less than 200 of the fair tempters! But then "wife-flesh" is cheap, seeing that luxury in question is to be obtained at the tempting rate of Rs. 50, say, a five-pound note, an amount which is more than repaid in the year by the sale of silk which she is expected to weave, so that 800 wives mean a source of income to the fortunate possessor of the harem.

What untutored people must the Shans be, for they imagine all "whites" to belong to one and the same nation, which is split up into various tribes, such as the Americans, Londoners, Calcuttaites, &c., &c.; but they are not altogether wanting in "gumption," for our author found to his cost that there is such a thing as "paste sapphires" obtainable from "Brummagen," which are used for the purpose of imposing upon raw and inexperienced dabblers in precious stones. In Siam, too, there are people who enrich themselves by the mean and irritating device of snatching the hats of passers-by, and rushing away with the stolen article of domestic comfort, leaving the quondam possessors bare-headed, furious, and powerless to retaliate; so civilisation has made some strides in these parts.

Mr. Younghusband's work is likely to be read by the many whose attention is directed to our recent acquisition in Burma, for it is the land of the immediate future; and this chatty account of a six months' tour in regions but little known, and, withal, not improbably a playground for the ball of distinction, is interesting, and tinged with importance.

THE BADMINTON LIBRARY.*

Cricket, spite of the fascinations of the recent game of lawn-tennis, still holds sway as, par excellence, the national game of this country; and to such an astonishing pitch of perfection is the pastime carried that every village-green can show play which contains some good points, while our schools—at any rate, our great public schools—turn out youngsters well worthy of an admiring audience, merely regarded on their merits as practised dabblers with bat and ball. In these circumstances the work on "Cricket," which forms the most recent of the Badminton Library Series, merits attention, the more so when it is recollected that the honoured names of A. G. Steel, Hon. R. H. Lyttelton, A. Lang, W. G. Grace, R. A. H. Mitchell, and F. Gale are concerned in its production.

To analyse such a work is hopeless. It would need a cricketer as great as the writers themselves—and these are not to be found at every turn. Nor, indeed, is it necessary, for everyone likes cricket, and everyone may, therefore, read with advantage the many hints scattered broadcast throughout the length and breadth of the pages of this most valuable and interesting volume. Nothing is omitted. Batting, bowling, captaincy, umpireship, fielding, each and all come in for a turn; and then follow a series of miscellaneous articles, such as "County Cricket," by F. Gale; "Border Cricket," by A. Lang; "How to Score," by W. G. Grace; "The Australians," by A. G. Steel; "The University Cricket Match," and "Gentlemen v. Players," by the Hon. P. H. Lyttelton, and many more of a like nature. Regarded from the standpoint of cricket the work is valuable beyond compare, but viewed merely as a work, pour passerle temps, it leaves little to be desired, teeming as it does with anecdote, and recalling reminiscences of the great national pastime.

Those of our readers who are interested in Indian Law will be glad to hear that the second volume of the Anglo-Indian Codes, which Mr. Whitley Stokes is preparing for the Clarendon Press, is nearly ready for publication. It treats of Adjective Law, and includes the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Code of Civil Procedure, the Evidence Act, 1872, the Oaths Act, the Limitation Act, and other statutes. The work is fully furnished with notes and appendices, and forms a thick octavo volume of more than 1,200 pages.

JUDICIAL WHIPPING.

We fear that Exeter Hall and the sentimental philosophers who would reform India according to their own ideas of philanthropy will find a new Indian grievance to expatiate upon and protest against. The treatment of Native prisoners in Indian jails has already been made a subject of much commentary, and a great deal of "humanitarianism" in its Exeter Hall form has been expended upon the interesting inmates who go to prisons in the East. In India itself the lot of the jail prisoner has been regarded rather as an enviable one than otherwise. The district jail is recognised there as a comfortable retreat for criminals. It still retains the description which Ali Baba, without a word hardly of exaggeration, gave of its inmates when he wrote:—"In the whole country side you will not find a community so well bathed, exercised, fed, and lodged. It is, indeed, a quiet refuge for world-weary men; a sanctuary undisturbed by the fears of the weak or the passions of the strong. All reasonable wants are gratified here; nothing is hoped for any more. The poor burglar burdened with unsaleable 'grab,' and the reproaches of a venal world, sorrowfully seeks an asylum here. He is a covenanted servant here, having passed an examination in gang robbery, accompanied by violence and prevarication. He cannot be discharged under a long term of years. Uncovenanted pilferers in for a week regard him with respect and envy. And certainly his lot is enviable; he has no cares, no anxieties. Famine and the depreciation of silver are nothing to him. Rain or sunshine, he lives in plenty." And if he gives trouble in jail, the same good authority explains the specific which the Doctor in charge of him has ready at hand:—"Look here, my man! If I hear any more of this infernal nonsense, I'll turn you out of the jail neck and crop." This is a threat that never fails to produce the desired effect.

A change, however, from this pleasant kind of existence is likely to take place if a recommendation supported by the English Press in India be carried out. That recommendation is that whipping should be substituted in many instances for incarceration. The Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces draws attention to the subject in an official memorandum, as it is found that the jails are becoming crowded with short time prisoners, for whom a flogging would often be a more appropriate sentence. The Calcutta Englishman, commenting upon this memorandum, says:—

Mr. Mackenzie points out that in the jails in the Central Provinces there are a number of sturdy knaves sentenced to short terms of imprisonment for petty crimes for whom this punishment would have been most appropriate. These men are not disgraced by being sent to jail, but rather like it, being sure of a comfortable shelter and capital food. The Government of India lays it down that in times of scarcity, when many persons are driven by want to commit petty thefts, the greatest care shall be taken in passing sentences of flogging. No doubt it is necessary to make allowance at such times, but the effect of all these limitations and suggestions of leniency is undoubtedly to incline the magistrate to abandon flogging altogether. The district authorities look to Government for a clear, strong rule on the subject, or for implicit confidence, and all they get is a halting, hesitating statement of the well-known difficulties, and a vague suggestion of possible displeasure in the event of the usual outcry being raised by the Native Press. There is undoubtedly a want of courage and candour in the line of conduct laid down. "Thrash by all means," says the Government, "but woe betide if you thrash a person of the wrong social degree, or if you thrash a person who has been led astray under unusual temptation, or again if you show what we may consider an undue partiality for the rod." This is not the kind of direction that is likely to do much good, although it is exactly the sort of counsels with which district officers are most familiar.

Mr. Mackenzie has, it is stated, broken away from these cautious and shifty traditions, and has promised to support his magistrates in the exercise of their judgment in the matter of judicial whipping. The Calcutta journal recommends other local governments to follow his example, and concludes its homily thus:—"We regret to think that there is any fear of corporal punishment passing into disuse; it is effective where everything else fails, and it is the most economical of all penalties, which is a point in its favour in these hard times."

There is, no doubt, truth and common-sense in the view thus expressed, but it is a view which will certainly be denounced in the Native Press, and there will possibly be a howl against the British Government in India for wanton cruelty, and the friends of humanity in this country will take up the cry, and make Exeter Hall ring with their declamations. But Mr. Mackenzie will, it is to be hoped, keep to his own excellent plan.

A POONA TURF SCANDAL.

Before Colonel Bolton, Cantonment Magistrate of Poona, the case in which Captain Hanwell, aide-de-camp to Major-General Solly-Flood, C.B., charged a Mahomedan jockey, named Ahmed, with defamation, was called. The complainant stated on examination: I know the accused in this case. I am a member of the Western India Turf Club. I remember riding in the Poona Sky Races on the 3rd of February last. I rode in all the races, viz., five. Accused rode with me in two of the five—Dealers' Handicap and the Connaught Cup. Ahmed won the Dealers' Handicap, and I the Connaught Cup. The accused wrote a letter to the Secretary of the Turf Club, accusing me of having told him to pull the horse. I have summoned the Secretary, Brigade-Surgeon Gaye, my witness, to produce that letter in original. I know Hindustani very little. I never used words "pichee rao." This allegation accuses me of being guilty of a dishonest action, and if proved, I would be turned out of the Club. It would also affect my position in the Army. The meaning of the words "pichee rao" implies that I wanted him to stop his horse, so that I might win, thus insinuating that I meant to commit a breach of the Turf rules. In both these races I had occasion to speak to the accused. On both occasions the accused tried to cross my horse. I told him to ride straight. I used strong language at the time; besides which I told him to get out of the way. The allegation contained in the letter alluded to is entirely false.

Brigade-Surgeon Arthur Charles Gaye, examined, stated: I know the complainant and the accused. I am the Secretary of the Western India Turf Club, and Captain Hanwell is a member of that Club. I was not present at the races on the 3rd February last. I have had some correspondence on the subject. Accused, Ahmed, had written a letter, dated 21st February last, to the Secretary, Western India Turf Club, which I now produce in original. The letter is signed by Ahmed. (The letter was here produced and read.) I noticed the words "pichee rao" at the time. I know the meaning of the words "pichee rao." They mean "remain behind." Telling a rider to remain behind would be contrary to the Turf rules, and, if proved, would affect the complainant's character most seriously. I should infer "pichee rao" to mean—"Don't try to win;" that is the light in which I read it. If the allegation were true, complainant would be guilty of a dishonest act.

Major Charles Talbot Smith examined: I know Captain Hanwell and the accused. Complainant is a member of the Western India Turf Club. I remember the races held on Feb. 3. I was riding in all the races. I remember complainant and accused in the "Dealers' Race." I also remember riding for the Connaught Cup, in which both the complainant and the accused rode. I heard the complainant telling the accused in both these races to ride straight. I also heard the complainant shout and use strong language. I understand Hindustani very little. I know the meaning of the words "pichee rao;" they mean keep back. But the complainant never made use of the words "pichee rao;" the allegation reflects on the character of the complainant. This would amount to cheating. If Captain Hanwell had made use of that expression it would affect him most seriously, both officially and socially, and he would be turned out of the Club, and stopped riding in the races for the future. If such expressions were used, I would have heard them. Cross-examined by Mr. Merwanjee Framjee: The words used were "d—n your soul!" "keep straight." I cannot remember what the other expressions were, but they were equally as strong. These expressions were used in the "Dealers' Handicap." They were made while coming round the lop-turn, about a quarter of a mile from the winning-post. I heard him shout at intervals until they came to the winning-post. When I first heard the shout I was about the distance of a horse's neck. The accused was then leading slightly ahead. I commenced to pull to the winning post, and I saw Captain Hanwell and accused close to each other near the winning-post. I could have heard every word that the complainant said at the time. He said "ride straight." Re-examined by Mr. Rajana Lingoo: Complainant made use of strong language because accused tried to cross complainant's horse by jostling. There would be no use in asking the accused to pull up after passing the winning post, because every one would have heard and seen him pull up. As far as I can remember, Captain Hanwell was at a distance of half-a-length. I was behind Captain Hanwell—about thirty to fifty yards. Had Captain Hanwell spoken to the accused in a very low tone near the winning-post the accused would never have heard it on account of the noise. (Mr. Merwanjee Framjee objected to this question.)

The Magistrate: All right, put it in writing, and I'll record it.

Captain Arthur Payne, 2nd Light Durham Infantry, was next examined. He said: I know both the complainant and accused. Captain Hanwell is a member of the Western India Turf Club. I was riding for the Connaught Cup on the 3rd February last. Captain Hanwell and Ahmed were also riding in the same race. I don't remember Captain Hanwell making use of any expression to the accused. I don't understand Hindustani. I was three or four lengths behind Captain Hanwell.

Dr. Morris O'Connor Drury stated: I remember the races of February last. Captain Hanwell and accused rode for the Dealers' Handicap and Connaught Cup. I was present at both the races. I was on the grand stand. I heard complainant speak to Ahmed. I heard complainant say to accused "God d—n you." Immediately after the races, Captain Hanwell complained to me that Ahmed's riding was very bad, and that he tried to cross complainant's horse. If Captain Hanwell said "pichee rao" I could have heard it. I have heard the words "pichee rao" and "pichee jao," which mean, "stand behind." The words "God d—n you" were used in the race for the Connaught Cup. Cross-examined by Mr. Merwanjee: It would depend upon the distance and the tone in which the expressions were used. I am the owner of the horse Mikado, which the accused rode for the Connaught Cup. After the races were over my jockey made a complaint to me that Captain Hanwell had flurried him. This was made through a third person, Surgeon-Major Craig. He never said Captain Hanwell had asked him to "pichee rao," or hold back. I told Ahmed that I would write to Captain Hanwell, and make inquiries. This was after the assault on Ahmed by Captain Hanwell. I got an answer from Captain Hanwell stating that he gave him two or three cuts with his stick because he tried to cross his horse.

This closed the case for the prosecution.—Poona Observer.

This case, in which Captain Hanwell, A.D.C. to Major-General Solly-Flood, C.B., Commanding the Station, charges a native jockey, named Ahmed, with defamation, in that the jockey wrote a letter to the steward of the W.I. T. Club stating that Captain Hanwell had told him to "pull" a certain horse in a race on the Race course, came on again for hearing before Colonel Bolton, Cantonment Magistrate, on Thursday, Mr. Xavir and Mr. Rajana Lingoo appearing for the complainant, and Messrs. Kelkar and Merwanji Framjee for the accused.

Captain Hanwell was re-examined, and produced the rules of the Turf Club according to page 15 para. 30 of which he would cease to be a member of the said Club, if he did not disprove the charge brought against him by the accused. He said he would also be barred from running or riding a horse at any meeting where these rules were in force, nor be allowed to enter the enclosure at the Race Course. He would also be deprived of his favourite amusement, viz, riding in races.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kelkar: The Stewards have instituted inquiries, and I was told to go to a Court of Law, which accordingly I did.

The accused was then examined and said: My name is Ahmed Eliabux, and I follow the occupation of a jockey. I did write the letter, dated the 21st February last, to Colonel Le Marchant, saying that Captain Hanwell had told me "pichee rao" in the Dealers' Handicap. In the race for the Connaught Cup he only abused me. This expression used by Captain Hanwell was not a proper one to make, and if I had acted up to it I would have been ruined. It is quite true that Captain Hanwell made use of that expression to me, and I have evidence to prove it. I understood that I was to lose the race and let Captain Hanwell win it. This expression was made use of between the distance and winning-post. It was about five lengths from the winning-post. A man who uses such an expression is liable to get into trouble. This expression "pichee rao" was made use of again in the stables, where he assaulted me for not doing as he told me, in consequence of which I made a complaint against him. I did tell my master that Captain Hanwell had told me to "pull" in the race as soon as it was over, who told me that he would assemble the stewards and would ask me to repeat the statement which I made to him. This was about seven o'clock in the evening. I remained till half-past nine, when I went home, as there was no meeting of the stewards. I rode Dr. Drury's horse in the race for the Connaught Cup. I am quite sure it was in this race that Captain Hanwell made use of the expression, and I went and complained to Dr. Drury.

Mr. Merwanjee Framjee then addressed the Court. He said it was admitted both by Captain Hanwell and Major Peyton that the former gentleman was very much excited during the race, and had made use of strong language almost from the beginning to the end of it. This being so it was hardly possible that he could remember everything he had said, and might have made use of the expression without at all intending to attach the meaning the accused thought he had to it. The man did not with a malicious intention report the matter to his master, and if Captain Hanwell wished it the man would apologise to him, which would clear his character, and do all that was required to be done by the party instituting the suit.

Colonel Bolton then framed a charge against the accused under Section 499 of the I.P.C., and postponed the case till next Monday, when the evidence for the defence will be taken.—Poona Observer.

A BUILDING at Lucknow, well known in the annals of the Mutiny as the Tarawalli Kothi, will pass in a few months from the possession of the Bank of Bengal, which has held it for a quarter of a century, into the hands of justice, as it is required for the Division Bench of the N.W.P. High Court.

WHILE the men of the S-1 Battery of Artillery were at carbino practice at Bellary on July 31, after the "Cease-fire" had sounded, a gunner shot another who was painting the target. The man died next day. The Officer Commanding was absent at the time. The Sergeant in charge has been arrested, and the gunner who fired the shot is a prisoner.

THERE is a rumour in Umballa that treasure to some fabulous amount has been discovered buried somewhere on the Pattiala-Bhatinda Railway, and that guards have been mounted near the spot ; but whether the wealth goes to Pattiala or the British Government is not announced.

In consequence of the Volunteers of the Madras Presidency being transferred from Government to the Military authorities from Aug. 1, the Governor, as Honorary Colonel of the two corps, is placed under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief, if his Excellency retains the Colonelcies.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1888.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Son of the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE BROAD ARROW

AND
NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLD,
ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE. Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caveat is necessary, as many persons have purchased by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE. Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. — The Times, July 15th, 1884.

DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "9 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHOEA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Russell St., W.G.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and peddle alike. — We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE IS THE TRUE
PALLIATIVE IN

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN OF EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALESTIP, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade MARK. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1/2d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

[FRIDAY, AUGUST 31, 1888.]

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 14th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 12th August; and from Calcutta to the 11th August.

THE meeting of the Legislative Council was postponed to Aug. 15th.

THE Viceroy has abandoned the idea of visiting Kashmir. His Excellency, after leaving Simla in November, will probably make a very short tour in Northern Bengal, but beyond this nothing is contemplated.

ON Tuesday morning, Aug. 7th, Sir Asman Jah presented in open durbar a complimentary kharita from the Nizam to the Viceroy. The proceedings were purely ceremonial, and lasted but a very short time. In the afternoon the Viceroy paid a private visit to the Minister.

SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN has gone to Almorah.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT was to open the Fine Arts Exhibition at Simla on Aug. 29th.

THE Hon. Mr. Charles Master, of the Madras Council, has suffered a relapse, and his condition is again causing much anxiety.

SIR EDWARD BUCK has returned to Simla from his recent tour in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies.

SIR ROBERT AND LADY SANDEMAN left Quetta for Ziarat on August 3rd.

MR. H. N. B. ERSKINE, C.S.I., late Commissioner of Sind, has been permitted to resign the Bombay Civil Service from August 31st.

THE Bombay Government on August 9th retired from the prosecution of Mr. Arthur Crawford, who was, therefore, discharged by the District Magistrate of Poona. Mr. Crawford is about to proceed on furlough for two years, preparatory to retirement from the Service.

COLONEL WARD, of Bhopal, has arrived at Simla on two months' leave.

ON Mr. D. M. Smeaton going on leave Mr. H. T. White acts as officiating Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Burma up to October 16th, when Mr. Symes, the permanent incumbent, returns.

COLONEL HUGHES-HALLETT, officiating Judge Advocate-General, has arrived at Simla, and assumed the duties of that office.

SURGEON E. A. FENN, of the Grenadier Guards, who is to be Lord Lansdowne's doctor, has seen service in Afghanistan, where he was mentioned in despatches at the battle of Kandahar, being then attached to a battery; and also in Egypt with the 3rd Grenadier Guards.

LIEUTENANTS MACDONALD AND PRINGLE, R.E., have gone to Lundi Kotal, in the Khyber, to commence work again upon the fortified serai at that post. Lieut.-Colonel Warburton, Political Officer in charge of the Khyber, accompanied them.

LIEUT. R. W. ROOKE died at Simla on the afternoon of August 6th from injuries received when thrown from a runaway pony a few days previously, and was buried at Sabathu, where his regiment (the Wiltshire) is stationed.

THE Amir's troops have not yet attacked the Shinwaris, who are showing a very bold front, and somewhat harassing General Gholam Hyder. As part of their regular duty, they tell off 300 or 400 men to fire into the Afghan camp nightly.

THE Punjabi fakir who is supposed to have shared in Mr. Dalgleish's murder has been caught in Yarkand and surrendered to Captain Ramsay, the Political Officer at Loh. Dad Mahomed is believed to have escaped into Russian territory.

THE Kashmir troops have not yet recaptured the fort at Chaprot from the Hunza and Nagar tribesmen. Some seven thousand Kashmiri soldiers are now at Gilgit, whence an advance will be made shortly.

TWO more companies of the Derbyshire Regiment have been warned to be in readiness to proceed to Sikkim. The 500 men of the 1st Gurkhas who have been ordered to reinforce the troops at Gnatong have left Pathankote, and were expected to arrive at Ghoom, below Darjeeling, on the 17th, and Gnatong on the 23rd or 24th August. The augmented force will endeavour to clear this side of the passes of the enemy, in order to free Sikkim territory from the Tibetans' forces, who have now advanced four or five miles inside the border. The Tibetans are said to be intriguing with some of our protected States in the Himalayas, giving out that they are preparing for a twelve years' war.

THE official messenger sent by the Chinese Ambassador at Lhasa has visited the Tibetan outposts in Sikkim, and started on his return journey northwards.

THE three months' special leave granted to officers in the Burma Field Force is to be extended to all who have served there since the Force was recognised.

IT has been decided to employ, for the conduct of forest surveys, a section of Colonel Thuillier's Department, under the general control of the Presidency Governments, in lieu of the construction of a new Forest Department in each province.

THE Viceroy's tour in the autumn will probably be confined to the line of railway between Umballa and Calcutta, with possibly an excursion on the river Ganges for a part of the journey down, but no details have yet been settled. His Excellency is likely to make over charge of his office to Lord Lansdowne on Monday, the 10th of December, and leave Calcutta the same day direct for Bombay, whence he will sail for Europe.

THE Lahore paper hears that his Excellency the Viceroy's medals granted in connection with the National Association for rendering medical aid to the women of India have been presented to Miss Masih and Miss Thomas, of Agra.

THE standing problem of Indian hill stations—what to do in the rains?—is, according to an up-country paper, being solved in Darjeeling in a novel and exciting fashion. A Tibetan scare of most circumstantial character has been evolved, and those ladies on whom the diversion of dancing with one another has palled, find an absorbing occupation in packing their dresses and preparing for instant flight. It is true that there are no Tibetans anywhere near the station, that our influence in Sikkim is supreme, and that nearly three hundred British soldiers are guarding Darjeeling. Prosiac assurances of this sort are in vain. The oracle Rumour has lipped in numbers with an exactness leaving little to be desired. Five hundred Tibetans are "massed" below an adjoining tea garden, and are waiting for a dark night to sack the station. Their advanced guard is already there in the form of many budmashes, who, though invisible to the local police, are known by the alarmists to be prowling about in broad daylight and preparing the way for the main body. Meanwhile, the Mall of this modern Magdeburg is strewn with nursemaids and mothers, babies and perambulators, and the Tibetan coolie is making a good thing out of the sudden demand for transport. The panic has even reached Calcutta, and anxious parents in the plains are hastening to recall their children from school before the Tibetan Herod appears on the scene. Everyone wants a guard for his own house, and denounces the inaction of the local officials, who take refuge in the unromantic theory that the whole thing is partly gossip and partly a mischievous hoax. But it is generally felt that this explanation is, to speak officially, wholly inadequate.

NOTES.

THE papers to hand by the present Overland Mail are full of the Crawford case, and comment in no light terms on the extraordinary action of the Government throughout this painful business. First of a Civil Servant of the very highest position, one who had earned for himself a great reputation in Bombay for having as Chief Magistrate of that city improved and beautified it, is allowed to be "run in" by the police as if he were a common felon; then when he is brought before a magistrate, the Government Prosecutor is not prepared to go on with the case and asks for a fortnight's remand; that when this is granted, the Government suddenly abandons the prosecution, and the intended trial collapses. No explanation has been made public of this extraordinary course of action.

THE English Press in India is naturally indignant. The Pioneer, a journal not given to speak slightly of the powers that be or the deeds they do, has the following rough remarks on the matter:—"The Indian public was not more astonished at the announcement of the arrest of Mr. Arthur Crawford on a charge of corruption than it will be by the news that the Governor in Council has revoked his previous order sanctioning Mr. Crawford's prosecution. All the accusations have accordingly been withdrawn, and Mr. Crawford has been discharged. A more extraordinary collapse of a prosecution instituted at the instance of the head of a Government was never heard of, and if the Anglo-Indian public call out for some one to be hanged, Lord Reay and his councillors need not be surprised. We are not specifically told why the Governor has seen fit to revoke his original order; but it is not to be supposed that his Excellency would have taken a step so obviously stultifying his Government, had he not found that the prosecution set on foot had not a leg to stand on. Yet Mr. Crawford's arrest was accompanied by an intimation that the Government's resolution had been taken only after a long and careful deliberation, which left no doubt as to its imperative necessity; and the postponement of the trial on two occasions, at the request of the Government Prosecutor, to admit of new charges being added to the indictment, naturally kept the public in the belief, up to the very last moment, that the strongest and most ample grounds existed for suspecting Mr. Crawford's guilt. At present there would seem to be only two alternative conclusions. Either the Government of Bombay has been hoodwinked in the most barefaced manner, or it has acted with the most incredible haste and indiscretion. The public will certainly call for something more than the curt and mysterious order, which is the only substitute for an explanation yet vouchsafed."

BUT to make confusion worse confounded the Bombay Government has, it is said, intimated to the Government of India its intention of trying Mr. Crawford by a Commission, and has asked the Supreme Government to name the Commissioners. The letter from the solicitor to the Government of Bombay announcing the withdrawal of the charges from the magisterial court, and announcing an investigation by Commission, is anything but a satisfactory one. It is putting the cart before the horse. The Commission should have come first.

ANOTHER Bombay Presidency scandal has ended more satisfactorily. Captain Hanwell, A.D.C., who prosecuted a Native jockey for slander, has gained his case, and the Native has been fined Rs. 100, with the alternative of one month's simple imprisonment. Three Native witnesses swore that Captain Hanwell said to the jockey: "Soor, ham do wakht bola piche jao." The Captain swore that what he said was, "D—n your eyes," which is an English, not a Hindustani, form of address.

THE only news from the headquarters of Government at Simla is that no legislative business is going on (for which the land may be grateful), but that amateur theatricals are in full swing. Colonel Hughes Hallett's admirable histrionic powers have not been allowed to remain for the benefit of the benighted Presidency of Madras. He has been deservedly exalted to a higher altitude—that of Judge Advocate-General at Simla. There is much mourning in Ootacamund, where he had lately given a reading of Macbeth. The local Press says that "Ootacamund's loss is Simla's gain." A captain of the Royal Scots, whose burlesque dancing is said to be perfection, has also very properly found a local habitation and honour at the abode of the gods. This is as it should be, for, as one of the Simla correspondents writes to a Bombay paper, "It is only your severe moralists who regard an indulgence in burlesque as one of the symptoms of the frivolity of Simla society."

THE Times of India to hand, dated August 14th, states positively that the Mahommedans of Bombay will not be officially represented at the next National Congress, which is to be held at Allahabad during the cold season. Reuter telegraphs from Bombay, under date August 28th, to the effect that at a meeting of the Aujuman-i-Islam in that city a resolution was passed pledging the Aujuman to be represented.

THE statement that a proposal was made by the Government of India to reduce the European garrison of India by 3,000 men must not be taken to mean that a permanent decrease of strength was contemplated. The Government really suggested to the home authorities that, with a view to relieve the financial pressure, it might be well to reduce the drafts from England during the next trooping season by 3,000 men. This applied solely to British Infantry, no proposal being made as regards Cavalry and Artillery. Both the War Office and the Secretary of State objected to any change being made. The Pioneer says that the wisdom of the decision cannot be gainsaid, for even a temporary reduction of the garrison is most undesirable in view of contingencies which may arise at any moment. The War Office naturally were not disposed to look favourably on the proposal, as all their recruiting arrangements were made for the year, and they would have had 3,000 men thrown on their hands.

SIR ASMAN JAH, during his brief visit to Simla, is said to have spent his money with characteristic generosity. He clothed the poor and fed the hungry amongst the Natives, and gave a liberal grant to the local mosques for repairs. But of all the deeds which possibly pleased the community of Simla most must have been his offering of Rs. 2,500 to the Simla Municipality for the erection of a place of shelter for picnic parties on the summit of Jakko, "as a suitable souvenir of his visit, the almost incessant rain of the previous week marking a certain appropriateness in the gift." It is not mentioned whether his Excellency made the Municipality an offering towards repairing the roof of their own Town Hall, which, it is said, "lets in water freely."

AN interesting feature in connection with the recent opening of the Dufferin Hospital at Nagpur was, says the Pioneer, the presence of a number of Native ladies, who were screened off in a special ward, and the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, who has throughout shown himself a most excellent beggar in connection with Lady Dufferin's movement, seized the opportunity to appeal to them directly. The zenanas of Nagpur, he pointed out, would derive great benefit from the skilled nurses now under training, and they might very well in return endow and support the hospital for women. The Native ladies would doubtless be somewhat surprised at being thus invited to take a direct part in forwarding a public undertaking, and before they could recover Mr. Mackenzie adroitly contrived to make it a matter in which their claim to personal charms was more or less involved. If the husbands tried to raise difficulties he was sure, he said, they would know how to get over them. "The meanest curmudgeon would melt when deified by the lips of the woman he loved." This was a novel way to meet a novel situation, and it shows that Mr. Mackenzie spoke the truth when he said he had not been married twenty-five years for nothing.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

NEW BROOMS.

(By R. K.)

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

"If seven maids with seven mops
Swept it for half a year,
Do you suppose," the Walrus said,
"That they could sweep it clear?"

Ram Buksh, Aryan, went to bed with his buffalo, five goats, three children, and a wife, because the evening mists were chilly. His hut was builded on the mud scooped from a green and smelly tank, and there were microbes in the thin blood of Ram Buksh.

Ram Buksh went to bed on a charpoy stretched across the blue tepid drain, because the nights were hot, and there were more microbes in his blood. Then the Rains came, and Ram Buksh paddled, mid-thigh deep, in water for a day or two with his buffaloes till he was aware of a crampsome feeling at the pit of the stomach. "Mother of my children," said Ram Buksh—"this is death." They gave him cardamoms and capscums, and gingelly-oil and cloves, and they prayed for him. "It is enough," said Ram Buksh, and he twisted himself into a knot and died, and they burned him slightly—for the wood was damp—and the rest of him floated down the river, and was caught in an undercurrent at the bank, and there stayed; and when Imam Din, the jeweller, drank of the stream five days later, he drank Lethe, and passed away, crying in vain upon his gods. His family did not report the death to the Municipality, for they desired to keep Imam Din with them. Therefore, they buried him under the flagging of the courtyard, secretly and by night. Twelve days later, Imam Din had made connection with the well of the house, and there was typhus among the women in the zenana, but no one knew anything about it—some died and some did not; and Ari Booj, the faquir, added to the interest of the proceedings by joining the funeral procession and distributing gratis the more malignant forms of smallpox from which he was just recovering. He had come all the way from Delhi, and has slept on no less than fifteen separate and distinct charpoy; and that was how they got the smallpox into Bahadurgarh. But Eshmith Sahib's dhobi picked it up from Ari Booj when Imam Din's wife was being buried—for he was a merry man, and sent home a beautiful sample among the Sunday shirts. So Eshmith Sahib died. He was only a link in a chain which crawled from the highest to the lowest. The wonder was not that men died like sheep, but that they did not dielikeflies; for their lives and their surroundings, their thoughts, their actions, their sicknesses, their deaths, were parts of a huge conspiracy against cleanliness. And the people loved to have it so. They huddled together in frowsy clusters, while Death mowed his way through them till the scythe blunted against the unresisting flesh, and he had to get a new one. They died by fever, tens of thousands in a month; they died by cholera, a thousand in a week; they died of small-pox, scores in one mohulla; and of dysentery by tens in a house; and when all other deaths failed they laid them down and died because their hands were too weak to hold on to life.

To and fro stamped the Englishman, who is everlastingly at war with the scheme of things. "You shall not die," he said, and he decreed that there should be no more famines. He poured grain down their throats, and when all failed he went down into the strife and died with them, swearing and toiling and working till the last. He fought the famine and put it to flight. Then he wiped his forehead, and attacked the pestilence that walketh in the darkness. Death's scythe swept to and fro, around and about him; but he only planted his feet more firmly in the way of it, and fought off death with a dog-whip. "Live, you ruffian!" said the Englishman to Ram Buksh, as he rode through the reeking village. "Jenab!" said Ram Buksh, "it is as it was in the days of our fathers!" "Then stand back while I alter it," said the Englishman, and by force, and cunning, and a brutal disregard of vested interests he strove to keep Ram Buksh alive. "Clean your mohullas; pay for clean water; keep your streets swept; and see that your food is sound, or I'll make your life a burden to you," said the Englishman. Sometimes he died: but more often Ram Buksh went down, and the Englishman regarded each death as a personal insult.

"Softly here!" said the Government of India. "You're twisting his tail. You mustn't do that. The spread of education forbids, and Ram Buksh is an intelligent voter. Let him work out his own salvation."

"H'm!" said the Englishman, with his head in a midden; "collectively you always were a fool. Here, Ram Buksh, the Sirkar says you are to do all these things for yourself."

"Jenab!" said Ram Buksh, and fell to breeding microbes with renewed vigour.

Curiously enough, it was in the centres of enlightenment that he prosecuted his experiments most energetically. The education had been spread, but so thinly that it could not disguise Ram Buksh's natural instincts. He created an African village, and said it was the hub of the universe, and all the dirt of all the roads failed to convince him that he was not the most advanced person in the world. There was a pause, and Ram Buksh got himself fearfully entangled among Boards and Committees, but he valued them as a bower-bird values shells and red rags. "See!" said the Englishman to the Government of India, "he is blind on that side—blind by birth, training, instinct, and associations. Five-sixths of him is poor stock raised off poor soil, and he'll die on the least provocation. You've no right to let him kill himself."

"But he's educated," said the Government of India.

"I'll concede everything," said the Englishman. "He's a statesman, author, poet, politician, artist, and all else that you wish him to be, but he isn't a Sanitary Engineer. And while you're training him he is dying. Goodness knows that my share in the Government is very limited nowadays, but I'm willing to do all the work while he gets all the credit if you'll only let me have some authority over him in his mud-pie making."

"But the liberty of the subject is sacred," said the Government of India.

"I haven't any," said the Englishman—"he can trail through my compounds; start shrines in the public roads; poison my family; have me into court for nothing; ruin my character; spend my money, and call me an assassin when all is done. I don't object. Let me look after his sanitation."

"But the days of a paternal Government are over: we must depend on the people. Think of what they would say at Home!" said the Government of India. "We have issued a resolution—indeed we have!"

The Englishman sat down and groaned. "I believe you'll issue a Resolution some day notifying your own abolition," said he. "What are you going to do?"

"Constitute more Boards," said the Government of India—"Boards of Control and Supervision—Fund Boards—all sorts of Boards. Nothing like system. It will be at work in three years or so. We haven't any money, but that's a detail."

The Englishman looked at the Resolution and sniffed. "It doesn't touch the weak point of the country."

"What will touch the weak point of the country then?" said the Government of India.

"I used to," said the Englishman. "I was the District Officer, and I twisted their tails. You have taken away my power, and now —"

"Well," said the Government of India, "you seem to think a good deal of yourself."

"Never mind me," said the Englishman. "I'm an effete relic of the past. But Ram Buksh will die, as he used to do."

And now we all wait to see which is right.

RAILWAY OUTRAGES.

The Indian Daily News thus sensibly comments on a matter of considerable importance to the travelling public:—The recent outrage on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway near Nassick Road station, and close to the Godavery Bridge, resulting in the derailment of the mail train, is the second attempt of this nature that has occurred within a few weeks on the same line, and almost in the same locality. These attempts at wholesale murder have not hitherto attracted the attention of either the public or the authorities which, in the interest of the travelling public, they should do. The mere accident that the Nassick derailment has not been attended with a long list of deaths and casualties should in no way deter the Government and the Railway authorities from straining every nerve to bring the crime home to the perpetrators. We are inclined to think that the ordinary working of the Penal Code is scarcely calculated sufficiently to deter malefactors who seek to revenge themselves for private wrongs, actual or supposed, by such diabolical methods. Crimes of this nature are prone to become contagious, and the contagion is liable to spread, and for this very reason they should be checked with a strong hand; and it may be advantageous by special legislation to authorise summary and drastic measures to effectually stamp out the chances of repetition. We see that the departmental enquiry has so far failed, though seven persons are reported as being in custody under suspicion. There can be no question but that the perpetrators of the Nassick derailment were either railway men, or had at some time been employed on railway work. We are not at present aware whether the immediate portion of the line attacked was laid with wooden or iron sleepers, but in either case the work of removing a section of rail would ordinarily engage two or three skilled workmen acquainted with the mode of fastening the rails, &c., for half-an-hour or more, and they would have to bring with them the necessary appliances, such as pinch bars and spanners, to accomplish their purpose. These appliances could only be obtained from the nearest tool chest in charge of the mistry of the permanent way gang; without the regular appliances, and with ruder implements, the time required to displace a rail would be considerably longer, and it must be remembered that in this case the work was done thoroughly; it was not an instance of the rail being merely loosened, in the hope that the train might itself displace it. The rail was taken out and laid on the permanent way, the fish bolts being thrown under the bridge. Bearing these facts in mind, and knowing that the head-quarters of the permanent way gangs on all railways are quartered at a distance of three to four miles apart, and that each length of line is supposed to be patrolled by the mistry in charge before the mail train passes, it is difficult to conceive how, without the cognizance or connivance of some of these men, the line could be tampered with, and whole rails removed, as was the case. We believe the procedure that generally obtains, subsequent to accidents of this nature, is to quarter punitive police in the neighbourhood of the outrage; hitherto this has utterly failed either as a detective or preventive measure, and in the interests of the public, we think a surer means, both to bring home conviction to the offenders as well as to prevent the recurrence of such diabolical acts, would be to offer such a reward as would induce men to come forward and give evidence that would lead to the conviction of the offenders, with a view to their being brought under the provisions of criminal laws which should be specially enacted to meet cases of this class. Crimes of this nature, like those of the dynamiters, are inadequately met by the provision, of modern legislation, and the Government would be in sympathy with public opinion, if they brought forward a measure calculated to stamp out a crime that threatens the safety of the whole travelling community for the gratification of a malignant personal revenge which hitherto has invariably been found to be the motive instigating men in these cases. We do not attempt to suggest what special direction such legislation should assume; but as we understand a revised Railway Bill is under consideration, the question might advantageously be discussed at the coming Railway Conference at Simla, with a view to a suitable provision being made in the Bill.

THE INDIAN TURF.

(Pioneer.)

The hopelessness of attempting to reason with "The Kingdom of Bombay" on all matters touching ordinary life is now apparent. A contemporary, learned in the law, has just devoted a long article to the discussion of the latest Home racing scandal, and in an evil hour has glorified the Indian turf at the expense of that not very green plot across the water. "Here," we are told, "we have no welchers, and no pulling, ramping or kidding. We have our two or three firms of respectable bookmakers, our lotteries and our totalisators; but everything is fair and square, and the sportsman who buys a horse in the lottery has the most perfect security that the horse which carries his fortunes will run straight and, unless hopelessly distanced, will be ridden out." This, be it remembered, is not a description of Arcadia but of India, where, strange as it may seem to the virginal innocence of our contemporary, such things as "pulling" and "kidding" are not absolutely unknown. A novice who plunged into the maze of Indian racing matters with sentiments so noble and confiding as those which we have just quoted, would at the end of a year find himself disagreeably enlightened as to the running or otherwise of horses purchased in lotteries and ridden out in the interests of the game. Let it be clearly understood that we do not say that Indian racing is one jot worse than the home article; but we decline to subscribe to the statement that it is invariably "indulged in from pure love of the horse and of sport." One short night in a lottery-tent would enlighten the guileless writer as to the exact percentage of "pure love," either of horse or man, which enters into the play, and few indeed are the gentlemen who spend their substance on racing stables for sport's sake. But it is to be conceded that in a land where most men know something about, and keep something in the nature of, horseflesh, the relations between owner and animal are closer than they are at home. This may be an advantage, but not to the outsider. We have not many racing scandals in India, for the simple reason that men prefer to settle differences in the privacy of their own quarters instead of appealing to the law; but outward calm is small proof of internal sobriety. Let no unthinking young man who is meditating registering his colours, accept unreservedly the dictum that he may race "without fear of being sold by his jockey or jockeyed by his friend."

They may manage things better on the Bombay side, but the news has not yet spread up-country, where the "sportsman or sporting man," to quote our contemporary's distinction, will read of the reign of purity and confidence with derisive chuckles.

EUROPEANS—NOT WANTED! IN BURMA.

(Mandalay Herald.)

A recrudescence of Bernardism, that well-intentioned, highly conceived, but mischievous "fad," which once punished rebellion and outrage with a forgiveness almost divine in its mercy, seems to have again appeared in our administration, not a hundred miles from Mandalay. In a district that has been, and is at present notoriously disturbed and ravaged by the dacoit, the post of a European head constable fell vacant. An ardent, and active European young gentleman with intelligence, and knowledge of Burmese considerably above that met with ordinarily among those who take to head-constableships, anxious for service and advancement, applied for the vacant post. In reply to his application he gets the astounding reply that "no more Europeans are required for the Civil Police of this district," and this reply is signed by the District Superintendent of Police. We do not object to the delusion of Burma for Burmans being played in this country so long as it serves any useful purpose. It is all very well to say that we ought to absorb as much of the Burman element into our administration of this country as possible. No one can object to this. But that a District Superintendent of Police should be empowered to prevent the introduction of Europeans in the police service, in which the Burman is proved untrustworthy, in a district rife with dacoital activity, is handing down the administration to a very dangerous depth of folly. Why should competent Europeans be debarred from competing with any other race in Burma in the public services? We do not say or advocate that the European should be always preferred to the prejudice and detriment of worthy and competent Burmans, but that the European is to give place to the Burman simply because he is a European is positively unjust.

RAILWAYS IN BURMA.

(Rangoon Times.)

Though there has been a considerable falling off in the earnings of Indian Railways during the past year, it is very satisfactory to be able to state that the Burma State Railway, in no way contributed to this decrease. Comparing the earnings of last year with those of 1886 we find they increased to the extent of 25 per cent., a small percentage of which was due to the carriage of railway materials. At the close of the year the capital account stood at fully two crores and eighty lakhs of rupees, the net earnings for the year, showing a profit of nearly 5·50 per cent. This is, we believe, the highest rate of interest ever earned on the capital of the line, and it goes to show that railways in Burma can be made to pay well, and they might pay still better. During the year the total earnings of the railway amounted to thirty-three and a quarter lacs, and the expenditure to seventeen and three quarter lacs. Under the earnings head we observe that nearly three and a half million passengers were carried, 97 per cent. being third-class passengers, 396,300 tons of goods were carried, the principal items being rice, timber and cutch. Turning to the expenditure, we find it was 54 per cent. of the earnings, and this result when contrasted with other railways in India compares very favourably indeed, specially so, when it is borne in mind that the cost of staff, of fuel, and of stores is necessarily much greater than on the majority of Indian Railways. Not only has the railway proved itself to be a financial success, but it has conferred benefits on the country which cannot well be estimated. With these excellent results before us, we have every reason to believe that the extension to Mandalay will, at no distant date, pay a still more handsome return on the capital expended, and there is no doubt it will also help very materially to develop the revenues of the country, and bring peace and prosperity to those parts of Upper Burma through which it passes.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

(Englishman.)

We referred lately to the diversity of measures and standards for which the official reports of India are remarkable. The returns of the river-borne trade of Assam are given in maunds, and take no account of the matter of value. In the last quarter of 1887-88, the principal commodities imported into the province weighed 638,746 maunds, and the exports 439,307 maunds, against 927,802 and 292,151 maunds respectively in the corresponding quarter of the previous year. Thus there was a decrease of 31 per cent. in the imports, a rise of 50 per cent. in the exports, and a falling-off in the traffic by 11 per cent. in the aggregate. The imports in cotton goods, metals, ghi, salt, and tobacco exhibited an increase; but imports of grains and sugar fell off considerably, the decrease being most marked in the cases of wheat and rice. It is believed that this was the result of a comparatively good harvest during the year 1887. The increase in the exports was mainly due to a larger quantity than usual of raw cotton, rice, hides, skins, and oilseeds being exported. The exports of tea decreased by 13,244 maunds. It is curious to read of maunds of liquor, but here we are told that Assam received 160,798 maunds of wine, and we can only infer from the drinks being heavier than last year that Assam is prospering, and is indulging itself more freely. Obviously, however, the inference is faulty. The liquor may weigh more and yet cost less. In fact, it is the cheap drinks that are heaviest. Assam, for all these maunds, may be going to the bad, and consoling itself with a tippie that is only estimable in avoirdupois. This is undoubtedly a defect which runs through all these statistics, rendering them little better than a bauble to delight the official compiler.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA: A NATIVE VIEW.

During the past few weeks a number of articles have appeared in the Vernacular Press of Bengal upon the question of Russia's rivalry with England in Asia. The following translations by the Pioneer, which are purposely made as near literal as possible, will serve to show what the views of some Bengali journalists are upon this subject:—

The Bangabasi (Calcutta) says:—"At this present moment the Lion has become apprehensive with fear of the Bear. The settlement of the Boundary question will not preserve peace. Embankments of sand cannot withstand high tides. The nature of the European is that so long as he does not find an opportunity he remains quiet; whenever he finds an opportunity he avails himself of it at once. Will the Russians fear your boundary line? If the Russians were the incarnation of virtue it is doubtful whether the English could place reliance on their assertions. If their sole object was to advance towards Constantinople, why have they marched so close to India? Their pretence is that they are moving towards Constantinople, but practically they are advancing towards India. We do not mean to say that the Russians have no intention of moving towards Constantinople, but (our contention is that) if they find an opportunity of advancing towards India they will avail themselves of that first of all, and give up the idea of moving towards Constantinople. How can the English believe that for the sake of Constantinople the Russian will let them alone? We would not believe even if the Russians swore in the name of their spiritual guide. So we say that the Russians will have to be feared. Who can say when and in what manner the English will rid themselves of this fear? The English believe that they have no means of doing so, 'but we know that there are such means.' The English are fearful on account of India: that fear may be removed. Where the disease is, the remedy is also found there. You should not displease the Natives of India and make distinction between white and black in any way. If 250 millions of the Indian population be discontented, then you will not get rid of our fear of Russia. You must not introduce any measure which will offend the Natives of India, and you should also see that justice is duly administered. Englishmen, you are not foolish! Why do you not introduce the administrative policy of your country into a foreign country? Better keep the people of India happy and contented: you will then for ever remain happy and contented."

In an article headed "Who Will Suffer More?" the Dainik and Chandrika (Calcutta) writes as follows:—

"The Russians are gradually advancing towards India. The English are very apprehensive of the Russians, more particularly as regards India. If Russia really takes possession of India then the question is—Who will suffer more? The English themselves say that if India passes out of their hands England will suffer a great deal. This is true. By reason of India the commerce and manufactures of England have considerably increased, and from India England is drawing interest on her capital. A good deal of English capital has been laid out on railways; and these have been providing many with the means of livelihood. English merchants, shopkeepers, brokers, indigo and tea planters are earning their bread by India, not to mention the civil and military officers—in fact, the English will be ruined if India passes out of their hands. The Anglo-Indian readers must not feel offended with us for this assertion. We do not say this. It has been stated by an Englishman of high position in a very respectable English paper. This assertion is very true. Who will suffer more if India passes into the hands of the Russians? What is it to us? Subjects will obey whoever may be their king. We were under the Hindus; then we became subjects of the Pathans, and afterwards of the Moghuls; now we are under English rule. The English have kept us in happiness as well as in misery, and that is not very bad. We shall have to become subservient to him who shall become the sovereign of our country. So we say that it is the English who will suffer more if India passes out of their hands. We shall remain if the Russian occupy India. They will take care of us. There will then be no Englishmen in India. Then the facility for English commerce and manufactures and the influence of indigo and tea planters will pass away. The facility for employing English capital will cease. There will then be no means to support thousands of civil and military officers. In fact, England will greatly suffer. So we earnestly beseech you Englishmen to do your best in order that you may hold India in your possession for ever. Better satisfy the people of India. If 250 million of India's population be contented, then neither gods nor demons will be able to do anything against you."

Shomeprokash (Calcutta) remarks:—

"It is impossible for the Russians to take possession of India—unless they can defeat the English. For this reason they have become rivals of the English. The Russians are excited, and it is no longer possible to pacify them. Therefore, Englishmen better be careful! Either to-day or to-morrow the Russians will meet you once more in the battle-field. We are very sorry for the want of foresight on the part of the English. In connection with the crooked policy of Lord Dufferin the English conquered Burma the other day, and for this they are suffering. It has now become very difficult for the English to preserve peace in Burma. If the Russians were now to conquer India we are not in a position to say what the English would do. Instead of being masters of an extensive Empire, without the capacity to keep it in peace, it would be better, we think, to have small territories which may be well managed. So we say, Englishmen better give up the lust for territory; what you have is enough. You should try and preserve what you have already in your possession."

The Prajabandhu (Chandernagore) says:—

"On the 27th of May last, which was the anniversary-day of his Majesty Alexander III., the Emperor of Russia, the Transcaspian Railway to Samarkand was opened with great pomp. The rejoicings on the opening day of this railway have astounded the heart of the British Lion. We find that what the Native paper said after the Russian victory at the battle of Pendjeh has now been stated in a similar manner in the pages of Blackwood's Magazine. The assertion of the Russians, 'We stop here and shall proceed no further,' has no value, and cannot be relied upon. What the Russians may say in words their ultimate design is undoubtedly against India. But what is really being done for that (i.e., to meet that design)? At this moment is it proper to waste energy in Tibet and Burma? Or can the realisation of some money from Native Princes through pressure be of any benefit? Our English contemporaries have now begun to say that England will suffer a great deal if she be deprived of India. For a long time past the Natives of this country have been saying: 'Englishmen, be careful, and do your best for the defence of India against Russia's aggression.' But who hears that? So we say: 'You are not lending your ears to those words, because you are now in your glory; but you will have to shed tears hereafter.'"

BENGAL.

THE Englishman learns that the Bonai expedition has just returned to Chaibasa, and that Mr. Renny has met with complete success in the matter on which he was deputed. It appears that the whole Gond race of Bonai had revolted against the Raja, and were robbing his granaries as well as those of his supporters. All the Gond leaders have surrendered to Messrs. Renny and Stack, and have asked for a hearing of their grievances by the Deputy Commissioner. The cause of the disturbances has not yet been made known, but it is said to be found in that kind of oppression so frequently resorted to by Native rulers in dealing with aboriginal and semi-savage subjects. The expedition traversed in about three weeks nearly 200 miles of wild country, most of which, lying in the Kemighar and Bonai States, is almost impassable at this most unhealthy season of the year. From the absence of any kind of roads for the greater part of the distance it had to make its way up the beds of streams and nullahs through dense forests and jungle, and over mountains ranging from 2,000 to 3,000 feet high. The little expedition seems to have encountered great hardships, owing to almost incessant rain, which brought down the mountain torrents, stopping progress, and making a misery of camping in the open. In spite of all difficulties it managed to keep in efficient working order till near the end of the return journey, when fever and dysentery laid up about half of the party.

THE Secretary of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce has notified by circular to the members that a special general meeting will be held on the 31st October "to consider, and, if necessary, to amend the Chamber's Tonnage Schedule," which, in certain particulars, is at variance with the existing custom of the Port of Calcutta.

DURING the week ended the 28th of July there were 169 deaths registered in Calcutta, giving a death-rate of 20·3 per thousand per annum. In the previous week there were 159 deaths, and the death-rate was 19.1 per thousand. There were no deaths from small-pox, 15 from cholera, 34 from fevers, 31 from tetanus, and 2 from causes not specified. The deaths are thus classified:—1 Non-Asiatic, 6 Mixed Races, 123 Hindoos, 35 Mahomedans, and 4 other races. The Health Officer adds the following remarks:—The total number of deaths registered during the week ending 28th July was 169 against 159 and 143 in the two preceding weeks, and lower than the corresponding week of last year by 20. There were 15 deaths from cholera, against 12 and 11 in the two preceding weeks; the number is lower than the average of the past quinquennium by 2. There were no deaths from small-pox during the week. The mortality from fevers and bowel-complaints amounted to 34 and 15 respectively, against 41 and 10 in the preceding week. The general death-rate of the week was 20.3 per mille per annum, against 22.8, the mean of the last five years.

A CURIOUS accident happened on the Northern Bengal Railway, at about 1 A.M., August 6th, to the Sunday Darjeeling up-mail. The train was approaching Sultanpur, sixty miles from Sara, when the coupling of the carriage next to the engine and tender parted. The engine proceeded on, the driver being apparently unaware that he had lost his train, and the guard equally ignorant that he had lost his engine. The engine slowed and drew up at Sultanpur; and shortly afterwards the train which was following with an accelerated motion, owing to a slight incline towards the station, dashed into the engine and tender. Half-a-dozen carriages were derailed by the shock, and three rolled down the embankment. Fortunately only one Native passenger and a Native railway employé were in the first carriage that collided with the tender, and which was considerably smashed up. These two men are rather severely injured.

MADRAS.

THE Hon. Mr. Master has had a relapse, and his condition again gives much cause for anxiety.

DURING July the Mysore Mine crushed 1,430 tons of mixed ore, yielding 1,231 ounces of gold; 370 tons concentrated tailings gave 93½ ounces of gold. Nundydroog crushed 350 tons for 620 ounces of gold. Ooregum crushed 205 tons for 415 ounces of gold. Balaghat crushed 165 tons for 354 ounces of gold. The Indian Consolidated crushed 380 tons of ore for 212 ounces of gold.

At the annual general meeting of the Madras Bank on the 6th inst., the Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said that the Bank had never been in a better position. The reserve fund was twelve lakhs, or 24 per cent. of the Bank's capital. The shares were quoted at 69 per cent. premium, against 37 at the same time last year. The average minimum rate of interest was 4½ against 6½ last year. The report was adopted. A vote of thanks having been accorded to the secretary, &c., the meeting terminated.

FOR the past two months a very useful course of instruction has been carried forward in Fort St. George in what is known as Stretcher-Bearer Drill. The object of this drill is to teach men how best to pick up, and carry to the rear, the wounded on a battlefield. Also how to improvise, with the arms and hands, supports on which the wounded may be carried for short distances, with the least amount of pain and discomfort. The class has been instructed by Surgeon A. H. Dixon, Medical Staff, and has been attended by men of the Madras Volunteer Guards and the Duke's Own Artillery, as well as by a number of the Regulars. There have been three parades a week, in the evenings, in squad, company, and stretcher-drill.

BOMBAY.

CAPTAIN J. S. KING, Bombay Staff Corps, has been promoted to Major.

CAPTAIN A. PRINGLE, Staff Corps, Squadron Commander, 2nd Lancers, has been granted leave for one year.

MR. COWASJEE BEZONJEE ALBLESS has contributed Rs. 25,000 towards the funds of the Jamsetjee Nusserwanjee Petit Parsee Orphanage.

LIEUT. F. L. VINCENT, 2nd Battalion King's Own (Yorkshire Light Infantry), has been appointed a probationer for the Bombay Staff Corps.

MR. C. E. S. STEELE is appointed to be substantive pro tem. City Magistrate of Kurrachee, with effect from the date of retirement of Mr. F. Gibbons.

MR. H. F. ASTON, Acting Judge and Sessions Judge of Ahmedabad, has been allowed privilege leave for three months. Mr. E. H. Moscardi acts for him.

LIEUTENANT H. R. MEAD, 2nd Battalion Durham Light Infantry, Officiating Wing Officer, 16th Bombay Infantry, has been admitted to the Bombay Staff Corps.

COLONEL G. C. GRANT, Judge and Sessions Judge of Kurrachee, has been appointed to perform the duties of Judge and Sessions Judge at Hyderabad, in addition to his own duties, during the absence of Mr. G. McCorkell, or till further orders.

THE undermentioned officers of the Staff Corps become entitled to the Colonel's allowance from the 29th ult.:—Lieut.-Colonel (Brevet Colonel) C. D. U. La Touche and Lieut.-Colonel (Brevet Colonel) A. T. Moore, C.B., V.C.

MR. FRAMJI DINSHAW PETIT, the son of the Parsee Knight, has presented to the Committee for the Erection of Dwelling Houses for Poor Parsees a plot of ground near Guilder-street, valued at about Rs. 6,500.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay season reports for the past week:—River continues low in Sind. Rain in parts of Kurrachee and Hyderabad and throughout the Presidency proper, but insufficient for sowing in parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country and for rice transplantation in Gujarat; also insufficient in Kattywar and Baroda. Sowing of early crops progressing in parts of Surat, Nasik, Satara, Dharwar, and Baroda, and transplantation in parts of Kurrachee, Nasik, and Tanna. Young crops suffering for want of moisture in parts of Kurrachee, Ahmedabad, Nasik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Sholapur, Bijapur, and Dharwar. Rice damaged by excessive rain in parts of Kanara. Cotton in parts of Kattywar and standing crops in parts of Upper Sinn Frontier injured by insects. Fodder scarce in parts of Kurrachee, Khandesh, Nasik, Sholapur, Belgaum, and Baroda.

It is amazing that scholarships of the value of £150 sterling per annum, tenable for four years, and open to the competition of Native or Eurasian candidates, male or female, should annually go a begging: yet such is the case. The Indian Gilchrist Scholarships, of which the above is a description, have of late years attracted so little competition that the trustees gave notice some time back of their intention to offer no more scholarships after January, 1888. However, India is to have another chance, and the trustees, being unwilling "to sever their connection with the educational advancement of India," have decided to continue the Indian Scholarship for another year—viz., for January, 1889. It is to be hoped that the competition on this occasion will be such as to justify the permanent establishment of this valuable boon to the educated youth of India.

THERE has been another case of fraudulent conduct in connection with the Public Service Certificate Examinations which has resulted in the ruin of the two principal culprits concerned. It appears that a young man named Ganesh Dowlut Talati, a probationary talati in the Tanna District, who had already once passed the examination at the Colaba Centre in 1884, appeared at the Ahmednugger Centre at the examination of 1887 and personated a friend, named Ganesh Khanderao Gadkarne. The fraud came successfully off. He passed the examination, obtained the certificate, and gave it to his friend, who obtained by means of it, a temporary Government post in Tanna. Circumstances led the education authorities to suspect wrong-doing, and investigations were instituted which have resulted in the sentencing of the two young men above named to two months' rigorous imprisonment each.

It is announced, says the Policy Holder, that Mr. Thomas Lang, who arrived from India about a year ago, after an absence of fifteen years, to take up the appointment of general superintendent of English branches, &c., to the Standard Life Assurance Company, is about to return to India, having accepted the appointment of "General Secretary for India and the East" offered to him by the Standard directors. During the short period in which Mr. Lang has been in this country he has won the esteem of the local secretaries and connections of the company generally, and his energy and genial influence have already had a good effect on the English business. His return to the East will be much regretted by his colleagues at home. Mr. Lang's Indian experience has marked him out as the most suitable man to administer the company's affairs in the East, and there is no doubt that his qualifications and training fit him in a special manner to maintain the unrivalled position which the Standard holds in that part of the world.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

ONE of the Queen's Punjabee servants recently obtained six months' leave, and returned to India, owing to his mother's illness. Since his arrival in India he has received an autograph letter from Her Majesty, expressing, in the most kind terms, the hope that his mother's health has improved.

THE Punjabi Police in the districts traversed by the Tounghoo-Mandalay Railway, struck by the natural richness of the soil, are desirous in many instances of settling in the country and forming villages of their own. Their proposals are received favourably, but the difficulty lies in the provisions of the Arms Act, to which the Punjabis are said to object.

THE cholera is, the Lahore paper of the 9th Aug. learns by telegraph, much less severe at Murree. Heavy rain and thunderstorms have taken place, and it is hoped that these will still further benefit the health of the station. At Rawalpindi, on the other hand, the outbreak has become really serious. There were no fewer than twenty seizures in one day among the King's Dragoon Guards. Many people, who had been meditating flight from Murree, are now detained there owing to the bad news from below.

THE POONA TURF SCANDAL.

The hearing of the case in which Captain Hanwell charged Ahmed Ali with defamation of character has been brought to a close. After witnesses had been called for the defence, Captain Hanwell addressed the Court as follows:—

On the 3rd February last I rode in two races—viz., the Dealers' Handicap and the Connaught Cup, in both of which Major Peyton was riding. In the former race Major Peyton deposed that he heard me shouting at the accused two or three times going down the straight, but that he did not hear me shout at him at all in the Connaught Cup. Captain Payne, who was also riding in the race for the Cup, says he did not hear me shout at all; and Ahmed himself acknowledges that I did not do so until just at the finish; saying that it was about five lengths from the post. Dr. Drury, who was present in the Race Stand, says that he heard me using strong language to Ahmed, and telling him to keep straight; but that was all he heard. I purposely produced Dr. Drury as a witness because he is owner of the horse Ahmed was riding; and if he is perfectly satisfied that I never used the words imputed to me that should be pretty conclusive proof that I did not. There were over 200 people in the Stand. Had I known that Ahmed referred in his accusation to this point of the race I could have produced any number of witnesses from those present in the Stand and enclosure. Again, Ahmed has not produced a single witness from among those present at the Stand, though I shouted out loud enough for all to hear. It would have been impossible for me to have done it; it takes less than a second to gallop five lengths, and I could not have given such instructions any more than he could stop his horse. I had won the race 100 yards from home, and Mikado was stopping from distress, but when I went up to him Ahmed deliberately tried to cross me. There were, I know, three or four witnesses present when I thrashed Ahmed, and the evidence produced in Court to-day is mainly true, with the exception that the words I used were "Kis waste cross kiya;" and not as stated by the witnesses. They are ignorant men who have no knowledge of English, and it would be an easy thing to drill them as to what words they should depose to my having used. Mr. Merwanjee says that Ahmed was actuated by no spite against me, but he acknowledged in his examination that he was perfectly aware how serious a thing such a charge, if proved, would be to me. It would affect me most disastrously in every way—in the service, on the Turf, and generally in society. Another thing that proves the element of spite is the fact that Ahmed did not report me to the Stewards until after I had assaulted him, and he appears to have deliberately planned this accusation in order to pay me out. He knew perfectly well that his duty to his employer was to report such a matter to him immediately after the race, and he therefore stated in examination that he did so, but this is altogether denied by Dr. Drury. I wish particularly to call attention to the evidence concerning my swearing at Ahmed two or three times during the race for the Dealers' Handicap, and only once when close home in the Connaught Cup. In the Handicap Ahmed three times made an attempt to cross me, and I shouted at him on each occasion; but in the Connaught Cup he only attempted to cross me when I collared him near the winning-post, and evidence shows that I only shouted at him then. The Cantonment Magistrate now retired into Chambers to consider the evidence adduced in the case, and after an absence of about two-and-a-half hours returned into Court and read his judgment. After reviewing the evidence he concluded, "I consider the accused maliciously attributed the words 'Piche raho' to the complainant. I, therefore, find him guilty under Section 500 I P C, and sentence him to pay a fine of Rs. 100, one hundred. In default to undergo one month's simple imprisonment."

SIR SARDAR AYUB KHAN has left Murree for Rawalpindi, wisely choosing heat and health to coolness and cholera. He did not go to his own house, but to one next to the Mess House of the 45th Sikhs. As there has been so much sickness among his followers, the military authorities very properly refused to allow him to remain there, and he had to move into other quarters.

THE CHINESE NATIVE PRESS.

The British Consul-General in Shanghai in his last report refers to the growth of the Native newspaper press in Shanghai. Besides religious and illustrated periodicals there are two daily newspapers published in Chinese there, the Shen Pao, published by an Englishman, and the Hu Pao, which is published at the office of the leading English newspaper in China. The former has an average daily circulation of 12,000 to 13,000 copies. During the Franco-Chinese war, its articles being written by patriotic Chinese to suit the popular taste, the circulation increased to 18,000 copies daily. The price is 10 cash, or less than a halfpenny, yet it is often sold after perusal, sometimes changing hands more than once during the day. It is then bought by employes of the Chinese post-office, who send it to places in the interior where steamers cannot reach. The Hu Pao has also a considerable circulation, especially within the Kiangsu province. Both papers, says Mr. Hughes, though owned by foreigners, are bona fide organs of Chinese educated public opinion. In international questions they do not always take the foreign side, but their influence is, on the whole, exerted in favour of progress and civilisation. The owner of the Shen Pao has also founded a printing and stereotyping business. It was started four years ago for the express purpose of reprinting with movable type a copy of the collection of Chinese literature, ancient and modern, issued under Imperial directions in the seventeenth century. The whole work consists of 6,000 volumes, but in the new edition these will be comprised in the comparatively convenient number of 1,800. The printing is finished, and the binding is being done as rapidly as possible. An establishment for printing by photo-lithography was founded by the same gentleman, but has now passed into Chinese hands, and has been so successful that eight similar establishments, all Chinese owned, are now in operation. Many of the books are beautifully executed, the illustrations especially being well done. Handsome editions of encyclopedias and dictionaries have been published at much cheaper prices than those for which they could formerly be obtained, but this has necessitated the use for these voluminous works of prints so small that readers are obliged to use magnifying glasses.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Sir Syed Ahmed has sent the following to the Pioneer:—

"NOTICE.

"The National Congress, which the Bengalis and some others have made, has been thoroughly discussed throughout India. In Bengal, Behar, Oudh, the North-West Provinces, the Punjab, Bombay, and Madras, influential and distinguished Mahomedans and large general meetings have expressed extreme antagonism to the movement; and have stated their conviction that the Congress, and its objects, and its methods, by which hatred and hostility to the Government are stirred up in the ignorant masses, are in the highest degree dangerous for the Government, for the country, and for the preservation of peace. Influential and distinguished Hindoo gentlemen of these Provinces have expressed their agreement with Mahomedans in these views. In Oudh the men of real influence, the Talukdars, both Hindoo and Mahomedan, have united in refusing to join the movement, and in stating their opposition to its objects. His Highness the Maharaja of Benares, Maharaja of the most sacred city of the Hindoos, has, in a large meeting attended by all the most respectable Hindoo gentlemen of that town, expressed thorough-going and uncompromising hostility to the Congress. There have recently been two large meetings of Mahomedans in Bombay. In one of them his Highness Aga Akbar Shah was president. The other was held at the house of Mr. Mahomed Ali Rogay. Both of them passed resolutions condemning the Congress, and declining to join it. Besides these reasons of a general nature, the most thoughtful and influential Mahomedans have stated their belief that the proposals of the Congress would be extremely prejudicial to the interests of Mahomedans, not only in their present condition, but also in the future, however much their education might have advanced; and that these proposals would seriously endanger the preservation of order. If the measures of the Congress be carried into effect the disturbance of the peace will be so great that it is impossible to prophesy its extent. It will be no wonder if such events occur as the imagination cannot picture. What surprise if the Government of India be obliged to substitute a military for a civil administration?"

"In India all people—the officials and the public—are well aware of the opposition that has been raised by Hindoos and Mahomedans to the Congress. But the supporters of the Congress are trying by wrong means to create a false impression in England, that the whole of the people of India, Hindoo and Mahomedan, are in its favour. Hence it is necessary for us to inform the people of England that the Mahomedans and many influential and powerful Hindoos are opposed to it. It is, therefore, desirable that an association be formed of those Hindoos and Mahomedans who are opposed to the Congress. Every member of this association, which will be called the Indian Patriotic Association, should pay a subscription of five rupees per month; and a request will also be made for donations from those who are inclined further to help the movement. The business of this association will be to inform the people of England of the real condition of India by printing pamphlets from time to time. Several thousand copies of each pamphlet will be sent to London to be distributed among members of Parliament, editors of newspapers, &c.; and will be circulated by means of an agency, arrangements for which have been already made. If, besides Hindoos and Mahomedans, any Englishmen wish to join the association, we shall be extremely grateful to them for their assistance. But no Government servant, whether Hindoo, Mahomedan, or English, can be accepted as a member of the association. Those gentlemen who wish to join this association should send their names either to Munshi Imtiaz Ali at Lucknow; to Raja Shiva Prashad, C.S.I., at Benares; or to Mr. Theodore Beck, or the undersigned at Aligarh. A list of names, with subscriptions and donations, will be published."

THE UNCOVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE.

At a meeting held at Simla, August 4th, of the Simla branch of the Uncovenanted Service Association, an Executive Committee was elected, and the following resolutions were adopted:—1. This meeting recommends concerted action by individuals and branch associations, and suggests that all members should join some branch of the association, in order to insure unity of action. 2. This meeting recommends all members and all associations to work in concert with the Calcutta Central Association, which should be considered the head association for India. 3. The committee of the Simla branch should draw up a pamphlet dealing with the disqualifications of the Uncovenanted Services, and with the recent debate in the House of Commons, and this pamphlet should be offered to the Calcutta Association for circulation. 4. In the opinion of this meeting a pamphlet would be of service in appealing to the members of Parliament. 5. In the opinion of this meeting the first action to be taken should be the preparation of a petition to the House of Commons praying that a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into the effects produced by the fall in exchange on the services, and such other points as the House may direct.

A meeting of members of the Uncovenanted Civil Service was held at Bellary on July 19 to consider what reply should be sent to a circular letter lately received from the London Committee. After an introductory address by Mr. Wheatley, the following resolutions were passed:—That this meeting duly appreciates the very able manner in which the claims of the Indian Uncovenanted Civil Service have been advocated by Mr. King. That this meeting entirely agrees with the view taken by the London Committee of the recent debate in Parliament. That it is most desirable to obtain the support of the English Press, and that the Daily Telegraph be asked to take up the case of the Indian Uncovenanted Civil Service. That each member now present, either by direct communication or through the agency of friends, endeavour to obtain the support of one or more members of Parliament. That the members present are prepared to sign a fresh petition to Parliament in time to be presented by Mr. H. S. King next session. That each member subscribe Rs. 10, to be remitted to the London Committee with the promise of a further contribution when necessary.

The gentlemen present at the meeting were:—Messrs. H. C. D. La Touche, Engineer-in-Chief, P. W. D.; M. R. Trower, Superintendent of Telegraphs; G. Wheatley, Assistant Superintendent of Telegraphs; B. P. Milsom, Executive Engineer, P. W. D.; A. H. Garrett, Executive Engineer, P. W. D.; T. Michell, Executive Engineer, P. W. D.; C. E. Cardew, Locomotive Superintendent; G. F. Thompson, Assistant Engineer, P. W. D.; T. C. Lyle, Assistant Engineer, P. W. D.; P. M. Lushington, Assistant Conservator of Forests; and R. H. L. Lushington, Madras Revenue Surveys.

The following gentlemen were unable to attend, but have signified their assent to the resolutions adopted:—Messrs. J. H. Cook, Deputy Superintendent Revenue Survey; R. W. L. Tooz, Executive Engineer, P. W. D.; J. M. Harman, Executive Engineer, P. W. D.; B. W. Cantopher, Executive Engineer, P. W. D.; J. W. A. McNair, Chief Storekeeper; N. D. La Touche, Assistant Engineer, P. W. D.; and G. Rickle, Inspector of Schools.

CAPTAIN HORACE HAYES has just arrived from Japan, and intends starting a paper in Calcutta under the name of Hayes' Sporting News. He will also attend all race meetings, and probably offer his services as starter.

A SERAGLIO PENSIONED.

The late ex-King of Oudh left 249 ladies to bemoan his demise, and the Government of India has sanctioned the disbursement of Rs.11,049 per mensem for their maintenance. They have been divided into eight classes, A to H, of Begums, and a discarded Begum. The A class Begums will receive from Rs.75 to Rs.200 a month; the B class Begums from Rs.75 to Rs.200; the C class from Rs.75 to Rs.130, and so on. The discarded Begum is allotted Rs.15 a month. All the ladies have the prefix of Nawab, and the affix of Sahiba to their names. The following is the summary of the list:—

THE MORGAN-ROSS CASE.

The late Morgan-Ross crim. con. case has now entered upon a new phase, Mr. Ross having filed a complaint against Mr. Rhodes Morgan for perjury, an application was made at Calicut before Mr. Louis Moore, the judge, on the 27th of July for sanction to prosecute. Mr. Melliush appeared for Mr. Ross, and Mr. Lanauze for Mr. Morgan.

Mr. Melliush, in opening the case, said, that defendant had stated on oath in the Police Court that his wife arrived at Ooty, on 2nd March, that he cohabited two or three days with her, &c., and had filed a petition for divorce in the District Court, in which he stated "I lived and cohabited with my wife at Ootacamund, Manantoddy, Coimbatore, and, lastly, at Calicut" that this statement was therefore false, and that he had made it, knowing it to be false.

Mr. Lanauze said that his client disputed the accuracy of what he was said to have stated in the Police Court. It was true that the copy of his client's statement in that Court produced was a duly certified copy; but that the statement made by him was neither read over nor signed by him; that what his client did say was "on April 12 I went down to Wynaad and ceased to reside with my wife then. I ceased to cohabit with her almost immediately after she came to Ooty from Calicut—this was early in March," and to bear out this statement he had further said, when cross-examined, "I was living in the same house with my wife at the time, but occupied another room," Mr. Lanauze pointed out that the defendant at further length made three statements which fully bore out what he said in the Police Court and High Court and proceeded to quote them. Counsel then said that he would produce witnesses, if need be, to prove that defendant was seriously ill with fever and heart disease and that from the day of his wife's arrival he had occupied a separate room; and though he resided under the same roof that was a different thing to cohabitation, which was a technical word, only used in a strictly legal sense with reference to the marital life of husband and wife. He then went on to say that the other side had shown no motive for making a false statement. His client had filed a suit against his wife alone, and as the Judge knew, it was by his order that his client was compelled to include the co-respondent under Section 11 of Act IV. of 1886. He further pointed out that his client had suffered loss, and unnecessary delay had been caused by the mistake he had made in the question of jurisdiction, which under Section 3, Clause 3 of the Indian Divorce Act, was determined by residence alone; that the form of petition in the Act had misled him—for the words "live and cohabit" were entered and nothing said about "residence." His client, he said, had suffered greater loss and been put to greater annoyance, than the co-respondent who had suffered nothing. Even supposing his client had made a mistake it was a mistake and nothing more, and that there was nothing wilful about it. Mr. Norton advised him to file his suit in Calicut, and Messrs. Cowdell and Winterton corrected the draft petition, and Messrs. Champion and Short had been sent the original to file in the High Court before it was determined to file it in this Court.

Mr. Ross said that he was an innocent man, acquitted of the charges brought against him, and that Mr. Morgan had shown the utmost vindictiveness. He had pursued him criminally, and now civilly, and he had shown his vindictiveness in the petition for divorce and read out para. (5) "That the said prosecution resulted in the acquittal of the said Henry Thomas Ross, in consequence of the evidence then adduced by your petitioner not being considered sufficient by the jury, who gave the said Henry Ross the benefit of the doubt.

(6) That your petitioner, considering the circumstances of the case, and believing his said wife to be the victim of the said Henry Thomas Ross, was not inclined to proceed to extreme measures and divorce her; but that immediately, subsequent to the abovesaid criminal prosecution, your petitioner's wife gave your petitioner to understand in the most distinct and emphatic manner, that owing to the discreditable line of action adopted by the said Henry Thomas Ross to evade punishment, her character had been blasted for ever," &c. Talking about the other side being put to expense, Mr. Ross asked if he had not been put to expense? Had he not to engage counsel's assistance here? He did not understand what the other side meant by drawing a difference between the words "residence" and "co-habit," but admitting there was a difference, he maintained that Mr. Morgan said that he had co-habited with his wife in Ootacamund, and there was a motive for his saying so—he wished to make evidence, that should be subsequently used to rebut the evidence Dr. Smith was prepared to give.—Mr. Morgan had another motive—by filing this suit in the wrong Court and then transferring it to another—he had the advantage of discovering his (Mr. Ross's) defence beforehand. Mr. Morgan, he said, had wilfully done this to harass him out of vindictiveness.

Mr. Moore delivered judgment sanctioning the prosecution of Mr. Morgan for perjury.

The divorce suit was transferred to Coimbatore during the recess. On the 23rd June the petition was returned to Mr. Morgan with an order from the Judge to put on the full stamp duty, Rs. 475, and to strike out paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 of the petition as irrelevant. Mr. Morgan upon this amended his petition to one of judicial separation, and the case is fixed for the 26th September next.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE REVERBERATION.*

The Reverberation—what is it? The answer would reveal in part the plot of Mr. James's novel, which latter, if novelty of idea and originality of conception are to be taken into consideration, is certainly likely to be one of the successes of the season. Yet, withal, it may be doubted whether the work leaves an entirely satisfactory impression upon the reader. There is a languor in the style, a heaviness in the incidents, a want of "verve" in the language which somewhat mar the effect of the tale. But, on the other hand, the characters are well drawn and happily sketched. George Flack, a "Society journalist," stands forth as the representative of a class of persons who live by prying into the secrets of the world at large. By necessity curious, such individuals gradually tend to regard society as a mere conglomeration of atoms, whose actions and life are the property of the world at large. Privacy with such literary inquisitors has no sanctity, home has no retirement, existence no secrecy; all that happens is dished up as a dainty dish to set before the public. Such beings are the bête noire of civilisation; their actions occasion a feeling of scorn and loathing. Everyone repels a man whose very existence depends upon the amount of injury he inflicts upon his fellow creature. Then comes Gaston Proper, the descendant of a French family, rich in blood albeit poor in pocket; a nervous, sensitive Gallic lover, eager to conciliate his parents, and yet doubtful how to act when a fiancée is in one class and his "people" in the other. Which of them gains the tug of war is, perhaps, scarcely open to doubt; but the conception is clever, original, and replete with interest. Lencie Dosson, the heroine of the piece, is a charming sample of a rich American. Untutored, so far as the ways of the world are concerned, she possesses a rare fund of instinctive delicacy and refinement. Aware of her want of cultivation, she commands sympathy by her unsophisticated simplicity and natural modesty. But what is most striking in her portraiture is the "ungushing" way in which Yankee girls are "wooed and won." There is an entire absence of the sentimental speeches, the thousand and one pretty deeds and still prettier sayings which in England mark the stage through which it is necessary for all true lovers to pass. Matrimony seems amongst our cousins across the water to be a matter-of-fact sort of affair, just as if it was only a case of commerce or business. But Lencie Dosson is nice; and when it transpires towards the close that all ends well, the reader is pleased and happy.

Other characters must be passed in silence; not possessed of sufficient individuality to demand detailed notice, they merely serve to fill up the picture. And what is to be the verdict on the same? It is good, undoubtedly; "very good" is, perhaps, open to question; but none will be disappointed if they spend an odd hour or so in company with the "Reverberator."

DOLLY LORAINE.*

There are times when the mind as well as the body needs relaxation—when one longs to lounge upon the lawn and quaff the goblet of pleasure in the shape of a plain, light, pretty, unsophisticated novel. On such occasions the reading will be for interest rather than instruction, for amusement rather than profit. "Dolly Loraine" is just such a book. Founded upon the conventional lines and nicely written, it is sure to please, while there is an utter absence of aught to raise the blush, the appearance of which is in many cases the highest aim of modern fiction.

The characters are depicted with considerable skill, and play the part naturally and with effect. Some are sly, intriguing and underhand; some are high-minded, generous, and the soul of honour; some are lazy, indolent and romantic; while some are matter-of-fact, industrious and unpretentious. These varied and various characteristics are the reflex of real life, and, as a consequence, the tale flows easily and in a natural groove. Of course there are flirtations, difficulties, misunderstandings, disagreements, and the thousand and one little troubles which are a novelist's stock in trade. But all ends well; the mysteries are cleared up, the right people marry one another, money matters flow in a proper direction, the hero becomes heir to a title; and when the work is laid aside the reader is willing to admit that time has passed pleasantly, and that there are worse things in the world than an autumn lounge absence from town, and "Dolly Loraine" pour passer le temps.

MILITARY MOSAICS.†

There is a charm in a military life of adventure and daring which finds a reflex in Mr. O'Shea's most charming series of romances, recently published under the alliterative title of "Military Mosaics." The devil-me-care daring of "Tommy Atkins" peeps forth at every page, and the reader lays down the work with a sigh of regret that such companionable tales, such fascinating adventures, have come to an end. There is, too, considerable variety in the nature of the stories. Some are sad and melancholy, full of suffering and horror; others are humorous and quaint, laughter being the aim and end of the narrator; and in one instance there is a curious anecdote in regard to the great Napoleon Bonaparte, which is, we fancy, not generally known. It happened thus: During the hostilities with Austria a "parlementaire" arrived with a summons to the French to surrender. "And if we refuse?" said the young General. "You dare not," rejoined the Austrian. "You are outnumbered and surrounded." "My friend," was the cool reply; "it is you who are outnumbered and surrounded, for this is the main body under the command of Bonaparte himself." This astounding assertion so amazed the Austrian commander to whom it was reported that, terrified at the name of the great scourge of Europe, he agreed to lay down his arms; yet, withal, 4,000 men had yielded unconditionally to less than 1,200! But most interesting of all the tales is that which narrates the account of the memorable charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava—the grandest, most foolish, most awful onslaught which ever cast a halo of glory on the annals of Britain's history. Courage so superb, heroism so magnificent, may well again and again be brought to the notice of a giddy, thoughtless world; and if Mr. O'Shea has done no more than recall attention for a few brief moments to the most memorable of England's doughty deeds, assuredly "Military Mosaics" will have performed a useful part on the stage of life.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 31, 1888.

THE CLEANSING OF INDIA.—I.

THE Government of India having awakened to the fact that India is dirty has determined to make it clean by—a Resolution. In every city, town, village, or hamlet throughout the land since an Englishman first put foot on it, Dirt has been a presiding genius, respected, nay, almost worshipped, by the Natives, who have over and over again vigorously resisted any attempts to interfere with his tutelary sway. He was an ancient institution in a country where ancient institutions are held in the highest reverence, and was not to be wantonly displaced. He governed the most palatial city and the humblest huts with equal impartiality. In Dr. Busteed's Echoes from Old Calcutta, lately published, he describes the capital of India at the close of Warren Hastings' Governor-Generalship thus:—

Calcutta at that time stood in what was little better than an undrained swamp, in the immediate vicinity of a malarious jungle, the ditch surrounding it was as it had been for thirty years previously, an open cloaca, and its river banks were strewn with the dead bodies of men and animals. The chief source of the drinking water-supply was a tank in Lal Diggee (Dalhousie-square). "Here," a correspondent writes to the newspaper of the day, "I saw a string of pariah dogs, without an ounce of hair on some of them, and in the last stage of the mange, plunge and refresh themselves." Another draws attention to the fact of a burial ground in the very centre of the City, in which no less than 400 bodies are annually interred. No wonder that the inhabitants on whom these unpleasant facts were thus obtruded took every opportunity of converting the water into arrack punch prior to consumption; or that those who could afford to do so, gave it the go-by altogether by the substitution of mulled claret, or Madeira, all which drinks were, we find, very much in fashion. No wonder that a most ordinary formula for accounting for the absence of such or such a one from society was that, in the unvarnished language of the day, he was "down with a putrid fever, or a flux." Little wonder either that, as the close of each October brought round what was considered the end of the deadly season, those Europeans who were fortunate enough to find themselves above ground, all met in their respective circles, and thankfully celebrated their deliverance in that truly British device, large banquets.

The city of palaces and of pale faces has of course considerably improved since then, but even at the close of Lord Dufferin's Viceroyalty we read that parts of the Native town could not be excelled in filth and abomination by any African village known. Bombay, it is said, can rival Calcutta in stench; and Madras, it is reported, can in that respect hold its own with both. If such be the condition of the cities, it does not require much stretch of imagination to picture "in the mind's eye" what is the condition of towns where European supervision is less strict, and of villages where there is no European supervision at all. Indeed, so far as the villages are concerned, the condition of things is more favourable. For things there are generally as they ever were. The abominations of Nature have remained undisturbed for ages. As the filth was in the beginning so it is now, and so it it ever would be but for the mischievous interference of the Englishman. He comes upon the scene with a nose for odours, and finds fault with those which, from the village headman to the lowest caste baby wallowing in the mire, are being inhaled without a murmur of complaint, as in the same manner they were inhaled by preceding generations. The Englishman protests that cholera comes and kills; that fever is ever present to weaken and make sick; that men, women, and children, and cattle, die in this atmosphere! What of that? Death is not a new institution—men, women, children, and cattle have always died there. It is the will of the gods, and it is wicked to question that will. Kismet is not to be controlled. When it is remembered how great was the opposition amongst the most enlightened Natives of Calcutta to the introduction of any system of drainage or clean water supply only a few years ago, it need not be wondered at that in other parts of India less civilised, sanitary laws should not only be ignored, but actually held in abhorrence. But the Government of India has now determined that there shall be a general cleansing throughout the land. It has been held by political philosophers that no people were ever made virtuous by an Act of Parliament, but the Government of India is of opinion that a nation may be made clean by a Resolution. The Viceroy in Council has published a Minute on the "Practical Application of Sanitary Principles to Towns and Villages in India," which is full of those charming common places and platitudes which characterise all State papers in the East. There is no place in the world where the moral pocket-handkerchief system is so much in favour and so widely experimented with as in India. A late Educational Minute told the people of India that they would be wiser if they strove after knowledge, and another Minute informed them that they would be happier if they were good. The present Minute tells them that they would be more presentable if they were clean. But the Government of India aspires to be a paternal one; and, therefore, does not wish to reform its children too suddenly against their will. So the District Officers, whom this Minute is very much pointed at, are reminded that "The great feature of Indian rural life is immobility of custom, upon which novel ideas make but little impression." This doubtless has been the general experience of District Officers. And, indeed, the Government of India itself does not seem altogether satisfied with the result of its engrafting of new ideas upon immobility of custom, for the Minute goes on to say:—"For improving the sanitation of villages, executive rules have been from time to time framed and recommended for general adoption. It does not appear, however, that they were anywhere productive of much good." This is a sad but candid confession. However, the Supreme Power does not lose heart. "The Governor-General in Council therefore desires to impress upon Local Governments that from the beginning the promotion of sanitation should be regarded as one of the most important duties of all Districts and Local Boards, and of Village Unions where they exist."

As to the manner in which the Government of India would have this pleasing platitude carried out, we shall have something to say in another issue.

LORD DUFFERIN will leave Bombay on December 14 by the mail steamer for Brindisi.

THE accounts of India's foreign trade for the first three months of the current year show a decrease in exports amounting in value to over 140 lakhs of rupees, and an increase in imports of over 150 lakhs. The falling-off in exports is due to the contraction in the exports of raw cotton and wheat during April; the rise in imports being most conspicuous in cotton yarn and twist and cotton piece goods.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COLONEL H. R. B. WORSLEY, C.B., commanding the Allahabad Division, has issued an order directing that all officers in the Division shall wear mourning for a month as a mark of respect to the late Major-General Lynch.

SURGEON-MAJOR POTTER, Medical Staff, is detailed for duty at Netley.

CAPTAIN THOMPSON, 2nd Battalion Royal Sussex Regiment, and Lieutenant Boddy, 2nd Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers, are granted twelve and nine months' leave to England, respectively.

COLONEL RYVES, 13th Bengal Lancers, takes leave in India for one year.

SURGEON D. M. SAUNDERS, M.S., having reported his arrival from England, has been directed, under instructions from Army Headquarters, to proceed to Jhansi for duty in the Gwalior District.

UNDER instructions from Army Headquarters Captain R. T. Hanford-Flood, lately aide-de-camp to the late Major-General Lynch, has been directed to join the 2nd Battalion Royal West Surrey Regiment pending orders from the Horse Guards.

MAJOR S. G. F. SELFE, 7-1 Cinque Ports Division, Royal Artillery, Mandalay, has been ordered home to join the depot of the Welsh Division.

THE administration of volunteer corps in the Madras Presidency has been transferred from the Government of Madras to the military authorities with effect from Aug. 1.

It is not often nowadays, says the Pioneer, that a regiment of Native Infantry turns out and all present parade to bid farewell to a Native officer—going on his well-earned pension. But those who saw the Subadar of the 2nd (Q.O.) B.L.I.—Subadar Raghubir Pande, Bahadur—standing at the saluting point on the 3rd inst., while his old regiment marched past with shouldered arms, could not but admire the splendid old soldier in full dress, as smart as paint and bedecked with three medals and two orders. He is a type of the old Bengal Army, a credit to his fine old regiment, and an example of a thorough soldier. His services are as follows :—Against Sonthal Insurgents, 1855 ; throughout Indian Mutiny (where he gained the Order of Merit), 1857 ; Operations in Central India, 1858 ; Afghan War, 1879-80 ; Burma War, 1885-87. In the latter war he gained the Order of British India, with the title of "Bahadur."

THE re-arming of the Native army with the Martini-Henry rifle is being carried out in earnest. Some fourteen or fifteen battalions in the various Presidencies have already received their rifles. Both battalions of 5th Gurkhas have been re-armed—a wise measure with a Black Mountain expedition possible.

MADRAS and Bombay are to share proportionately in the distribution of Martinis to the Native army. Some four regiments of infantry in those Presidencies have already been re-armed. At least thirty regiments, all in India, will be given the Martini by the end of the year.

THE sentence of death passed by court-martial upon Gunner Kelly, of R-3 R.A., stationed at Dinapore, for the murder of Sergeant-Major Burton on June 29 last, has been confirmed by the Commander-in-Chief, and only awaits arrival of the warrant to be put in execution.

CHOLERA has increased at Rawalpindi, and the King's Dragoon Guards have been ordered into camp in consequence.

THE following appointments have been made :—Colonel C. L. Prendergast to officiate as Second-in-Command, 1st Bengal Infantry.

Captain Read, Wing Officer, 5th Bengal Infantry, to be Wing Commander of the regiment.

Major Bailey, 1st Bengal Infantry, to officiate as Second-in-command of the 18th Bengal Infantry.

Lieutenant Waterfield, 4th Bengal Cavalry, to the 11th Bengal Lancers ; and Lieutenant Carey, 33rd Bengal Infantry, to the 19th Bengal Lancers, both as officiating Squadron officers.

Second Lieutenant Stoddart, 2nd Battalion Suffolk Regiment, to the 17th Bengal Infantry, as a probationer for the Staff Corps.

The following postings have been ordered :—

To 1st Battalions :—Lieutenant Taylor and Major Godfrey, King's Own Scottish Borderers ; Lieutenant Newnham, Royal Fusiliers ; and Second Lieutenant L'Estrange, Leinster Regiment. Major Godfrey and Lieutenant L'Estrange will come out to India next trooping season.

To 2nd Battalions :—Major Cherry, Northumberland Fusiliers ; Captain Lane, Leinster Regiment ; Captain Davidson, Seaforth Highlanders, who remains at the dépôt until next trooping season ; and Major Ross, King's Own Scottish Borderers.

LANGUAGE TESTS AND REWARDS.

An army Circular just issued notifies the revision of tests and rewards for the examination in Hindustani. The present tests are to be abolished from the 1st January, 1890, from which date candidates will have to pass the following examination :—

Reading fluently, and construing with readiness and accuracy, not less than one page of the Bagh-o-Bahar ; translating half a page of plain English into Hindustani ; reading and translating a manuscript in Persian character as already laid down in Army Regulations ; and conversing with the examiner and with natives of the country.

Any candidate will be allowed the option of being examined under the new test from the 1st January, 1889.

Rewards will be modified as follows :—From 1st January, 1889, for the Lower Standard according to the new test, Rs. 180 ; the Higher Standard, if the candidate has already passed the Lower by the new test, Rs. 120 ; if passed by the present test, Rs. 200 ; and if passed without previously being examined by the Lower Standard, Rs. 300.

Rewards for warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and soldiers will be of Rs. 50 for the Lower, and Rs. 100 for the Higher Standard in all cases.

From the 1st September, 1888, the committee for examining candidates for the Higher Standard will be composed of one officer of the Civil Service, if available, and two military officers, the senior presiding. The reduction of the reward for the Higher Standard will be applicable to all three Presidencies.

THE Times of Ceylon states that the defendants in the libel action of Digby v. Ferguson, have filed an answer in which they apologise completely for the libellous statements made concerning the plaintiff, and withdraw them ; they also plead in mitigation of damages the apology previously published.

NEW ROUTE TO SIBERIA.

Sir R. Morier, writing to the Marquis of Salisbury on June 30, gives the following interesting account of the enterprise of a British seaman who successfully established commercial relations with Siberia through the Kara Sea :—

"For the last year and a half I have uninterruptedly laboured to procure the success of an enterprise which, though at present of very modest proportions, and having for its sole basis the intrepidity, energy, skill, and perseverance of a single British shipmaster, is yet potential with commercial revolutions, the importance of which can hardly be exaggerated, and which, by opening up new channels on a vast scale for British imports and exports, is capable in the course of time of the largest results. For the proper comprehension of the scheme I must presuppose access to a large scale Russian map, giving both the European and Asiatic halves of the empire. It will be seen in such a map that there runs out at the juncture of the two halves what appears like a monster promontory, crescent-shaped, between, speaking roughly, the 70th and 75th parallels of latitude. This apparent promontory encloses a gulf into which there pour themselves, from far away south, two rivers, that for size and volume of water have been compared by M. de Lesseps to the gigantic streams of America, navigable for vessels of deep draught up into the very heart of Asia to the frontier of China, the Obi and the Yenisei. What I have described as an apparent promontory and gulf are really islands and a sea, the former described collectively as Novaia Zemlia, the other as the Sea of Kara. The promontory, when examined closer, is seen to be pierced by three channels, one at its immediate base, namely, the Yugerski (or Petts) Strait, a very narrow inlet, one further up and much wider, called the Kara Gates, or also the Iron Gates, from their supposed closure by ice ; a third, the Matochkin Straits, narrow and tortuous. The navigation of the Kara Sea had always been supposed to be impossible, owing to the ice. A serious attempt was made by Admiral Lütke to establish a regular passage out of the sea some forty years ago, which did not succeed, and the theory was set up that no commercial road could be established across it to the west. The question, however, had become one of those nautical puzzles which ambitious navigators dream about and become possessed by. This kind of possession laid a strong hold, also about forty years ago, on the imagination of Joseph Wiggins, a young English mate on board a brig connected with the Archangel trade. Learning that 'Kara,' in Tartar, meant black, he inferred that such a name could never have been given to an ice-bound sea, and that, therefore, the Kara Sea implied open water. The dream of being the man who should open up this waterway never left him. Having acquired extraordinary distinction in his profession (he was for six years examiner for the Board of Trade), and been successful in various ventures, he fitted out, as soon as he had money enough of his own, a small Arctic built steam yacht of about 120 tons, the Diana, with which he solved the problem brilliantly in the year 1874, by sailing through the Kara Straits to the mouth first of the Obi, and afterwards to the estuary of the Yenisei. The voyage had no commercial character, and was exclusively devoted to scientific exploration, with the result that certain definite bases were once for all established, which demonstrated by actual experience what by a happy intuition Mr. Wiggins had a priori laid down, viz., that at certain seasons the straits, the southern portion of the Kara Sea, including the whole of the coast to both rivers, and the estuaries of those rivers, must be free from ice. These facts were, that the Gulf Stream, which in previous voyages he had ascertained beyond a doubt moved eastwards along the coast of Lapland towards Novaia Zemla, instead of, as formerly supposed, going straight in a north-easterly direction from the White Sea, would not all of it, with straits to pass through, run round to the northern end of the promontory. Given the entrance of the Gulf Stream through the straits into the Kara Sea, and the immense volume of water carried down from south to north by the two giant rivers, he concluded that when these two forces had had time to do their summer work the ice would be driven to the north of the gulf, and kept there till the winter again established its dominion over the entire region. It was, thanks to this first successful voyage by the Diana, and to the principles thus laid down by Mr. Wiggins, that Nördenskjöld was enabled the following year, 1875, to make his first voyage to the Yenisei, and ultimately his celebrated journey through the Behring Straits round the world. A scientific expedition of this kind, fraught with the greatest commercial possibilities for the future, undertaken entirely at his own expense by a man of small means, ought to have met with far other encouragement amongst mercantile classes in England than I regret to say it did. Mr. Wiggins, however, was not to be daunted. He had exhausted his means in the Diana expedition. He could only afford next year to make the attempt in a sailing cutter of 25 tons, and a crew of eight men. He was blown back in his attempt to pass the Kara Straits, but nevertheless did invaluable work during six weeks by taking soundings this side of the straits, and proving that all the approaches were free of ice. At last, in 1876, a Russian mine proprietor in Siberia, M. Siberiakow, offered to contribute £1,000 for the accomplishment of the voyage through the Kara Sea into the Yenisei, and a similar sum was forthcoming from an English yachtsman who had come across Mr. Wiggins in northern waters, and had learnt to appreciate his work. A 100-ton steamer (the Thames) was fitted out, and with her Mr. Wiggins not only crossed the Kara Sea, but ascended the Yenisei for nearly 1,000 miles. The ship was laid up for the winter, but unfortunately came to grief with the breaking up of the ice and the rush of the mighty ice-laden river in the following spring. However, there could be no doubt that the problem had now been solved, and that there existed a navigable water-way, if one only knew how to navigate it, from the heart of Asia and the untold mineral and agricultural store-houses of Siberia, 2,000 miles inland, to the markets of Europe. Accordingly, next year (1879), a Liverpool firm placed the Warkworth, a 500-ton steamer, at the disposal of Mr. Wiggins, who successfully carried a cargo and brought one back from Nadim, at the mouth of the Obi. But the postulate, 'if you know how to navigate it,' was not afterwards borne in mind. Five steamers were next year freighted from England for the Obi, and one by M. Siberiakow for the Yenisei. Mr. Wiggins was offered the charge of the British expedition, but refused it, and condemned the ships as completely unfit for the work. On the other hand, he offered to take charge of M. Siberiakow's ship, who, from patriotic motives, wishing to do the work with Russians, refused. All six ships came to grief. The result was universal disappointment, both in England and on the Obi. Merchants from the inland Siberian towns had been induced to send goods down the Obi for ships which never arrived, and British houses had consigned goods which were never delivered. The theory that the Kara Sea might now and again be free of ice, but could not be depended on, and that Mr. Wiggins had just had a run of luck and no more, firmly established itself. He, however, stuck to his theory, and, to make a long story short, he finally succeeded last year in finding a few bold spirits, who, having formed themselves into a small limited company, and assumed the name of 'The Phoenix Merchant Adventurers,' bought an iron steamer of 400 tons, freighting her with a cargo of samples, with which Mr. Wiggins started from Newcastle-on-Tyne for Yeniseisk—the first large town on the Yenisei, some 2,000 miles from the mouth of that river, and within a few hundred versts from the Chinese frontier. For a very long way from the mouth up the river the navigation was practically unknown, and Mr. Wiggins, with a ship drawing eleven feet of water, had to pick his way as best he could, and with such shifts as he was able to have recourse to, not the least interesting, the vessel having been piloted for a considerable distance by the blind chief of a Samoyede tribe, whose accurate description from memory of the landmarks enabled the Phoenix to ascend in safety. On October 9, 1887, for the first time, a sea-going steamship, carrying her own cargo from across the ocean, cast anchor and landed her goods in the heart of Siberia. She was received with enthusiasm by the population, from the Governor downwards, and every kindness and encouragement shown to Captain Wiggins and his crew. Nor can this be wondered at when we reflect that the sentiments evoked could not have been different in kind from those which would be felt by men buried alive suddenly seeing themselves brought into contact with the rest of the world. I had at an early date, and when the company of 'The Phoenix Merchant Adventurers' was first formed, been in communication with the Russian Government as to facilities for the enterprise. These stout-hearted and independent north countrymen asked for no subsidies, monopolies, or special privileges, nor did Mr. Wiggins claim any recompense for the boon conferred by his self-denying labour and skill on Russia. They only urged that, seeing the enormous risks and difficulties of the venture, they should not be charged duties for the goods they had successfully conveyed through the dangers of the Arctic region. I met with a very warm response on the part of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, not only from M. de Giers and M. Vlangaly, but more particularly from Baron Osten Sacken, the head of the Commercial Department, who, being one of the vice-presidents of the St. Petersburg Geographical Society had from the first followed Mr. Wiggins's career with the greatest interest. I said that, as it was not in accordance with the views of Her Majesty's Government to associate themselves directly with any private commercial enterprise, I did not wish to urge the cause of 'The Phoenix Merchant Adventurers' in my official capacity; but, seeing the very great international importance, and the special advantages to Russia of opening up a commercial waterway between the heart of her Asiatic possessions and Western Europe, the extraordinary sacrifice of time and money, and the skill, judgment, and perseverance displayed by my countryman in solving this great question, I was convinced that the Imperial Government would regard it as quite natural that I should throw myself heart and soul into the scheme. I will not trouble your lordship with the long negotiations carried on through the Foreign Office, which did everything to assist me, with the various Ministries called upon to deal with the matter. I succeeded in getting the whole of the cargo of the Phoenix admitted free of duty, and am now in a position to state with great satisfaction that I have obtained a five years' concession for the free entry of certain classes of merchandise up the Yenisei, and a similar concession of one year for the Obi. The greatest difficulty I have had to contend against, however, was obtaining permission for the Phoenix to navigate the 2,000 miles of river from Yeniseisk to the mouth of the Yenisei. By Russian law riverain navigation is the exclusive right of Russian subjects under the Russian flag. The whole enterprise, however, would have fallen through if the Phoenix had not been allowed to take a return cargo down the river and meet the fine Arctic wooden steamer, the Labrador, fitted out for this year's venture, and which is to bring a cargo from Newcastle-on-Tyne to exchange at Golchika, at the mouth of the Yenisei, with that from Yeniseisk, for there are as yet no Russian steamers on the river of sufficient draught and power, or with the necessary fittings to convey the machinery and other heavy goods which constitute the bulk of the imports. I have only obtained the permission for this year, but I have every hope of its being continued until the Siberians have themselves organised a river service to Golchika. The additional risk and expense of the river navigation constitute a heavy strain upon the limited resources of the Phoenix Merchant Adventurers, of which they would gladly be relieved. Accordingly the manager of the company, when at Yeniseisk last year, offered the Phoenix for sale if the buyer would establish a regular service with her to meet the ocean ship. But with the shrewdness which strongly characterises the Siberians, the answer returned was:—'We have seen the Phoenix safely navigated up the river, we will wait and see how she gets down.' If this year's operations succeed, and confidence in the undertaking is once firmly established, I feel no doubt that the great Siberian mine proprietors, who are a patriotic and enterprising body of men, will organise an efficient steam system to Golchika, and establish warehouses there for the storing up of goods, leaving to the Phoenix Adventurers the task of transporting them across the Arctic Seas."

HIS HUMBLE REQUEST.—The following letter has been received in an Allahabad office. It is not strictly official :—
“Honored Sir,—With every preponderance of due respects I humbly beg to state that by your honor's favor my wife begotten a girl five years ago, and when all hope vanished for a male child for the inheritance of my progenitors' names, I was got a son one year ago, and forasmuch it behoves all Hindus men to offer all male child to our deity for his future growth and prosper in after life when he gains his man-hood, I beg your kind honor will allow me two months leave to visit Jugernath's Shrine, which will cost very much moneys. Also by some opportune I will make arrange for my daughter's matrimony, if not my caste brethren will not let me join in fellowship. For these latterly expenditures Rs. 500 will be required, namely, half to be given to bride's bridegroom as is our customs. Now your honor if Congress promoters would manifestly do their duties to the country then why I give your honor trouble. No one making any arrange for poor men's hardships by which deleterious and abominable customs be abrogated as how can poor man pay such large sums for daughter's matrimony ; moreover if he is not pay then he is made objectionable man and outcasted from all fellowship in caste. I therefore beg your kind honor will have consideration on my case and order Khazanchi to pay Rs. 25 from my pay to B—D— until my full sum of Rs. 250 I am borrow from him be discharged. For this kindness of act, I bless your honor and bless your honor's body will begotten 1,000 sons who will live to be Methusalehs and be vigorous, healthy and forcible as Goliath.”

WORKS BY

COLONEL G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I.,

PUBLISHED BY

W. H. ALLEN & CO.

In 3 volumes. 8vo. 20s. each. Cloth.

HISTORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY, 1857-8, commencing from the close of the second volume of Sir John Kaye's "History of the Sepoy War."

"The second volume of Colonel Malleson's 'History of the Indian Mutiny' is quite equal to the first in every respect. The style is as eloquent, the grasp of the subject as firm, the arrangement as clear, and, above all, there is the same evidence of industry, the same evident desire to be impartial."—TIMES.

Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d., with a Portrait of the Author. Map and Plans.

THE DECISIVE BATTLES OF INDIA from 1746 to 1849 inclusive.

"We know of no book so well calculated as is the one we are not giving the student a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the successive steps taken in conquering for ourselves the Empire of Hindostan."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. 20s. Cloth. With a Portrait and 4 Plans.
FOUNDERS OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE: CLIVE, WARREN, HASTINGS, and WELLESLEY Vol. I.—LORD CLIVE.

"Unquestionably the best life of Clive that has appeared."—VANITY FAIR.

Crown 8vo. 6s.
FINAL FRENCH STRUGGLES IN INDIA AND ON THE INDIAN SEAS, including an Account of the Capture of the Isles of France and Bourbon; and a Diary of the March of the Anglo-Indian Army from Kosseir to Cairo in 1801.

"Colonel Malleson is always painstaking and generally accurate; his style is transparent, and he never loses sight of the purpose with which he commenced to write."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. With Map. 18s.
A HISTORY OF AFGHANISTAN, from the Earliest Period to the Outbreak of the War of 1878.
"The charm, vivacity, and dramatic force of Colonel Malleson's narrative style are not less conspicuous in this book than in his continuation of Kaye's 'History of the Indian Mutiny.' With rare skill and literary judgment he has disentangled the facts of Afghan history from the various chronicles and records, and he has put them in the form of a clear continuous narrative."—SCOTSMAN.

8vo. With Maps and Plan. 16s.
THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF GERMANY. From the Outbreak of the Thirty Years' War to the Battle of Blenheim.

"The book will be particularly welcome to military men, but it may be perused with interest by the general reader, for Colonel Malleson's stirring narrative may be followed intelligently even by those who have no military training."—STANDARD.

8vo. With Portrait of General Lord Mark Kerr, K.C.B. 1s.

AMBUSHES AND SURPRISES: Being a Description of some of the most famous instances of the leading into Ambush and Surprise of Armies, from the time of Hannibal to the period of the Indian Mutiny.

"Colonel Malleson has dealt with his subjects in an interesting and skilful manner, putting living flesh on the dry bones of history, and bringing scenes dimmed by the lapse of centuries almost as vividly before our eyes as if the incidents described had happened yesterday."—ATHENÆUM.

8vo. Price 8s.
HERAT, THE GRANARY AND GARDEN OF CENTRAL ASIA.

"Colonel Malleson is an acknowledged master of Indian history, and in this volume, as in his previous works, he has shown that he is a writer of great skill. His style is admirable, his itinerary useful, and his reading in all that concerns India profound."—ACADEMY.

THE BROAD ARROW

AND
NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to appointments and other service news, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

CERTAIN AND RAPID CURE.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF

INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Seen from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 21th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 19th August; and from Calcutta to the 18th August.

THE meeting of the Legislative Council which was to have been held on Wednesday, August 15th, was further postponed until the 22nd August.

THE Commander-in-Chief was to leave Simla at the end of August on a short tour to Rohilkand and Kumaon. His Excellency was expected to reach Naini Tal on the 1st September, and, after a two days' stay, to arrive at Almora on the 4th. Subsequently he was to inspect Ranikhet, and then, returning through Naini Tal and Bareilly, visit the new station at Kaludanda, to inspect the 2nd Battalion of the 3rd Gurkhas on September 13th, reaching Simla again two days later.

GENERAL CHAPMAN, the Quartermaster-General, takes a month's leave shortly.

SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN, K.C.S.I., Agent to the Governor-General at Baroda, has recently been on a short visit to Bombay.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR GEORGE WHITE has been appointed to the command of the Allahabad Division, lately fallen vacant by the death of General Lynch. Sir George White, while being brought on the permanent Divisional establishment of Bengal, will not join his command at Allahabad for a considerable time to come. Upper Burma is at present a kind of extra Major-General's command, and this he will continue to hold, while temporary arrangements will be made to fill the vacancy at Allahabad.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL IAN HAMILTON shortly starts from Simla on a tour of inspection to the different schools of musketry.

MAJOR RIND has taken over from Colonel Laughton officiating charge of the office of Commissary-General for Transport.

MAJOR MELLISS, who has been commissioned to visit the foremost Native States for the purpose of looking into their military resources, started from Simla for Kashmir on Aug. 19th.

THE Government of India are about to take practical measures to avail themselves of the offers made by the various Native Princes to assist in the defence of the North-West Frontier. The particular form in which it is proposed that advantage should be taken of these offers is by requesting a number of the principal States to maintain a certain portion of their armed forces in a condition of readiness for active service, in a way which will put no undue pressure upon the resources of their rulers. With this object it is intended to invite the representatives of three or four of the principal States in the Punjab to assemble shortly at Simla in order to explain to the Government of India the views of their respective durbars.

MAJOR ROWAN HAMILTON left for England on three months' leave by this week's mail. Lieut. E. W. Fletcher, of the 5th Fusiliers, has been appointed an extra Aide-de-Camp on the Viceroy's Staff, vice Major Hamilton.

MAJOR SCOTT-CHISHOLME, 9th Lancers, has arrived in India and taken up his appointment as Military Secretary to the Governor of Madras.

CAPTAIN DURAND and Dr. Robertson, who started on a semi-political visit to Gilgit, arrived there on the 2nd August. They found the reports of cholera among the Kashmiri troops there untrue, though the 8,000 men have suffered somewhat, owing to the scarcity of food.

THE Public Service Commission report was to be finally disposed of by the Government of India by the end of August, as the opinions of the local governments have now been fully considered.

If an expedition is sent against the tribes of the Black Mountain some 7,000 men are likely to be employed, including the force held in reserve.

THE latest news in connection with the Sikkim affair is that an increased number of Tibetan tents are visible in the Jelep Pass. The general attitude of the enemy has led to the necessity of reinforcing the troops at Gnatong. Four guns of Major Keith's battery reached Shalambi on Aug. 12th, and were expected at Gnatong the next day; one company of the Derbyshire Regiment should have reached Colonel Graham on the 17th, and two more, with the headquarters, on the 25th; and two companies of the same regiment have been ordered up from Dum-Dum to Darjeeling, so as to be near at hand should more troops be required.

THE Crawford case has reached a point at which it must stand still for some days. The Government of India, whose consent is necessary to the formation of a Commission composed of civilians outside the Presidency, are sure to exercise their independent judgment in the matter, and to take no step without a close examination of the case from all sides. Mr. Crawford's legal representatives appeared before Mr. Candy, the Sessions Judge at Poona, Aug. 17th, and appealed against the action of the District Magistrate on the 9th, in having discharged their client at the instance of the Bombay Government and without hearing the case for the defence. Mr. Candy gave his decision in favour of the Government.

CHOLERA has broken out in Rawalpindi, necessitating the removal into camp of nearly all the British troops in garrison there and the 45th Sikhs. The Derajat seems to be also experiencing a chary outbreak of the disease. There have been over twenty cases among the troops in Kohat and thirty deaths; while at Dera Ghazi Khan there were three cases. Surgeon Joliffe is among those at Kohat who have succumbed.

THE death is announced from Hyderabad of the grandmother of the Nizam, at the age of 97 years.

MR. MICHAEL GOULD, Administrator-General of Madras, died on August 14th.

It has been decided to raise a memorial in Bombay to the late Pundit Bhagvanlal Indrajee.

DR. LYON has been elected Dean of the Faculty of Medicine and Mr. Justice Birdwood Dean of the Faculty of Arts, Bombay University.

OBITUARY.—Major C. C. Carter, R.E., at Bombay.

A MEMORIAL was recently presented to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal at Deoghur, relating to the extension of the Deoghur Steam Tramway to Rampore Haut via Doomka. The line thus extended would connect the loop and chord lines of the East Indian Railway, and be the means of developing the resources of a rich but hitherto hidden and unexplored tract of country.

ANTI-CONGRESS MOVEMENT AT BENARES.—A very crowded meeting under the Presidentship of Thakur Mahabir Narain Sinha, Rais and Taluqdar, was held on the 5th inst. at Baraun to consider the objects and methods of the National Congress. Thakur Mahabir Prasad Narain Sinha delivered a lengthy speech, urging that the objects and methods of the Congress were dangerous to the Government and to the peace of the country. Several other speakers followed; after which resolutions of a similar tenour were moved and passed.

NOTES.

THE papers to hand by the present mail are full of the "Crawford case" and of little else of interest besides. According to the Bombay Gazette, the Commission of Inquiry was to be constituted of a Judge from the Calcutta High Court and another from Madras, with whom will be associated a Bengal Civilian of high standing. It was not expected that the Commission would be able to sit before October. Meanwhile the Government of Bombay will forward to the Government of India a statement of the charges in the case, which will be submitted to the Commission for investigation. It has not yet been decided whether the Commission will sit in Bombay or Poona.

THE Times of India, referring to the case, says that in its present embarrassments the Government of Bombay is only paying the penalty of the cold shoulder it has for years extended to the judicial side of the Administration and to the High Court of Bombay. "The public," says the Editor, "would much like to know, though they are not likely to be told, whether Sir Raymond West was consulted at all in the early stages of the private inquiry, which has resulted in this scandal. But they have a right to ask, and this is a question they can answer for themselves, by whose fault it is that, in the absence of Sir Raymond West, the Government of Bombay has not available for its secret counsels, on which such issues as this may hang, a single judicial officer of any eminence or experience. The fault is not that of the constitution. In the offices of Judicial Member of Council and Judicial Secretary ample provision has been made for securing the constant presence in the Governor's Council of judicial knowledge and experience. The proceedings at Poona show an absolute want of the one and of the other. Whose fault is it?"

THE Pioneer has little faith in a Commission of Inquiry. "Previous experience," it says, "does not make us over-trustful in the judicial wisdom of such a body; but granting that grounds for an inquiry do exist, and that a Commission is the proper tribunal to conduct it, the whole conduct of the Bombay Government in the case up to the present stands condemned as hasty, indiscreet and unfair, more like what we should expect from a Magistrate who had scarcely cut his judicial teeth than from the heads of a responsible administration."

THE Government of India has issued a new Resolution with a view to remedy the grievances of the officers of the Telegraph Department in the matter of retirement. By it any officer who had less than twenty years' service counting for pension on the 31st March, 1888, will be eligible to retire from the Department when he attains to twenty years' pensionable service, with the pension due to him under the rules in force (on medical certificate or otherwise), together with an extra pension of Rs. 1,000 per annum. Applications to retire must be made, in the case of those already eligible, within six months of the date of the Resolution; and, in case of others subsequently eligible, within six months after attaining twenty years' pensionable service. The Resolution is only intended to have temporary effect, and may be revoked by the Governor-General whenever, after the 1st February, 1889, it appears desirable to do so. No officer entitled to retire under the Resolution will be allowed, after its issue, to take any furlough (other than on medical certificate) which will cause the total amount of furlough taken during his service to exceed two years, unless before doing so he foregoes the right of applying to retire under these special terms. These rules, if not previously cancelled, will cease to be operative as soon as the whole of the officers appointed in 1871-72 have become eligible to retire under them.

THE Pioneer says that from time to time there crops up proof of the wisdom of our Government in India in spreading with a muck rake the blessings of Board School education over the Empire. As an illustration of this it gives excerpts from the report of a Native inspector of schools—a B.A. to his Divisional superior. For example:—"From what I have tasted of the most delicious fruit of the — Sabha to-day, I have been favourably impressed by it. From after giving an examination to the girls of all the classes, and receiving straightforward answers to my straightforward questions, I am also glad to be able to speak in very high terms of the teacher's powers of observation to see, reasoning and judgment to foresee, gathering and arranging materials for decision and discrimination to decide with respect to the bents and turns of the prosaic minds of the juvenile girls." The buildings, however, are not so satisfactory as the pupils and the teacher, for this high-falutin Inspector writes:—"In the midst of all these beautiful and nutritious fruit—i.e., little Bengali girls—I am very, very sorry to mark out a bitter one, which as an evil at the root is likely to degenerate the whole tree. The supply of furniture is miserable, and the humble thatch wherein the school sits is unworthy of the name. A table, a chair, a bench, a board, and the removal of the school from this infernal place to an Elysian one is badly wanted."

It is said that the visit of Sir Asman Jah to Simla gave the Viceroy and Lady Dufferin an opportunity of expressing their appreciation of all that has been done to promote medical work on the European model in Hyderabad. The Nizam's Government, of which the Minister is the responsible administrative head, have not only been liberal in their grants to the Civil Medical Department in the State, but have taken other practical measures to ensure the health of the people. Dispensaries are being opened wherever there is pressing need for them, and it is intended that each taluk shall eventually have one central point. But it is in the matter of medical aid to women that the greatest strides have been made. Every possible encouragement is being given to female doctors; one young Native lady is being sent to England this year at a cost of £1,000 to complete her studies; a good English nurse has been engaged to teach Native women in the Afzalgunge Hospital, and Dr. (Miss) White has been appointed Professor of Midwifery in the Medical School. There are still a number of female orphans, a legacy from the great famine of 1887, being supported by the State, and a number of these are to be trained by an English lady-nurse in the new hospital, and home founded for them at Warangal. During the past year, in fact, Sir Asman Jah and his right-hand man, the Maulvi Mushtak Hussain, have probably done more than anyone else in India to give practical effect to Lady Dufferin's wish to bring European medical aid within reach of the helpless women in the Zenanas.

THE MYSORE GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.—This Company have received a telegram dated the 6th of Sept. giving last month's return of gold as follows:—"1,504 tons of quartz produced 1,350 ozs. of gold; also 88 ozs. obtained from tailings."

THE NUNDYDROOG GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.—This Company has received a telegram, dated 6th Sept., giving last month's return of gold as follows:—"390 tons of quartz produced 580 ozs. of gold."

THE INDIAN CONSOLIDATED GOLD COMPANY, LIMITED.—This Company have just received the following telegrams from India:—"325 tons, 200 ounces," which represents the result of last month's crushing on the Colar section of their property.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These Shares yesterday were well supported. Mysore improved 1-16, and Nundydroog 6d. Mysore Shares were last quoted 3 1-16 to 3 3-16, Nundydroog 31s. to 32s., Indian Consolidated 6s. 9d. to 7s. 3d., Balaghat-Mysore (15s. paid) 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d., ditto fully paid (£1) 16s. 6d. to 17s. 6d., Ooregum 24s. 6d. to 25s. 6d., ditto Preference 24s. 6d. to 25s. 6d., Devala-Moyar 5s. to 6s., Nine Reefs 12s. to 13s., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 3s. to 3s. 6d., Indian Glenrock 3s. 6d. to 4s., Gold Fields of Mysore 1 1-16 to 1 3-16, New South-East Wynaad 2s. to 3s., Wentworth (17s. paid) 2s. to 4s., Wynaad Perseverance 3s. to 3s. 6d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 4s. to 5s.

BY TELEGRAPH.)
(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 2.

Brigadier-General M'Queen will command the force operating against the Hassanzais and Akyais in the Black Mountain. Probably four columns will be told off for this expedition, which still awaits sanction from the home authorities. Some 7,000 men altogether will be employed. The Order of Merit has been granted to Sepoys Indarbir Thapa and Moti Ram Thapa for conspicuous gallantry on the Black Mountain, when Major Richmond Battye and Captain Urmston were killed, in having stood over and defended their officers, then dangerously wounded, until those officers and the rest of the guard had been killed, when they were ordered by the Native officer to retire.

The subject of female infanticide appears to have been attracting the attention of the Government. A special census of the suspected clans is to be taken during the coming cold weather, under the order of the Government. The police officers of Futtehar, Etah, and Mainpuri, the districts with the worst reputation, are not to be changed for the next three years, so that continuous attention may be given to the matter.

The Duchess of Connaught distributed the prizes at Poonah on Wednesday to the students of the Female Training College. Lord Reay, in addressing the meeting, thanked the Duchess for distributing the prizes, and paid a high compliment to the retiring lady superintendent for the valuable services she had rendered to the college. She might justly lay claim to being the pioneer of female education in Western India. The Duke of Argyll in 1869 had said that female education in the Bombay Presidency was a reality among the Parsees and a pretence among the Hindoos. Lord Reay could now say it was beginning to be a reality among Hindoos. At the Simla Fine Arts Exhibition out of fourteen prizes seven have been carried off by women.

A memorial for fair trial by the Bombay official is still under the consideration of the India Government. Executive orders will be shortly issued, and the decision is eagerly awaited by the public of Bengal.

The Nagpur Railway is being rapidly advanced. The old metre-gauge line of 150 miles from Nagpur to Gaj Nandgaon will be opened on a standard gauge during October, and at the same time an extension of forty miles to Raipur will be opened. At the beginning of next year it is hoped the sixty-five miles additional to Bilaspur will be ready, and perhaps another fifty miles at the Bengal end.

A cyclonic storm, accompanied by severe rain, recently visited Calcutta and other portions of Bengal. The wind at Saugor registered a velocity of seventy-five miles an hour. Very heavy rain has since continued, and throughout Bengal and Northern India floods have ensued. The crops in some parts are greatly damaged.

The cholera in the Punjab has decreased. Reports from various camps show that the average health is rapidly being restored to its normal condition.

A marked increase is reported in the external land trade of the Punjab. During the last year the total value is given as Rs. 2,33,98,045, almost entirely under the head of imports, which shows an excess of 8½ lakhs over those of the year 1886.

BURMA.

RANGOON, SEPT. 1.

Further intelligence confirms the report that the Chinese Governor of Yunnan has prohibited the exportation of salt from Bhamo into Yü. His action is believed to be due to a wish to protect local salt manufacture rather than to any political causes.

News from the Upper province is unimportant. Some small dacoit bands have surrendered, and several petty skirmishes are reported. A dacoit leader named Kanhaung attacked the village of Seekan in the Bhamo district, killing ten men and burning the village. From Bhamo it is also reported that the Kachyens have attacked some Karen foresters working in the district and killed several.

One of the local newspapers estimates the number of convicted prisoners transported from Burma to India since the annexation of Upper Burma at nearly 50,000.

Mr. Philip Nolan, Secretary to the Government of Bengal, left Rangoon by the last mail. At Mandalay he had lengthened conferences with Mr. C. H. T. Crosthwaite, C.S.I., as to the proposed emigration scheme. Mr. Nolan now proceeds to Assam on a similar mission connected with emigration from India to that province. The main features of the proposed emigration scheme for Burma will be the securing for emigrants of passages from Calcutta at greatly reduced rates and the granting of large tracts of land on the Mandalay railway line on very favourable terms to planters willing to cultivate indigo, sugar, or other produce. These grantees will be bound to employ 90 per cent. of Natives of India on their plantations, and will be prohibited from employing more than 10 per cent. of Burmans.

The Police Commission has commenced its sittings. It is composed exclusively of local officers, one of its members being the Inspector-General of Police, as to whose competency the inquiry is really being held. Another member is one of his subordinates. Mr. Meres, the Judicial Commissioner of Lower Burma, is chairman of the Commission. He is a man of marked ability, and thoroughly enjoys the public confidence. His service has, however, been altogether judicial, and he is unfortunately without any experience in police organisation or discipline. From the constitution of the Commission little good is expected from it. The majority of the members, having served exclusively in Burma, have had no opportunities of observing a properly organised and disciplined police force.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 2.

The Deputy Commissioner of Peshawur and the Nawab Afzar Jhang, aide-de-camp to the Nizam of Hyderabad, will join the Cabul Mission.

Ishak Khan's rebellion in Afghan Turkestan is not believed on the frontier to be likely to succeed. The whole force under his command amounted to about 2,000 infantry, and some 6,000 irregular cavalry. Of these, two regiments despatched by Ishak to Maimena have stood firm in their allegiance to the Ameer, while the garrison at Balkh has refused to join in the revolt.

The following is stated to be the immediate history of the rebellion so far as the facts are known. The Ameer summoned various Governors from beyond the Hindoo Koosh to Cabul. Ishak Khan thereupon induced the Wali of Maimena and some headmen to visit him at headquarters, when he unfolded the plan of revolt. The Wali apparently fell in with it. Emisaries were sent to Maimena to suborn the garrison. These messengers, named Koindil and Shaibat Khan, failed, and were arrested by troops and sent to Herat. Meanwhile the Governor of the Murghab district, on hearing the news of the revolt, proceeded to Maimena, and assumed the command until Rustam Ali, with reinforcements for Herat, arrived. Abdulla Jan, Governor of Badakshan, who halted on the way to Cabul, took measures to prevent Ishak from interfering with the Badakshanis.

The Ameer has pushed forward troops to Bamian. Ishak is thus threatened on three sides.

The works on the Candahar Railway are being pushed forward. The tunnel through the Khojak mountain is progressing fast. When completed it will be five miles long.

THE comparative statement of the Indian Salt Revenue for the period from the 1st April to the 23rd July seems to show that in India proper the estimated increase from the enhancement of the duty will be more than realised, but that in Burma there will be a decided deficit. In the month of June the amount of duty-paying salt sold in India was very little under what it was last year; while the net increase in the duty raised between 1st April and the 22nd July was close on 40 lakhs, a rate which, if maintained for the twelve months, would give an increase of one crore and sixty lakhs, or ten lakhs over the estimate. In Burma, on the other hand, though there has been a slight improvement during the past month, there is still a decrease of over Rs. 27,000. Balancing the deficiency in Burma against the surplus in India, it looks as if the estimate for the whole would be pretty near the mark.

AGRICULTURE IN INDIA.—The Governor of Madras, in replying recently to a Native address at Oosoor, said he took the deepest interest in agriculture, but was far from advocating the introduction of violent changes or a departure from immemorial usage in this ancient country unless experience dictated the necessity for a change. The Indian ryot understands very well the use of manure and the necessity for clean cultivation and careful weeding, which are among the cardinal principles of successful agriculture. He was pleased to hear that they were much interested in the ensilage experiments. The Government were not less interested, and lately they carefully reviewed the various local experiments, some of which were not successful. Silos were useful sometimes, but they could not make good silage with bad materials. Alluding to sanitation he announced that the Government of India were elaborating a scheme the details of which would soon be with the Government of Madras.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE ATTEMPTED SUICIDE OF MRS. ALLY BUX.

(By J. J.)

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The following incident occurred at Bareilly in the north-west of India:—I was startled out of a sound sleep one night by a tapping at the door of my bungalow. On drawing aside the curtain that separated my sleeping compartment from the sitting room, I saw a black face peering through the pane of glass that formed the upper half of the door. "Who's there?" I shouted as loud as my terror would permit; for, you see, I had not yet woke up, and the face, to my disordered imagination, appeared Satanic. I made for the door nevertheless, opened it, and found that the "devil" was only a poor Jemadar of Mahouts after all. "What is it, Jemadar?" I queried, for I noticed that his face bore signs of great excitement—"another elephant gone musth, or have any of them taken sick?" "No, Sahib; it's not the elephants this time; it's a woman. Ally Bux's bibi has jumped down the Musjid well." "And why the d— don't you go after her?" I exclaimed, as I made for the spot.

There were a dozen or so of Mahouts and their wives collected round the well, gesticulating and calling on the woman below to sabor karo, and to daro mat,—and such like. "Fetch a few loading ropes," I ordered—there were lots of ropes that were used for tying the loads on the elephants close at hand. The woman, evidently, had let the well rope go, to prevent any sudden attempt at rescue. She had not succeeded so far in carrying out her design, for I could hear her very breathing as it echoed and re-echoed up the sides of the narrow well. The ropes I sent for were soon forthcoming, and I ordered Ally Bux to go down after his wife. "No, not he; he wouldn't go after the woman; let her stop there and cool her temper awhile. It only served the jade right if she did get drowned." So said the revengful Ally. None of the Mahouts would volunteer; some averring that she would perhaps drown them, others that they wouldn't be able to get their breath down in that stifling hole. Besides, they all chorused, "it's not our kam when her khasm Ally is here." "Hold the rope, then, you rascals," I said, "I'll go myself." It is hard, you see, to listen to a woman in distress—even a black woman. So down I went.

The well could not have been more than 20 or 30 feet deep; yet it seemed bottomless, and, to me, whose chest is not of the strongest, the stifling atmosphere was very trying. I came to a standstill on a human head, and felt a pair of arms clutching me by the legs. I called on the woman to desist, and I would save her. I might as well have spoken to a she demon; for by this time I had managed to slide down to her level, when she tried hard to pull all the hair off my head, and scratch my eyes out. I warded her caresses off as well as I could, and fixed a loop at the end of the rope, into which I seated myself, and seizing the lady round the waist, shouted for those on the top to haul up. Now came the most trying ordeal I have ever experienced. Here I had to support the weight of a heavy woman, whose frantic efforts to strangle me were nearly successful, and at the same time to keep clear of the sides of the well, or else get the flesh torn away from off my bones; then, to make things still more unpleasant, the lady had been soaking for the last half-hour in a foot or so of water into which, no doubt, she had fallen all of a heap when she leapt down; add to this that she had sunk to her knees into the mud at the bottom of the well, and you can imagine the nice clammy sensation I must have felt as I held her in my arms during our ascent. The wretches on the top were making a nice sport of us too; pulling up for a few yards, then a sudden drop would send us scraping against the sides, as far as we had gained; and to me the mystery is how we ever got out of that well again. It was extremely pleasant, too, to find, when I had landed her safely, that the lady treated me to a choice selection of Hindustani epithets, in which my father and mother, sisters and relations generally were consigned to all sorts of wicked places merely for having such a relation as I, who prevented her ladyship from ending her days down the Musjid well.

Nor was this all. Ally Bux was only too glad to have this opportunity of getting rid of one of his termagant wives (he had three of them, by them, by the way) on pretence that, as she was a pardah nasheen or veiled woman, and as I had not only cast my infidel arms about her, but worse still, had gazed on her charms as she lay exhausted on the Musjid steps after I had rescued her, it was necessary that she should be put away; which he did next day. She is now, I believe, once again what she was before in the city, weence Ally, good Mussalman that he is, had taken her unto himself for a brief space, only, as we have seen, to excite her jealousy against his other wives and drive her to that attempt on her life, in frustrating which, I figured as but a sorry hero.

ETHICS OF THE BROOM.

(Englishman.)

The late Mr. Matthew Arnold, in discoursing on America, laid down that the States were deficient in all four attributes which go to form a perfect civilization; namely, in the power of conduct, the power of intellect, the power of beauty, and the power of social life and manners; and he referred to England, Germany, Italy, and France as the four countries where each of these qualities respectively was, or had been, most strongly developed. It naturally struck one immediately that, as America had undoubtedly reached a stage of civilization that has never been surpassed in any other country in the world, the distinguished essayist must have omitted some important consideration. What this was, was soon pointed out by the Press of America. It was what may be called the power of living, and the power of conduct, so far as it is required for this end. American civilization may not be interesting, may not produce distinction and beauty, but it certainly has, by subduing nature, and its powers for the use of man, given the masses an enjoyment of life unknown in all other ages. We will not now dwell upon the reasons why Americans have been able to achieve success, but we can safely say that the qualities which have mainly contributed to it are possessed also by the English; and we have shown a power of living only second to theirs.

Now, this fifth power may be described as the power of controlling the other four and impressing them into man's service. For instance, the power of intellect can do the human species no good, if action does not follow, and unless that action be beneficial. Knowledge can discover electricity, and other wonders of science, but if conduct is wanting, they may be only used to tear the social fabric to pieces. So art and manners can adorn and beautify life, but unless conduct is the foundation of that life, the fabric will not be of any worth, and the passions may any day scatter it to the winds. The Natives of India may lay some claim to the power of social life and manners, but in the power of living or combining the attributes of civilization, they are certainly at the bottom of the list. Of all the civilized nations the English and the Americans are most dissimilar to them, and we may safely assert that their influence can most affect them for good, while it is in their power of living that the influence will lie. If the nations are to be raised from their grovelling attitude before nature, if they are to be thought that man is the master and not the slave of creation, it must be through the leading of Englishmen. Left to themselves they will fall back into the slough of despond, and Oriental quietism will replace the strenuous energy that has been imported from the West.

The Government of India has at length awakened to the fact that in their municipal life the Natives cannot be left without guidance and direction. No progress is being made in bettering the conditions of life in towns, and indeed there cannot be, as long as Native agencies are left uncontrolled. In order to strengthen the agencies, and teach them the power of living, it is proposed to establish a Sanitary Board. As might be expected, young Bengal immediately protests that this will destroy all self government, and that educated Natives, in their municipal council assembled, are equal to the occasion without outside control. In other words, so little wisdom is gained by their education that they regard themselves as already fit to take in hand the most difficult problem of civilization equally with the English race, which in Europe and America is leading the world. But facts are stubborn things. The only parts of Native towns that can pretend to the decencies and conveniences (we will not speak of the elegancies) of civilized life are those where the administration has been completely European. If Native towns, as a whole, are to be civilized, and not to remain undrained swamps, and depots of disease, their administration must be placed under the direction of European thought and energy. Trained sanitary engineers must be set to work, and local bodies must be taught that civilization demands something more from them than jungly, undrained roads, and schools conferring a merely literary English education.

GOOD TEMPLARISM IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

A curious light on one aspect of human nature is afforded by the mysterious reports of the Good Templars of India, who accomplish valuable work by eccentric methods. Like the Freemasons, they do not come much before the public, and—another point of resemblance with the older sodality—their language is almost unintelligible to the uninitiated. We have before us now, to give it its full title, the "Journal of Proceedings of the Twelfth Session of the Grand Lodge of India I. O. G. Templars and of the ninth Session of the Grand Lodge of Empress of India Union, consummated 12th September, 1887." The Association works to the same end as does the Rev. Beatty, of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Association, and its difficulties are the same as those that very energetic clergyman has experienced. Could anything, for instance, be more satisfactory than the announcement that, during the year 1887, an order less than three thousand strong received an accession of more than eight thousand recruits? Could anything be sadder than the confession that ere the year was ended nearly three thousand had withdrawn, more than two thousand had been suspended, more than three thousand expelled, and about eleven hundred had resigned? In all, out of 13,100 members, nine thousand had, by one path or another, seceded from abstinence. Small wonder it is that the head of the organization writes that "the proportion of members who violate the pledge is still lamentably high." The explanation given is that a certain set of objectionable individuals are continually "in and out of the order," for the sake, we may suppose, of the semi-mystery which is attached to its proceedings, and, as the reports shows, sedulously encouraged. Why the Grand Lodge of an order, with uncompromising abstinence for its object, should take as its seal-device the lively representation of a coolie preparing to tap a toddy palm is another mystery which we are quite sure the executive will not reveal.

RESULT OF THE DECCAN MINING CONCESSION INQUIRY.

(Madras Mail.)

The mountain has been in labour only to bring forth a ridiculous mouse. The Select Committee of the House of Commons sat day after day, and accumulated a great deal of evidence as to "how it was done," but in the end the members of that tribunal have little to say that will be of service to anybody. The Nizam's Government was put to great expense in obtaining suitable representation at the Committee, and it probably hoped that all naughty people would be made to disgorge their unholy gains, after having been otherwise punished in proportion to their demerits. But, as was the case in regard to the excommunication of the Jackdaw of Rheims, "no one seems one penny the worse." The Commission has discovered that 85,000 fully paid-up shares were issued, of which 55,000 were sold to the public. It absolves Lord Lawrence from blame, as it is of opinion that he acted in perfect good faith. It admits the competency of the Company to transfer the shares to concessionaires, but doubts whether the same was the result contemplated by the Nizam's advisers. It suggests that the British Government might have given to the Nizam more effective advice and assistance. It also considers that no deficiency relative to the remuneration of the concessionaires existed entitling them to the mining concession. The concessionaires, it says, used the concession for the realisation of great gains which were not intended for them, and this was done to the injury of the Nizam's State, with the assistance of Abdul Huq. In conclusion, the Committee deprecates direct communications between Native States and speculators.

The Company created by the concessionaires is a going concern that is very actively engaged in developing these resources of the Nizam's Dominions in coal, gold, and gems, which the Nizam's Government has not troubled itself about. Under instructions Abdul Huq first set the Railway scheme going, and then put the mining concession on the London market. He was allowed to accept an enormous douceur for the former service to the State, and he derived yet greater benefit from the latter. He was privately allotted 12,000 shares by the concessionaires, and his Government having been somehow induced to invest, he privately sold his own shares to it at a high premium, and was cordially thanked for his exertions in the matter. He has made some restitution by taking the shares back from the Government he had misled, and refunding the sum he had received for them. Of course his services will be dispensed with by the Nizam's Government, and he will turn his attention to pastures new. His operations could not have been successful had ordinary vigilance been exercised by the Nizam's Government, by the British Resident at Hyderabad, by the Government of India, and by the Secretary of State. The thing was not done in a corner. The terms of the concession were published to all the world by the Stock Exchange, and no one in authority was struck by there being anything extraordinary about them until the present Minister of the Nizam entered upon his office, and—probably in self-defence—looked closely into things, and found how the Nizam's rights had been given away. Mr. Cordery, the British Resident, has judiciously resigned, and thereby brought to a premature close a career that at one time promised very well. Abdul Huq has refunded a large sum in cash to the Government. But the concession remains with the concessionaires, and the Committee fails to show how Hyderabad may obtain redress for the forfeiture of very valuable rights for no consideration. The concessionaires will probably see that it is to their interest to conciliate the Nizam's Government, in view to obtaining a fresh ratification of the rights that they have acquired; and the Government will probably think it worth while not to ask too high terms, as the Company is no bogus affair, but is well prepared to do for the State what the State is not prepared to do for itself. The Committee's disapproval of direct negotiations between speculators and the Governments of Native States is reasonable enough. But it is not quite applicable to the present case, for the negotiations were conducted nominally under the authority of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State. Those guardians of the Hyderabad State reposed great confidence in the Resident at the Nizam's Court, and he on his part was influenced by unbounded confidence in Abdul Huq. The safeguards proved of little use notwithstanding the passing to and fro of much correspondence. Everybody whose vigilance has been at fault will be on the alert for the future, and so the wet sponge will be rubbed across the slate.

ABUSE OF STATE TELEGRAMS.

(Englishman.)

Inland State messages increased last year by no less a number than 69,545, or, to put it in another way, Government officers added the sum of Rs. 6,96,181 to the amount of the telegraph account of the previous year. This enormous increase was due to the operations in Burma, for in the new division of Upper Burma alone 87,500 messages were passed over the wire, representing an expenditure of nearly seven lakhs. A sudden increase of this kind generally occurs in times of war or famine, and is thus an indication of unproductive expenditure in other departments; while as the revenue derived from State telegrams is only a transfer of money from one pocket of Government to another, it cannot be considered a satisfactory item in the accounts of the Telegraph Department. In fact, the valuation of State messages mainly serves the purposes of furnishing some measure of the extent to which officials use the wires. We have Sir Albert Cappel's own assurance that the best stimulus to the growth of real revenue from private traffic is to be found in a thoroughly efficient and rapid service; and that the more the wires are freed from unnecessary official business the better can the interests of the public be served. "The curtailment both in length and number of State messages is, therefore, a matter of importance"; and that there is room for improvement in the matter of length may, perhaps, be inferred from the fact that in 1886-87 the average numbers of chargeable words in urgent and deferred State messages were 26 and 24 respectively against 10 in the corresponding classes of private messages." That is, an official takes 26 words to say what a merchant will say in 10 words, the difference being, of course, that the official, not having to pay for his telegram himself is less troubled with thoughts of economy.

BENGAL.

ACCORDING to a Calcutta contemporary the form to be taken by the Dufferin Memorial will not be decided until the Committee have had an opportunity of ascertaining the wishes of Lord and Lady Dufferin upon their Excellencies' return to Calcutta.

It is with deep regret that we (Englishman) announce the death of Mr. Arthur T. Griffin, who proceeded to Russia little more than a year ago as the special correspondent of the Englishman, and for the purpose of perfecting his knowledge of the Russian language. The deceased, who was for some years employed as a translator in the Calcutta High Court, was a young man of great promise, with a passion for the study of languages, no inconsiderable literary power, and enviable resources of courage and enterprise. He died suddenly at Alexandria, of inflammation of the lungs, on the 18th of June. It will be remembered that on his arrival in Russia he was taken for a spy, and that his treatment was the subject of indignant comment at the time. The Warsaw officials, it transpired, had taken fright at a passport bearing the name of a Calcutta paper, and franked by the Government of India. Subsequently, we are glad to say, Mr. Griffin was fully indemnified by the courtesy and friendliness of the Russian authorities.

A STORM from an unsuspected quarter is likely, asserts the Englishman, to burst upon the unfortunate experiment of Native Municipal Committees. Already in Bengal Municipal doings are coming in for a liberal share of wholesome criticism at the hands of Native local papers. Complaints are made that roads along which carriages used to drive are now almost impassable: that water is allowed to accumulate until houses fall down: that sanitation is neglected; that Native chairmen hardly devote any time to their duties, and so on. In Ranaghat it seems that the chairman disposed of appeals against assessments at his own house on Sunday, without notifying the date fixed, or hearing what the appellants had to say. In Dakka the negligence of the chairman is a constant subject of complaint. The only efficient and working man, we hear, is the Secretary, and it is complained that he will be compelled to resign, as the Native Commissioners have reduced his salary by Rs. 150 a month. In Purneah the people found they could get nothing done with a Native chairman, and on their petitioning the Lieutenant-Governor, the District Magistrate was appointed chairman. The people are also beginning to find out that they get even less out of the Local Boards than they did from the Road Cess Committees.

MADRAS.

WHEN they do quarrel down South they do it elegantly. A little disagreement between a Calicut and a Cochin paper about what goes on in the Palace at Trevandrum has just led to this delightful deliverance on the part of one of the disputants:—As regards the imputation about gin bottles and the "champion, groggy and breathless on the ropes," we can quite understand how our contemporary was induced to make those remarks respecting us in his recent issue. It is a popular belief that all newspaper men are given to an undue adoration of Bacchus, and the editor of the Spectator speaking, probably from experience, thinks himself justified in supposing that we too are fond of indulging in alcoholic beverages to excess. But there are exceptions to every rule, and the man who drives the Calicut paper has erred in judging other people by his own standard. We don't generally take a pride in telling the public of our domestic habits, but the circumstances of the present case demand that we should make a statement to the effect that we do not drink, if only for the information of the gentlemen who penned the article in the Spectator now under reference.

EXTRAORDINARY FIND OF OLD COINS.—Mr. Rea, Assistant to the Director-General, Archaeological Survey of India, during a recent visit to the village of Motupalle, in the Kistna District, found on an average over one hundred coins per day in his search among the mounds there. He also discovered some gems, but, until they have been examined by a jeweller, he cannot say whether they are real or imitation stones. He was told that coins are always picked up by the villagers after rain, and the finds are at once taken and sold in the bazaar. It would be a good thing, he thinks, if the Munsiff of this place, and those of other villages where such are found, were instructed to pay the finders a small sum for each coin, and remit them either to the Archaeological Survey Department or to the Madras Museum. He adds that the coins are found singly, and not in heaps, and so scarcely come under the scope of the Treasure Trove Act. Mr. Rea suggests that, unless the finders are guaranteed something, however small, for each coin so found, they will continue, as usual, to take them to the bazaar. Large numbers of coins are probably being continually lost in this way. The Collector of the district has been requested to report on the suggestion made in regard to the acquisition of stray coins.

BOMBAY.

THE Maharajah of Kapurthala has subscribed Rs. 1,000 to the Maneckjee Cursetjee Memorial Fund.

MR. JAMSETJEE N. TATA has subscribed Rs. 1,000 to the Endowment Fund of the Alexandra Institution.

MR. J. H. E. HART, Chief Engineer and Secretary to Government in the Public Works Department, vacated his appointment on the 14th August, on attaining the age of fifty-five.

At a meeting of the Faculty of Arts of the Bombay University Mr. Justice Birdwood was elected Dean, and Mr. James Jardine Syndic. At a meeting of the Faculty of Medicine Dr. Lyon was elected Dean.

AMONGST the visitors who are expected to come to India next cold weather, the Indian Spectator says, is Miss E. A. Manning, whose benevolent interest in the progress of India is so well known.

THE Crawford case, says the Pioneer, has reached a point at which it must stand still, certainly for some days. The Government of India, whose consent is necessary to the formation of a Commission composed of Civilians outside the Presidency, are sure to exercise their independent judgment in the matter, and take no step without a close examination of the case from all sides.

THE application made by Mr. Battenburg to the Bombay High Court, through Mr. Shantaram Narayan, for bail on behalf of the accused in the Secunderabad Telegraph case, has been acknowledged and held in abeyance, pending the receipt of the Magistrate's proceedings in the case. The accused were committed on the 26th July, and have been in police custody ever since. The proceedings have not as yet been sent, and this omission has led to a telegram being sent to Bombay to urge the High Court to ask for their immediate transmission.

A MEETING of the friends and admirers of the late Pundit Bhugwanlal Indrajee was held, Aug. 15, in the rooms of the B. B. R. A. Society under the presidency of Mr. Justice Scott. The meeting was well attended, and resolutions were passed stating that the late Pundit's eminence as a scholar and archæologist, together with his private virtues which endeared him to his fellows and friends, rendered it fitting and desirable that steps should be taken to perpetuate his memory in Bombay, and appointing a very large committee under the presidency of Mr. Justice Scott, with Messrs. P. Peterson and Javerilal Yajnik as secretaries to carry out the object. All the speakers testified in very eulogistic terms to the great services of the late Pandit, and the resolutions were passed with acclamation.

RUSSIA AND THIBET.

The well-known traveller, Major-General Prjevalsky, has started on his fifth journey of exploration in Thibet with the intention of penetrating, if possible, into Lhasa, the capital. The general, with his officers and Cossacks, will this time take advantage of the new Central Asian railway as far as Samarcand, whence they will proceed to Semiretchinsk, and so to the Thibetan tablelands. General Prjevalsky will probably on this occasion, says the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times, have the best chance ever afforded him of entering the forbidden residence of the Dalai Lama, for, with the British hostile forces on one side and Russian flattering advances on the other, the Thibetans may likely enough decide to favour the latter in the hope of neutralising the attacks of the former, as Afghanistan and other semi-independent Asiatic States have often done before. It is not at all likely that the Chinese sovereignty would in such a case be an overwhelming factor and preventive of Anglo-Russian rivalry in Thibet any more than it has been in Korea. We may yet live to see Thibet another "buffer" or another Afghanistan between the pressure of British and Russian power in Asia. It is, perhaps, needless to add that the political significance of these repeated scientific expeditions has never been disguised. A successful Russian entry into the Grand Lama's capital would pretty surely result in some kind of treaty arrangement—secret, commercial, or otherwise.

INOCULATION FOR ASIATIC CHOLERA.

The Odessa correspondent of the Daily News supplies some information concerning Dr. Nicholas Feodorovitch Gamaleia, whose name has recently come before the world as the discoverer of a vaccinal preventive against Asiatic cholera. The first germinal microbes of Asiatic cholera were obtained by Dr. Gamaleia from Professor Koch, of Berlin, and these have been cultivated in the former's laboratory at Odessa. There is this special difference in the lymph administered for hydrophobia and that for Asiatic cholera—the former contains the living microbes of rabies, the latter the dead microbe. Hence, as there can be no regeneration from the dead choleraic microbe the introduction of the vaccine preventive into a sound body is perfectly innocuous, excepting, of course, some few degrees of vaccinal fever which it may produce. On this point Dr. Gamaleia is waiting the development in his own system of three choleraic inoculations made upon himself. After proving his experiments on living animals Dr. Gamaleia makes his own body the first subject for practical operation. Though never bitten by a rabid animal the doctor has submitted himself to three different inoculatory courses for hydrophobia. The first course was immediately before he left M. Pasteur's laboratory to establish the present bacteriological station at Odessa. The doctor insisted on being inoculated for "good luck," as he expressed it to M. Pasteur. Meeting Dr. Gamaleia shortly after his return to Odessa in 1886, the correspondent asked him jocularly what he supposed his sensations would be if he were suddenly to discover an aversion to water and develop an inclination to growl and bark. Quite seriously the doctor replied, "My dear sir, the development of such symptoms would be extremely interesting to me." While in the bacteriological laboratory the correspondent had the opportunity of observing the distinctive formation of the choleraic microbe. A pigeon inoculated with the living microbe of cholera had died a few hours previous to the visit. The dead pigeon was now opened, and from the heart an extremely small quantity of blood was extracted by means of a small glass tube. This was placed on a piece of glass and passed lightly through a spirit-flame by which the microbes were killed without being destroyed, being preserved by a chemical solution passed over the glass plate. The latter, about two-thirds of an inch square, was then placed beneath a very powerful microscope, when every blood-atom and cholera microbe were seen distinct and separated. "The cecillas or commas are the cholera," laughingly observed the doctor, as a ready and comprehensive explanation. Such, in fact, was the case. The blood-atoms were of a long cocoon shape, whilst the cholera germs had the form of a comma.

MESSRS. GEORGE WHITE and Co. write of Indian, Ceylon, and Java Tea as follows:—Indian: Although the quantity brought to auction has been about 6,000 packages less than during last week there has been a depressed tone, owing to the supplies being in excess of the demand. The sales have passed with marked irregularity, chiefly in favour of buyers, and a further decline has been established. Ceylon, in sympathy with Indian, has sold with less competition, and prices have given way for nearly all descriptions, Pekoe Souchong being 4d. per lb., Pekoe 4d. to 1d. per lb., and Broken Pekoe 1d. per lb. lower. A few "stand out" lots have, as usual, commanded attention, and prices have been better supported. Java: There have been 2,000 packages disposed of, as against 3,500 packages last week. The large quantity of tea from all quarters has affected these growths, and with fewer export orders previous quotations have not been maintained. Common to fair Pekoes especially being out of favour, as they compete with these classes of Indians, which are now fetching only 8d. to 8½d. per lb. Sales: The quantity offered during August on importers' account amounted to 90,253 packages of Indian (including 12,616 Old Season's), 33,907 Ceylon, and 7,532 Java.

Miscellaneous.

TEA CULTURE IN NATAL.—A blight attacked the coffee-trees in Natal a few years ago, which induced coffee planters to abandon that pursuit and to undertake the cultivation of the tea-plant instead. This experiment began in 1877-78, during which a few acres were planted with Ceylon and other varieties of Indian tea seed. The result proved so encouraging that the area of tea cultivation was rapidly enlarged. Mr. J. L. Hulett, M.L.C., the originator and father of the new industry, being so well satisfied with the prospects foreshadowed by his first efforts, determined to devote his entire time and attention to its development, and has since gradually increased the acreage of tea-plants on his estate (Kearsney) till now he has about 230 acres, 100 of which are in full yield this season. The yield of last year's crop was 54,000 pounds.

THE French Vice-Consul at Pakhoi states, in a report to his Government, that a project has been started for the laying down of a railway between Pakhoi and the iron and coal mines situated in the province, about sixty miles to the north of Pakhoi. The mines are, it appears, already being worked, and are very rich. A mandarin has been authorised to survey the route of the proposed line. Besides its utility as a means of further utilising these mines the railway, should it be constructed, will be of especial importance in opening up to our trade the southern and south-western provinces of China—Kwangsi and Yunnan especially. At present a good proportion of such commerce as exists between these provinces and the outer world passes through Pakhoi, and such a railway as that now proposed would tend greatly to stimulate the trade.

According to the report of Mr. Vice-Consul Cocoto there was a very visible increase in the shipping of the port at Brindisi last year. The tonnage of British shipping using the port during the year was 257,472 tons, of which the P. and O. Company contributed 163,879 tons, with 104 ships. The present year will show a further development both in the number of steamers and the aggregate tonnage. This will result from the modifications of the P. and O. Company's services consequent on their new mail contracts, which will, it is anticipated, produce an annual augmentation of from 100,000 to 150,000 tons of British shipping. The Italian Government, in addition to permitting all registered through baggage belonging to passengers from India to pass without customs examination, have now arranged for the examination of hand-baggage on board the P. and O. steamers immediately they obtain pratique, customs officers boarding the vessels for that purpose. The municipality have now paved two-thirds of the town of Brindisi, and begun paving the Marina, half of which is finished. By the end of this year the latter will be completed, as well as the principal streets, and the approaches to the two railway-stations. As the result of the dredging operations which have been carried on in the port since the spring of last year the largest ships of the P. and O. Company can now enter the inner harbour at any hour of the day or night, manœuvre under steam, and move alongside the quays without difficulty. Other operations are going on, and Mr. Cocoto suggests that the Government should dredge out the southern arm of the inner harbour to a depth of two metres. At present there are but a few inches of water, and in the summer the weeds grow above the water-level, the result of which is the generation of those malarious fevers to which the residents of Brindisi are subject.

ONE MISS LOTTIE GONSALVES has succeeded in obtaining a decree in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner of Tounghu for Rs. 600 against a Telegraph subordinate, named Henry Lawrence, as damages for breach of promise of marriage.

THE Deccan Times says:—Nawab-Mohsin-ul-Mulk Bahadur (Political and Financial Secretary), the Nizam's Commissioner to England for the settlement of the Deccan Mining Concession scandal and cognate matters, will leave England for India in the first week in October.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS was to leave Simla on a short tour on August 30, and after visiting Umballa, Roorkee, Bareilly, Naini Tal, Almora, Ranikhet, and various other stations, returns to Simla on September 15.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR INDIA.—H.M.S. Crocodile has been ordered to sail from Portsmouth for Bombay on the 19th inst. with a large number of reinforcing drafts for regiments serving in India. A large proportion of the men are for the cavalry corps, and are to be sent from the dépôt at Canterbury for the 1st Dragoon Guards at Rawul Pindee, the 2nd Dragoon Guards at Sealkote, the 3rd Dragoon Guards at Meerut, the 7th Dragoon Guards at Umballa, the 7th Hussars at Secunderabad, the 17th Lancers at Lucknow, and the 21st Hussars at Bangalore. The drafts for these regiments number 350, and the Crocodile will carry in addition over 700 non-commissioned officers and men for infantry battalions, the 2nd Battalion of the Rifle Brigade sending 154 for the 1st Battalion in Burma; the 2nd Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers, at Dover, 103 for the 1st Battalion at Jullundur; the 1st Battalion Royal Sussex, at Aldershot, 103 for the 2nd Battalion at Rawul Pindee; the 1st Battalion Devonshire Regiment, at Aldershot, 103 for the 2nd Battalion at Jhans; the 1st Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers, at Colchester, 124 for the 2nd Battalion at Rawul Pindee; and the 2nd Battalion Suffolk Regiment, at Aldershot, 93 for the 1st Battalion at Rawul Pindee. Amongst the officers going out by the Crocodile are:

—Majors Spance, 1st Dragoon Guards; Paley, 8th Hussars; C. Pigott, 21st Hussars; A. Ommanney, 1st East Kent; Captains H. Adams, Royal Irish Fusiliers; W. Rycroft, 7th Dragoon Guards; W. Burke, 2nd Yorkshire Light Infantry; Lieutenants Prince Adolphus of Teck and H. Noel, 17th Lancers; Oliphant and Vernon, Rifle Brigade; Sandinter, 5th Lancers; R. Herron, 2nd Dragoon Guards; H. Mercer and W. Robertson, 3rd Dragoon Guards; H. Lempriere, 7th Dragoon Guards; Grafton, 8th Hussars; P. Vigors, Rattray, and Lash, Devonshire Regiment; and C. Ross and Warburton, 2nd Norfolk.

We (Civil and Military Gazette) have no particular reason to be proud of the Pathans who provoked the general fight in the Bombay Dock with the Seedees; but rather to be thoroughly ashamed of them, and to hope that they do not belong to the Punjab. And, on the other hand, we must admire the Seedee, either for his forbearance or his courage in unavoidable battle; and after perusing the account of the riot, one cannot but extol their beating of the Pathans, and, perhaps, be secretly sorry that the damage was not more. A Seedee, the story goes, sought a water tap to drink from, and he was using it when two Pathans near at hand came forward and laid a prior claim to it. Their demand, in short, was that the Seedee should forthwith desist and stand aside till they were satisfied. But here the lamb turned upon the wolf, for though a Seedee is law-abiding, he is firm against wrong. On his disputing their claim, the Pathans unexpectedly tripped him up and—bolted! This was certainly judicious, however undignified; and the insulted Seedee followed and called upon them to face it out if they were men. But only two against one was desperate odds, and the brave Pathans sought the assistance of comrades, one of whom, who was armed with a log of wood, struck the Seedee down. And as he was then insensible, another Pathan seized the opportunity of pounding him on the chest with another billet of wood. Then other Seedees collected and chased the Pathans, who retreated upon the main body of Pathan workers. These rushed to arms again; but the few Seedees, indifferent about the odds, came calmly along and engaged them. The hard knocks they gave and received are written in the chronicles of the book of the Thana. It is worthy of note that many Pathans chose to be out of their way, and climbed aloft, whence they hurled missiles without pain from retaliation. Two Seedee rioters and seven Pathans were arrested. The Police Officer who interfered was respected by the Seedees whilst they continued the war. The Seedees have a tenderness for the law, but they fight on. In short, they have very good qualities, combined with much strength; and one's sympathies go very strongly with them on hearing that they are uncouth and exceedingly unprepossessing, which somehow tend to enhance their merits.

We (Indian Planters' Gazette) once again return to the charge of the want of reciprocity existing throughout the majority of railways in India with the Indian Turf. Each racing season vast sums of money are paid into the coffers of the directors of the various railway companies throughout the country by owners of race horses, race-goers, and the professional element who live by the Turf. In return for the swelling of their dividends through this instrumentality, the managements make no appreciable concession in their rates or arrangements. The State railways are more liberal, and do grant one single concession, viz., the conveying back to destination on their lines of all horses that have been certified to have started at the races of any specified meeting. Even this concession entails some annoyances. An owner counting on the prospect of bringing his horse back free on such a certificate books the animal for the single journey. For one or another of various reasons—perhaps the horse went wrong, the handicap weights precluded his accepting, &c.—the horse did not start, and consequently he was ineligible for the certificate, and he has to be taken back on full paid fare. We have numerous instances of such cases. We have more than once urged on the Calcutta Turf Club to move in the matter, and the only result of our agitation has been that a representation was made to the East Indian Railway, which has resulted in a concession of reduced rates for the carriage of horses certified as entered for the Calcutta Races. We do not care to go over old ground and repeat what we and other papers have urged as an obligation due by the Calcutta Turf Club to the racing fraternity. But we rely with every sense of confidence on the present Secretary of the Calcutta Turf Club realising the cogency of the question, and making a representation to the railway authorities. It is a question of Imperial significance, and individual railway companies should not be addressed. It is the Director-General that should be asked to move in the matter. We are sanguine Mr. Beresford will be able to draw up a statement or a "brief" that will not fail to enlist the sympathies and support of Colonel Conway-Gordon, whom we know to be a practical sensible man, and who is not likely to be biased by any traditional prejudices to strangling the proposal at its birth.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.*

It is not altogether pleasant for the average Briton to see how large a proportion of our periodical literature is devoted to the question whether the Empire be really safe from external attack, and to find that this all-important question is, by nearly everyone who knows what he is talking about, answered in the negative. Once rouse the country to a consciousness of the real state of defencelessness into which successive Party administrations, vying with each other in suicidal parsimony, have permitted England to drift, and there would be, not a hope only, but a certainty, that nothing would be grudged to realise Shakespeare's proud boast.

When, however, we come to the means of realizing it, we meet opinions so widely divergent that the wisdom proverbially said to exist in a multitude of counsellors seems evanescent. In the July number of the National, Sir S. Baker showed, in a vigorous article, the danger to which our defenceless state exposes us, and the risk of a panic in the country. And, in truth, nothing more disastrous could well be imagined, than that we should have to meet, and, if possible, to repel an invader—to whom the initiative as to time and place of attack belongs, and all whose plans would have been carefully laid—when the whole nation, and, probably, (for terror is singularly infectious) the Government, were panic-stricken. Captain Penrose Fitzgerald, in an article which, considering the importance of its subject, deserved a more prominent position, and which will receive general attention, points out that Sir S. Baker "has done good service" in insisting on this subject, though the gallant writer professes his inability to concur in all Sir Samuel's suggestions, especially as to the best means of employing mercantile steamers. In this, as in many other matters, the Declaration of Paris would, were we to observe it, compel us to fight with one hand tied, and we cannot help thinking that it would be better to denounce it at once than to do so, as we should be compelled to do, when war had commenced, or was imminent.

No better reply could well be given to many of the fictions, rarely of late even "founded on fact," for which we are indebted to Mr. Gladstone's imaginative powers, than a plain statement of facts. Acting on this principle, Mr. G. Alexander prints side by side, Mr. Gladstone's Crimes Bill of 1882, and that introduced by the present Government in 1887. The mere perusal of the two suffices to refute every objection made to the latter. We have never heard a satisfactory reason for the refusal of Mr. Smith to have the two bills printed in parallel columns before the Committee stage was entered last year, and have every ground to say that he was strongly urged to adopt this course. Mrs. Jeune's very interesting "Personal Recollections of Mr. Forster" tend to show what would have been the views (had he been spared) of "one of the best and noblest of Englishmen, one who loved his country, and who may truly be said to have spent his life in her service," concerning the recent factious and unpatriotic conduct of his former colleagues.

Indian readers will naturally turn to the article on "Our Position in Thibet," which occupies the first place in the present issue. In concluding an adequately complete historical review of our intercourse with Thibet—or, more accurately, "Bod"—Mr. Gundry brings before us the present state of affairs, which he thus summarizes:—"Either the Thibetans must withdraw, and frankly and finally withdraw, or we must drive them out before the summer is over: our prestige is already suffering by the delay; and, if China cannot, or dare not, untie the knot, we shall be obliged to cut it with the sword." Clear it is, that China cannot be allowed to "blow hot and cold," to claim all the rights, while repudiating all the duties, of sovereignty over Thibet.

Those who hold that the vast increase of population in England demands the completest exploitation of every means of production which Providence has accorded to us, will find much to instruct them in Mr. Bertram's account of "Oyster-growing in England, France, and America." At present prices, really good oysters are "caviar to the general." But few more nutritious articles of food exist; and any hint how, by increasing the supply, we may cheapen the product, deserves grateful recognition.

It is not without much regret that we are compelled to agree with Miss Lane Fox in the opinion that there is, at present, but little room for an English "National School of Opera." The fair writer, correctly enough, points to the senseless mania for employing third-rate foreign performers to the exclusion of better native artists. Everybody acknowledges, in theory, the utter absurdity of a preference, which nevertheless nearly everybody, in practice, displays; and the tendency to which it will need a long, and a hard, struggle to eradicate.

Every year increases the number of those who, whether with a view to utility, or to literary enjoyment, undertake the study of Spanish. (It may be remarked, parenthetically, that in the estimation of the German commercial world, it ranks after French and English only.) Yet few are acquainted with modern Spanish literature, which well repays close study. To works of fiction, in which all the glories of the virile, yet semi-Oriental, language, are displayed to the delight of the competent reader, Mr. Paul Sylvester's Paper, on "The Modern Spanish Novel," may be recommended as a safe guide, what to read and what to reject.

Mr. Percy Greg writes suggestively concerning the "Gates of Hades," the mysterious borderland between that which we know (or fancy we know) and that which, in a future state, we hope to "know, even as also we are known;" Mr. T. E. Kebbel ends a pleasant paper on "Partridge Shooting, old and new," with a few words anent the distressed condition of country gentlemen; and Professor Sayce gives, from personal experience, an entertaining account of "Story-telling in the East." It will be seen that the contents of the present excellent number are than usually interesting and varied.

HIS BESETTING SIN.*

It is a usual supposition that twin children are possessed, as a rule, with a more than ordinary share of mutual love and affection than falls to the lot of mortals who are not born two at a time. Mrs. Houston, however, paints the leading characters of her novel in quite a different light. One brother is a pattern of all that is high-minded, noble, and sweet; his every act inspires feelings of enthusiasm and admiration. But his brother is a complete contrast to this delightful picture of humanity. Naturally as sensitive to wrong, as unwilling to act meanly as was his twin companion, he allows feelings of envy to get the mastery over his better self; and, drifting from worse to worse, he becomes a dishonourable, contemptible character, despised, scorned, and loathed. Yet, withal, he is portrayed as a person not utterly dead to the dictates of conscience. Again and again higher instincts gain the sway, and when in the end he nerves himself up to a full and free confession of the wrongs he had inflicted upon his brother, the reader feels a sense of relief that a brand should have been snatched from the burning. Mrs. Houston has shown considerable skill in the delineation of a character which is not unfrequently to be seen in everyday life.

Nor are the other personages in the work without their share of interest. Lovely, charming girls flit across the scene "fast and furious;" most of them lovable and charming, some of them sweet to a degree, which occasions a sigh on the part of mortals not blessed with such very exquisite associates; some noble in adversity and heroic amidst the misfortunes of an embittered existence and a life of trouble and distress. The male portion of creation do not play an important part in the plot, with the exception, of course, of the twin brothers, round whom the tale revolves; there is, however, the villain of the piece, a low, detestable creature, from whom the reader recoils in disgust; and propriety seems outraged when in the end he is disposed of comfortably in the possession of a loving wife, who is too forgiving and nice for such a worthless, contemptible scoundrel.

Mrs. Houston may be congratulated upon the preparation of a very readable, pretty tale, which is not disfigured by gross allusions and coarse innuendoes; but—a reviewer must find fault—might she not take a little more care to be consistent? If Miss Cameron's eyes are dark blue, how can they resemble a ripe horse-chestnut from which the prickly husk has just fallen? Then, again, the use of foreign words is a little overdone; and, as to spelling—shade of Dr. Johnson!—at times what peculiarities:—"nice-est," is just a little funny. But we had forgotten that "orthographers" are a law unto themselves in these days of liberty and licence.

THE GREVILLE MEMOIRS.†

The eighth and concluding volume of the "Greville Memoirs" is in some measure more interesting than any of its predecessors, inasmuch as it deals with topics within the premeditation of the greater part of those who read the record which it contains. For instance, when it is stated with reference to Russia that "the part she has played for many years past has been that of a pacificator, and her only intervention has been to appease quarrels and resist the progress of democracy and revolution," who amongst us could not protest against an assertion so utterly out of accord with the views which many of us entertain as regards the "Colossus of the North," and her unscrupulous and bare-faced efforts to attain her own selfish ends, be the means what they may, and the results ever so disturbing to the welfare of the world at large?

Again, is it not a matter of more than passing interest that

* "His Besetting Sin." By Mrs. Houston. (J. V. White and Co.)

† "The Greville Memoirs." Vol. VIII. (Longmans, Green and Co.)

after the battle of Inkerman a very thick fog occurred which prevented the Russians from seeing their way, and induced them to mistake the position of the British Army? Had things been otherwise, and the enemy been able to execute their plans, the English could not have resisted them, and a defeat would have been the result, such as would have changed the destiny of the world.

Does it not, too, raise a smile of derision to learn that Disraeli "betrays in the House of Commons a sort of consciousness of his inferiority to Gladstone, and of fear of encountering him in debate." Fancy Dizzy afraid to cross swords with the Grand Old Man. This is just too delicious!

Prophecies are proverbially dangerous, but it does read rather strange in these days of submarine telegraphy that it is doubtful whether a cable across the ocean "can ever be completed." Perhaps, however, more odd than all is the account of the storm in a teapot which swept the political horizon, when thirty years ago the Government of the day made a "Life Peer." Then the whole nation bubbled up with indignation at such a measure, against which every argument under the sun was levelled. Now such a plan is propounded as one of the leading features of a reform of the House of Peers. A quarter of a century has effected a complete transmogrification in the world of politics.

The account of "Pam's" fall will be read with interest, if only as showing how fickle is fame, and how short-lived the glory of a public reputation, albeit the statue in Parliament-square, which has been erected to that plucky statesman, proclaims that he still lives in the national memory, and that courage is a quality which seldom fails to command admiration and to ensure success.

It is with considerable regret that we close these charming memoirs; the outline which we have from time to time placed before our readers can give at best but a faint notion of the varied information, the pleasant chit-chat, the quaint and out-of-the-way bits of history which peep forth at every page. The absence of scandal is, too, as far as right-minded persons are concerned, an additional attraction; while the careful abstinence from bitterness and malice completes the attractiveness of a work which stands forth in its line as one of the most entertaining and valuable publications of the nineteenth century of grace.

PARITY OF INDIAN GOVERNMENT PAPER WITH RUPEES.*

Mr. Ingle's tables, recently published under the title of "Parity of Indian Government Paper with Rupees," is useful to all persons who have to do with the "unfortunate rupee." It is not a work of a nature to be "reviewed," in the ordinary sense of the word; but we have much pleasure in calling attention to a compilation which is evidently the outcome of considerable care, and which must needs be of value to those for whose assistance it was prepared.

The September number of the Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) continues to supply to the Services papers of a highly instructive and interesting nature. Those by Captain Willoughby Verner on "Rapid Field Sketching and Reconnaissance," have already attracted attention, and are most favourably spoken of in military circles. The present issue contains a brief but able notice of a work on the Russo-Turkish War of 1877-78, by an officer of the Russian Guards, who served on the staff during the campaign. The book ("Ten Years Ago") has not yet been translated into English, but the editor of the magazine, who is an accomplished Russian scholar, gives his readers a very clear insight into its contents. The life of Suvoroff, by Colonel Spalding, keeps up its interest for the general as well as for the professional reader. Major General X. contributes a very readable paper on Bermuda, which is well illustrated, as is also Major Gambier Parry's continuation of his pleasant yachting cruise, in which he now touches upon Corfu and Albania. The Wanderings of a War Artist continue to be well written and well illustrated, and the story of Paris under the Commune is vigorously told. Altogether the September number of the magazine is an excellent one, both as regards letterpress and pictures.

Colburn's United Service Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) does not grow weaker as it grows older. Under its present able editor it gives to its numerous readers an excellent and varied series of papers, amongst which may be mentioned that on "The Efficiency of Infantry Fire," by Major C. B. Mayne, R.E.; "A New System of Signalling," by Helena Gullifer; and a criticism on the late Naval Manœuvres, by Rear-Admiral East. Colonel Cooper King brings his "Life of George Washington" to a conclusion, and Mr. Davidson continues his tale of an "Army Crammer." A paper which will well repay perusal is that on "The Use of Yachts as a National Defence," by A. G. Bagot. The present number (for September) has some very good editorial notes, and many readers will be pleased to find the chatty papers "On Leave" still to the fore.

The Art Journal for September contains a reproduction of Arthur Hacker's celebrated picture, "By the waters of Babylon." We are not as a rule much enamoured of "processes," but in this instance an exception must be made, for the picture is at once soft, delicate, and full of that life and refinement which characterises the original painting.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—As you have inserted the notice of Sir Syed Ahmad, informing the world that he intends to organise a society for the prevention of free speech in India, and for the isolation of his co-religionists from their Hindu fellow-countrymen, it is needful to call the attention of the future recipients of the pamphlets which he promises to scatter broadcast in England that the supporters of the Congress are numbered by thousands, while the supporters of Sir Syed's policy of stultification can, happily, be reckoned only by the dozen.

A few worthy, but timid, souls, totally misapprehending the nature and aims of the Congress, have been induced to discountenance it from mingled feelings of dread at every innovation, dread of offending the Government, and dread of the loss of exceptional privileges. Nothing can more aptly demonstrate the utility of the Congress than the opposition with which this small section of the people has greeted it. This opposition makes it clear that even among educated Indians there are some who have not risen above the narrow sectarian feelings of bygone ages, and who fail to recognise that the avalanche of critical thought has been set in motion, in the land of the Himalayas, by the upheaving force of science.

The capacity for criticism having been conferred on India nothing now remains but to guide it to useful objects. Efforts to oppose or strangle it are worse than futile; they are dangerous to the last degree. So far from benefiting the English régime and furthering the interests of his co-religionists Sir Syed Ahmad will only aggravate disunion, and embarrass the Government. For the peace of India let us hope that the learned Syed will insist on receiving his proposed subscription of five rupees per mensem. This will effectually limit his coadjutors in his career of mischief.

A FORTUNATE COLONY.—The Blue-book for the colony of Labuan during the past year gives the revenue at $20,005, and the expenditure at $20,167. An important item of the revenue is $3,000, the sum paid annually by the British North Borneo Company for the acceptance in Labuan of their bronze coinage as legal tender. The value of the imports was $370,751, which was less than that of any of the three previous years on account of a decline in the value of raw sago, while the exports amounted to $417,551, being an improvement on the previous year. All the public buildings in the colony appear to be in the last stages of dilapidation. The only public works carried out during the year were the repairs to Government House, which were far from complete when the report closed; the apothecary's is in such a ruinous state of disrepair that it is not worth keeping up; the prison is described as "on its last legs, and fit only to be condemned." The wall is merely kept up in some parts by wooden shores, and the interior accommodation is not safe for confining dangerous prisoners. The school, like the jail, is on its last legs; but in neither case does this seem to matter very greatly, as only nine persons were committed to prison during the year, and the Malays do not appreciate the value of education. There are no police in the country districts, the bulk of the population giving no trouble at all, and the thirteen members of the force are incapable of working up a case requiring investigation. Among the poorer classes there is no absolute poverty; "these persons seem happy and contented in their way, and give the Government no trouble whatever."

THE CLEANSING OF INDIA—II.

IN its desire to make India perfect in a sanitary sense the Government of India draws largely upon the bank of Hope—an excellent institution, but somewhat given to dishonour cheques drawn by the imagination upon it. The Resolution, which is intended to bring about the cleansing of India, says in grandiloquent terms that “the growth of the spirit of self-help and the perception of the advantages of sanitation in municipalities has in recent years been encouraging; and there is reason to think that the Government may with increasing confidence rely on the co-operation of municipal bodies in promoting sanitary reform.” This confidence in the co-operation of municipal bodies, after the extensive experience which the Government of India has had of the working of those bodies, is touching in the extreme. Notwithstanding the fact that since enlarged powers have been given to them the municipalities of the Presidency towns have done little but squabble amongst themselves, waste time and money, and hinder progress and improvement, the Government of India declares that it looks with “greater confidence to municipal committees for active assistance in carrying into effect the measures of sanitary improvement declared to be necessary for the towns over which they preside.” And then the Resolution goes on to say :—

In carrying approved sanitary measures into effect, it will be always essential to enlist the assistance and co-operation of the district authorities, which indeed are always available to Municipalities and Local Boards. Experience in India, as well as in other countries, has shown that, unless local executive agencies are carefully guided and controlled in sanitary matters, there is almost certain to be misdirection of energy and wasteful expenditure. As has been pertinently observed, “it is vain to hope that the numerous public bodies to which the sanitary administration of India has been committed will be found competent to discharge their important duties, so long as there is no competent authority possessing the necessary knowledge and armed with the necessary powers to assist their deliberations, guide their actions, and, when the occasion arises, correct their mistakes and remedy their inactivity. The district officers, who have generally shown themselves forward in promoting sanitary improvements and in co-operating with Local Boards in these matters, have neither the time nor the technical knowledge, nor the opportunities requisite for a comprehensive survey of the entire field of activity which is necessary for the discharge of the duties in question. It, therefore, appears to the Government of India to be eminently desirable that there should be established in each Province a Sanitary Board, through which the Local Government can operate.

These Sanitary Boards are to be composed of “an officer of approved administrative experience, the Sanitary Commissioner of the Province, and an officer of the Public Works Department skilled in sanitary engineering.” It might occur to ordinary minds, with some knowledge of India, that officers skilled in sanitary engineering are not in a multitude in the Public Works Department of that country; but the Government of India possesses evidently the confidence in itself which Owen Glendower boasted of when he declared his ability to call up spirits from the vasty deep, heedless of Hotspur's query, “But will they come?”

With the three officers constituting the Sanitary Board, the Resolution states that “there might be associated one or more non-official members appointed by the Local Government. Every Commissioner of Division in Northern India and Bombay, and possibly District Collectors in Madras, might also be ex-officio members of the Board when dealing with questions connected with their duties or districts. The duties of the Board would not, at all events for some time to come, be onerous, and could well be combined with the other and ordinary duties of the members.” This is quite too charming, but the full beauty of the scheme has yet to be disclosed. These local Boards “should, subject to the orders of the various Local Governments, be in constant communication with the Sanitary Commissioner, with the Government of India, whose advice upon large schemes of sanitary reform will always be useful, and who will be in a position to communicate to one Provincial Board the results of experience gained by another.”

The interchange of sanitary “experiences” is a delightful idea, but the Sanitary Commissioner is not to be left to advise or instruct by himself alone. He is to act under the general instructions of the Home Department, which “will exercise the functions of a general co-ordinating and consultative authority.” But this is not all—there is to be a further power capable of advising or instructing. “It may afterwards be necessary to associate with the Sanitary Commissioner an expert in sanitary engineering science, but this is a question which need not be raised in this place.” So says the Resolution; but possibly this question may be raised. If it requires so many persons to look after the cleanliness of India who will be really responsible for the dirt?

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

The following candidates for Her Majesty's Indian Medical Service were successful at the Competitive Examination held at Burlington House on August 20, 1888, and the following days; 22 candidates competed for 4 appointments; 19 were reported qualified.

MADRAS and Bombay are to share proportionately in the distribution of Martini-Henry rifles to the Native army. Some four regiments of Infantry in those presidencies have already been re-armed. At least thirty regiments, all in India, will be given the Martini by the end of the year.

THE Lahore paper writes:—There has been another severe struggle between Umra Khan of Jundol and Sabdar Khan, Shamoza, in which the latter was defeated with heavy loss. Umra Khan is said to have taken possession of the principal fort of the Shamoza at Kulala, while Sabdar Khan, with his forces, has retreated to another stronghold, a few miles away from Kalol. Thither Umra Khan has now pursued him with a strong force, and has surrounded the fort.
